Doukhobor Farmer Found Wounded

DOUKHOBOR IS FOUND KNIFED NEAR YORKTON

Second Sensational Incident Following Court Case.

COURT TRIALS

Veregin Held on Charge in Connection With Perjury Case

Yorkton, Sask., Feb. 1—Peter P. Chebotoff, Veregin District Doukhobor farmer, is near death here today, his throat slashed by a knife in the second sensational incident following a court case here last week in which Doukhobors were concerned.

Police found Kabotoff lying on the ground between two buildings in the downtown business section early today his clothes were saturated with blood and he was unconscious when a five inch gash across his throat.

Saturday afternoon Peter Veregin leader of the 15,000 members of the Christian community of universal brotherhood, Doukhobors in Canada, was arrested as he walked from the courthouse after testifying at preliminary hearing of George Kabakoff on a perjury charge.

Veregin is charged with unlawfully attempting to dissuade Wasyl P. Konkin, complainant from giving evidence in a civil case in which the complainant was a witness by threats.

Konkin, who laid the information resulting in arrest of the Doukhobor chieftain, is a nephew of Kabakoff.

Yorkton, Sask., Feb. 1.—Peter Veregin, head of 15,000 Doukhobors in Canada and more than that number in Russia, is in trouble with the law. The picturesque head of the Christian community of universal brotherhood was arrested here Saturday charged with attempting to dissuade a witness from giving evidence by threats.

The trouble is another stage in the bitter internal struggle which has been raging in the Doukhobor ranks for years between the orthodox or majority faction headed by Veregin and the small group which style themselves "sons of freedom." This struggle has been responsible for the burning of schools and other buildings in Doukhobor communities during the last few years in Nelson, B.C., more than 100 of the "sons of freedom" were jailed at one time following disturbances.

The charges against Veregin, although ordinarily the Doukhobors try to avoid recourse to the public courts, Veregin here is the first evidence at the preliminary hearing of George Chutakoff whom he had charged with perjury.

Kabotoff arrived here Thursday to give evidence in the Chutakoff hearing. He had been rooming with Wasyl Lubsehenoff, another Doukhobor, during the period of investigation.

Apparently in a highly nervous state, he almost fainted Saturday while giving evidence in the witness stand and in the evening complained of feeling ill.

Lubsehenoff said Kabotoff left his room about six this morning and shortly afterward was discovered terribly wounded by Constable T. Coulson and H. Tunstall-Ellis. He held a pocket knife in his hand.

Potato Embargo May Not Be Lifted

EAST FLORENCEVILLE, N.B., Feb. 1.—(CP)—Referring to the embargo, Premier Bridges said: "There is just the barest possibility of anything something, but I am not very hopeful," said Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, High Commissioner for Canada, in a letter he wrote B. P. Smith, M.P., St East Florenceville, with reference to efforts of Canadian representatives, who are now in England attempting to secure removal of the embargo on potatoes from the Dominion.

No Cause Anxiety Over Missionaries

London, Feb. 1—A cable from the Rev. Donald Rees, British Wesleyan missionary and one of the secretaries of the National Christian Council of China in Shanghai, today said "there is no cause for anxiety. All is quite safe in Shanghai."

The message, sent for the benefit of missionaries' relatives was considered reassuring because of the reported bombing of the districts outside the International Settlement in which many missionaries are living.

ALL STOCKS UP 3 TO 5 POINTS

Important Announcement Before Opening Has Effect

New York, Feb. 1.—The stock market made extensive progress in moderate trading today.

The announcement of the ten per cent. railway wage reduction and ordering of the regular extra dividend of 25 cents by Standard Oil of N. J. were tangible bullish developments and speculators continued to bid up aircraft and chemical stocks on the basis of developments in the Far East.

Advances of 3 to 5 points appeared in issues at U. S. Steel, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, American Can, American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Coca Cola and Eastman. Speculative efforts to discount "war boom" gossip brought two point advances in such issues at United Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Atlas Powder and Hercules Powder. Other shares making similar gains included Southern Pacific, New York Central, Packard and of N.J., Bethlehem Steel, McKesport, Cast and Liggett and Myers B. Transactions up 4 points or more included General Motors, General Electric, Johns Manville, Cerro de Pasco, Curtis-Wright A., and Loew's.

Talk of a war boom was regarded with incredulity, for it was pointed out that the financial position of the Far Eastern countries could scarcely be regarded as favorable to prolonged, large scale hostilities. Some observers felt, however, that as far as the aircraft issues and steel issues were concerned, the Eastern developments might impair the prospects for future business.

If a war boom were developing it was explained that evidence of the ferrous metal prices was indeed paradoxical. Both copper and zinc quotations were off. Copper was quoted at 6¾ cents off ½ of a cent, and lead, a great consumer, buying was at a low ebb.

The railway wage announcement was regarded in several quarters as a bullish development in the railway bonds. Usually well informed quarters in Wall Street looked for early steps to be taken by the carriers in substantial volume, in view of the large amount of orders likely to be placed in the next fortnight running into the 250,000 tons was regarded as probable.

TAKE SUSPECT AT MINTO, MAN.

Elma, Man., Feb. 1 (CP)—With the suspected slayer in custody word reached here today of the death of the last of the seven members of the household of Mathew Watson to succumb to mental murders in the criminal annals of Western Canada, Mrs. Watson, wife and mother was stabbed, beaten or shot on Friday morning. The slayer set the house on fire, barred the door and left.

When neighbors broke down the door and came to bring out several of the victims but with the exception of the youngest of the family, all were dead or died within a few hours. Paul was taken to a Winnipeg hospital by the special train which brought a posse of provincial police in search for the killer and died today.

Royalty at Church Awaits Bride in Tears

Irer, Buckinghamshire, Feb. 1.—Wedding guests waited 15 minutes in the little country church on Sunday for a bride who finally arrived in tears.

Capt. Roberts Doyne of the Oxford and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry, the bridegroom, was there on time and so were Princess Victoria, the King's sister, and Princess Alice, Countess Athlone.

A quarter of an hour after the ceremony was to have begun Miss Verna Seymour, daughter of Lady Blanche Seymour, arrived, weeping. She dried her tears, however, and went through the ceremony with a smile. No one tried to explain the incident.

NO REDUCTION ON MILK PRICE IS SEEN HERE

Low Cost Basis Has Been in Force Here For Months

TORONTO PRICE

Distribution Costs Here About as Low as They Can Be Cut

Local distribution of milk in Belleville has been placed for some time upon a low basis in order to give the consumer milk at eight cents a quart. Though Toronto prices dropped today from eleven to ten cents a quart as a result of a meeting of the distributors whose decision was accepted by the producers, no change in price below the eight cent line is expected in Belleville.

Generally speaking distributors hereabouts have been paying the farmers about 3½ per hundred, and in addition the producer is given a bonus for better quality. The cost of the distribution of milk cannot be cut down very much" said Mr. Howard J. Clark of the Citizens' Dairy today.

The local milk situation is peculiar in that little or no milk is shipped from here to Toronto. With shipped from here to Toronto. With the cheese factories for the summer and the heavy consumption of milk in the city throughout the year, the farmer producers have a steady market and so have the advantage of the competition for cream there has been no disastrous to ship.

Toronto distributors have been extending milk routes along the highways and were even picking up milk from as far east as Brighton. North of Toronto and in Western Ontario the same development has been taking place and there is little opportunity for any new company to ship into Toronto. In the city of Toronto the keenest competition rules among the distributors.

In Eastern Ontario there is said to be a large surplus of milk which is drawn from farmers at about the price paid for milk for cheese, and a portion of this is separated and dried, so that it may be sold to the European markets at a low price. Sweet cream is made into butter or is sent into Toronto. Several trucks of the latter go eastward to Toronto every night.

The old price in Toronto was $1.85 per hundred-weight and this is now down to $1.65. Present the reduction was made but one thousand farmers on the fluid milk route got the reduction. It is possible that the truckers in Toronto area will be asked to share some of the loss. Several truckers have organized a protective association in the past few months and it is believed that they will look forward to Toronto every night.

AUTHORITY AND LIBERTY

Peculiar Combination is Shown in Church of England

New York, N.Y., Feb. 1.—The Anglican Church has kept pace with the enlightment achieved during the last 50 years by enabling men and women to understand the old faith in terms of the twentieth century, said Rt. Rev. P. F. Smith, Bishop of The Diocese of Long Island, in sermon Sunday at High Mass in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church.

He said unlike many churches, Episcopalians have preserved a remarkable combination of two apparently contradictory elements between authority and freedom between congregations and their leaders.

FIVE OUNCE EGG LAID IN CITY

Over Two and Half Times Weight of Average Egg

A hen owned by a resident of the west end of the city laid an egg that tipped the scales at 5½ ounces on Saturday—its—decision—was—announced—after—considerable discussion in the hen yard—the rooster strutted and crowed—the pullets looked on in disapproval—the hen herself raised the cackling of their sister and it was all due to a note wrapped around the daily round of the flock. The householder's commotion and investigation he discovered that the morning hen had laid an egg, but in this instance it was "some egg" it weighed five ounces and was the size of a large goose egg. The next day this same hen again excelled itself laying an egg which weighed three ounces and once more there was great rejoicing in the hen yard—the pressing hen stepped about a haughty, superior way in the attitude of the other hens however was not considered by them. The rooster put forth its best effort in crowing as though he were the hero of both the exceptional events.

The average weight of the hen's eggs is said, the scales at two ounces. Sometime in into celebration the West 'Hill hen and the flock to which it belongs, have an excitement in egg laying to be proud of. The fowl is a black Minorca.

STANDARD OF LIVING HIGH

Per Capita Consumption in Canada Higher Than in Most Countries

According to the department of trade, of the Dominion of Canada situated at Ottawa, the standard of living in Canada continues high. Figures bring out the fact Canadian families have been greatly aided by the drop in the cost of living. The average daily consumption of a Canadian family of five women and children is: two ounces of bread, two and one half pounds of meat, five cups of tea, one half ounces of butter, about an ounce of cheese, three ounces of sugar, pounds and about five cents worth of canned goods.

The per capita consumption each year of the Canadian people are: 135 gallons, there being 58,094,552 gallons officially consumed in Canada last year. Of this amount there was consumed were 4,716,386 gallons or 45 gallons per capita; wine 1,000,000 gallons per capita with 6,713,000 gallons officially used in Canada during 1931.

These statistics show that the average Canadian citizen lives very highly and that the living conditions in this country are somewhat better than in other countries, who have recently released their statements regarding the average yearly consumption per capita in their respective countries.

RAIN, MISTS, CONCEAL FATE

No Trace Yet Found of Pacific Air Flier in California

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 1.—Ugly clouds, driving rain and freezing cold in their path, whirled with blizzard force over the lonely Tehachapi mountain range today, concealing within their mists the fate of five men and two women missing flew into a storm last Friday aboard the United States mail plane, and vanished.

Meanwhile, upon the ground, raw boned mountaineers, aeroplane pilots, State Highway Police and sheriff's officials watched the storms from three vantage points, hoping for a break before plunging into the snowbound wilderness to resume the search for the eight now believed dead.

Mountain residents have told searchers that the plane appeared in trouble which appeared over that section Friday afternoon.

Winter Weather Causes 3 Deaths

New York, N.Y., Feb. 1—At least three persons were victims of bitter cold, the weather bureau said, in the three days has touched nearly all sections of the United States.

John Taylor, a 14 year old Boy Scout of Dee, Ore., was found frozen to death in the foothills of Baker. Blood was in his head gone alone to hunt. Two men froze to death in Minnesota, William Seifert, 67, in the plant, a gasoline station and Emil Hill, 50, in an open field near Saginaw.

FRENCH PROTEST

French Protest Registered Today

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—France formally notified the Washington Government today of its co-operation with British, United States and Italian complaints against the Shanghai situation precipitated by Japan. It was indicated, however, that any military activity directed from Paris would be confined to defense of French quarters in the seaport.

SHANGHAI, China, Feb.,

Chinese in Shanghai boiled with indignation today at reports that Japanese warships had shelled Nanking, killing many under the protection of gunfire from destroyers.

Thirty thousand of the finest troops in all China were there, and any military activity directed from Paris would be confined to defense of French quarters in the seaport.

Machine gun bullets from a Japanese destroyer whipped through the United States owned Texaco oil plant on the Whangpo River, and a Japanese Marine patrol in the Hongkew district ripped down the United States flag over a school for Chinese boys.

No one at the Texaco plant was hurt but company officials lodged a protest with the United States consul.

One representative of the company said some Chinese firecrackers set off a bunca of firecrackers and the Japanese destroyer probably thought it was being fired upon.

Dr. John Hawk, director of property owned by the United States Methodist Episcopal Church South, reported that Japanese marines had invaded the school for Chinese boys which the mission operates in the

In honor of the centennial of the coming of this pioneer family Miss Hastings, a reunion of the Campbell family branches is to be held on July 31st and August 1, 1932, at Rollin. Already names of many descendants of the family have been listed and many more are expected to be added to the list of those who will visit the old scenes where for a century the name of Campbell has been a tradition.

On Saturday an executive meeting was held at the home of Mr. Wm. Campbell, Rollin. This visit was attended by Dr. William Mathieson, of Toronto, as chairman of the committee. Miss L. Pearl Campbell, 113 George Street, secretary-treasurer; D. F. Leslie, of Rollin; W. M. Leslie and William and Alex Moore of this city. They proceeded to prepare the program for the reunion in the summer.

This will be the first gathering of the kind held by the Campbell family.

Disarmament Parley May Not Achieve Effective Reduction

OPENS TUESDAY

Special Session of League May Be Called to Talk on Shanghai

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 1.—The World Disarmament Conference—more properly, the first general conference for the limitation upons lessening in the shadow of undeclared war.

Never did a great conference begin less auspiciously. Delegations gathered to discuss the reduction of armaments are eagerly seeking the latest news from Shanghai. Every national headquarters bubbled today with developments in the far east, with the question of what Japan is doing and how far she intends to go.

For much here are to be intimates the danger of a far eastern conflagration already in full swing. It is taken as almost a foregone conclusion that it will —unless there is some almost miraculous clearing of the situation—prevent the conference achieving effective reduction of armaments.

Need For Security

Still greater stress is likely to be laid on the need for security. And France is expected to give added emphasis to her old position, that International treaties in themselves are bulwarks, but they must be backed by International force.

All the delegations are busy today with the question. With a few Canadian delegates met under the chairmanship of Sir George Perley Minister without Portfolio, to discuss the situation. This afternoon they meet the British delegation and other Empire delegates.

Sir John Simon, British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, is detained in London by the session in the far east. He has been temporarily replaced on the disarmament delegation by J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, and on the Council of the League by Viscount Cecil of Chelwood.

Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese Minister, obviously much troubled, was an early caller in the British headquarters.

It is reported a special assembly of the League may be summoned to discuss the question of Shanghai. And there are 11 Japanese delegations of the Little Entente are talking reparations.

TAX INCREASES ARE EQUITABLE

Premier Taschereau Says All Classes Must Be Relieved

Montreal, Que., Feb. 1. — (CP)— Tax increases proposed by the Quebec Government were "equitable" Premier L. A. Taschereau stated after the week-end following interviews with a number of delegations from various municipalities. "It must be realized," the Premier said, "that present conditions are exceedingly difficult for governments as well as the people and that there are thousands of citizens who, unemployed and poverty-stricken or making a bare living, helped. This is a time for co-operation not criticism, and the measures proposed by the government to bring revenue for a treasury depleted by constant demands for aid are most necessary ones."

FAREWELL PARTY

Deseronto, Feb. 1.—To pay tribute to the splendid services rendered by Mrs. Gordon Hall in her capacity as the several departments of the United church, and to bid her welcome upon the occasion of the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Hall from Deseronto, a large number gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tunnicliffe on Wednesday night to say "Au Revoir" and to enjoy a social evening. The departments represented at the function were the Womens' Association and the choir. Mrs. Hall during her residence in Deseronto has been one of the most faithful members of the choir, and on many occasions, in solo work particularly has contributed greatly to the success of song. She has also taken a leading part in the Women's Association, and it goes without saying that her removal will be a great loss to the church.

Very enjoyable was the social part of the evening. There was a splendid program and contests.

At a very appropriate moment, an address was read by Mrs. (Rev.) W. D. Harrison, expressing the regrets of the members of the church in the severance of the happy ties which have existed so long, and on behalf of these organizations Miss Beatrice Joyce presented a gift to Mrs. Hall with a beautiful hymnary. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hall voiced their appreciation in brief addresses and regretted leaving so many friends, yet at the same time they would not be far away, and they hoped to visit Deseronto often. Refreshments were served at the close.

Mr. Hall who has been in the Dominion Bank has accepted a position with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Belleville, and Mrs. Hall will reside for their new home on Thursday.

Transients' Song

"Give us a tune," the transients cried;
"A tune on your old guitar,
"Make us forget with your music and song
"Just how weary and hungry we are."

While the wandering fraternity of hitch hike tourists and fellow brake rod riders who were present in the city dug-out for transients last evening when the wandering minstrel with his guitar slung on his shoulder entered, may not have put their request for entertainment in the above manner, nevertheless they did prevail upon the itinerant musician to play for them at the old time stove in the corner. While he softly strummed the instrument he sang in a low voice all the opening leads and at the chorus of each sob the listening hitch hikers would in turn join in there helped out with a hearty co-operation that while it may have been a little sticky in spots and not quite up to the standards of a first-class program, nevertheless made up for its off color by such a volume of sound that left no doubt as to its genuineness. It was a social night in the dug-out and all dull care were cheerfully buried. Tonight they made merry because tomorrow they would fly.

Falling Temperature With Wind Chills City Houses

Snow Flurries Only Mark Sunday Morning Gale

ICE MEN READY

A frigid gale sweeping down from the west at a velocity variously estimated by neighborhoods between forty-five and fifty miles per hour, and bringing with it almost zero temperatures, descended over the city and district early Saturday afternoon and continued on throughout the week end with undiminished fury until late Sunday evening.

Swinging signs, loose shingles and large areas of roofing paper were torn from their moorings or down town buildings and whirled throughout the streets of the city to the annoyance of numerous citizens who hurried along with coat collars up around their ears casting apprehensive glances at the flying objects.

On the bay large white caps foamed and tossed as the blizzard shrieked and raged over the inconvenient waters so agitated that all possibility of ice forming was precluded in the exposed areas, although in the more sheltered bay harbor and along the shore line in the coves and nooks, several inches of ice is clear and solid enough for the numerous skaters who took advantage of the week end holiday and the cessation of the wind anchor which has held the ice fields down in the river and jamming against the piers, to get in a few hours' practice on the now quiet water assumed a more definite shape and constantly increasing depth. Temperatures which was occurring until today the depth as high by 10 degrees in the river as to support the weight of a man. The funeral took place this afternoon at one o'clock from the funeral parlors of Tickell and Browne the services there and at the grave-side being conducted by the Rev. A. L. Geen.

MISS MARY ANN LYNCH

The death occurred this Monday forenoon, of Mary Ann Lynch, eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Lynch, at the family residence, Bath road. Miss Lynch, the late Miss Lynch had been in indifferent health for the past two years, and her death has been anticipated for some time. She was born in Belleville, educated in the Separate School system, and high school, and lived all her life in this city. She was a loved and christian character, a devout and faithful communicant of St. Michael's Church, she was ever active in the women's organizations of that congregation. Miss Lynch was known to a large circle of friends and acquaintances in the city and will be sorrowfully missed by them.

Five sisters besides the parents predeceased her. Remaining to mourn the death of a loved and cherished sister are Mrs. A. O'Loughlin, of Lindsay; Mrs. J. Phelan of Ottawa, and Misses Margaret and Josephine at home.

LATE MRS. ST. CHARLES

A large number were in attendance this morning at St. Michael's Church at the funeral of the late Mrs. James St. Charles, for universally manifest the love, esteem and respect in which she was held by her friends and acquaintances in the community.

At 8.30 o'clock the funeral left her late residence, 31 Bleecker Street, and proceeded to the church where Solemn Mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock by Rt. Rev. P. F. Nicholson, V.G., being celebrant assisted by Rev. Father Kennedy, P. Chicago, Ill., and Rev. H. J. Madden. Present on the Sanctuary were Rev. S. A. Corrigan and Rev. F. Whalen of Trenton. At the offertory Mr. Ed. Brown sang "Nearer My God to Thee," a favorite hymn of the deceased. Rev. John E. Burke, C.S.B., officiated at the graveside in Belleville cemetery.

THREE SERVICES FOR C. G. I. T.

Week Has Been Fittingly Observed By Girls in Training

The Canadian Girls in Training Week came to a close yesterday, during the observance of the week special thought was given by the members of the C.G.I.T. to their education and the parents of the girls attended the C.G.I.T. service incident in the work.

Three Sunday special services were conducted for the groups connected with the Tabernacle and Bridge Street United churches, the special service was held in the morning at Bridge Street Church, St. Andrew's Church and Holloway Street Church with the groups associated with these congregations.

At John Street

At John Street Church the special preacher for the occasion was the Rev. A. J. Wilson, B.A., of Grace United Church, Napanee, who spoke on the "Christian Message to the world today and called upon the Canadian Girls in Training to take a firm stand and to work for the betterment of these condition.

The service was in keeping with the nature of the service and Miss Sylvia Tait and Miss Marie Dunlop members of the group, sang in a very pleasing manner a duet, the words of which expressed the theme of the service and were:

"Let there be shall be a loftier race
Than ere the world has known before
With flame of freedom in their souls
And light of knowledge in their eyes."

The members of the Boys' Club connected with the church were also present in a body at the service.

St. Andrew's

At the morning service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, the Canadian Girls in Training were associated with that congregation were present for their special service. A very interesting and helpful address was delivered by the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Seymour on the subject of "Womanhood".

The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Nora Tait, a member of the St. Andrew's group of the C.G.I.T. Girls of the group acted in taking the offering.

The service throughout was bright and very interesting.

At Holloway

In Holloway Street United Church the week of the C.G.I.T. was a very impressive service on Sunday morning. Preceded by the choir the girls marched in a body to the front pews of the church. The girls in their C.G.I.T. costumes looked very attractive. Miss Jean Moorman, leader of the junior group, Dorothy Brown and Leona Shepard, presidents, took their places in the platform with Rev. Harold B. Neal. Dorothy Brown recited the call to worship "O come let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord, our Maker." Miss Jean Moor man lead in the invocation. The second Scripture lesson, Luke 2:40-52 was read by Leona Shepard. The C.G.I.T. girls took up the offering. Rev. H. B. Neal took as his theme "Life's Choices" and urged especially the importance of choosing the best. The whole service was very impressive and full of helpfulness.

Bland Chinese Smile Greets Curious Reporter

While their country may be in a state of real war with their ancient enemies of the land of the Mikado, and although their brothers in that faraway land are the midst of a national jam due to untoward excitement or agitation is apparent among the citizens of Chinese in the only the bland smile and enigmatic look that has characterized their race since it began greets the newspaperman when they are questioned to find their true feelings toward the subject. Repeated assertions to questioners that only asked the information that they "no speak English"—believe it or not.

Whether there are any reservists in this city or not who may be called to China to fight for the emperor, or whether any have left already, is something that is difficult to ascertain. They have had their meetings and possibly the war has been discussed and rehashed by them over and over again, but they speak in the language of their fathers and no statement has been made available for publication. So large centres possibly they have thrown some light on the subject and have come to the conclusion that more freely, but in this city there is nothing to be said.

ELEBRATE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

n Tuesday, January 26, 1932, and Mrs. J. F. Bird, of Wallbridge celebrated their fiftieth wedd anniversary in the presence of ut fifty guests.

Guests began to clock their minis- Rev. E. B. Sexsmith took the ge and presided at a short pro me. Mr. B. Bird, only son gave a address of welcome, in which thanked the guests for their ence and felt, he said, that there was a mark of respect his father and mother. Other tokens were Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Jr., Mrs. Wm. Bird, brother of the host, and Mrs. Bird, sister of the hostess, besides Mr. Wm. mes, Mr. Bread, Mr. J. Wilson, Mr. Oscar Taylor and Mr. D. man, also the son-in-law, Ivan Hyde. Those who paid ibute to the couple of fifty years ried life. Mr. F. J. Bird replied making his guests for their pre- very kind remarks and good wish- In his reply the aged bridegroom ed strongly the need and joy of igious faith.

A thoughtful part of programme in the reading of the original ver- Bird's father, which showed ir religious faith, which had the Bird home.

The address of bond was read Mrs. D. Hyde as follows:

"Fifty years ago one of the Belle- ng papers announced the mar- ralled in the bonds of Holy Mat- mony, Frederick Bird, second ne- ssession of Thurlow, Hastings unty, and Harriett Thrasher, the ird daughter of the late Huntington rwship, Hastings county. The riage service was performed by e Rev. J. Sheldon Young. After e reception, which was graced by short honeymoon, to be spent efly in Madoc village.

"The life of the bridegroom was ready a member of the Wesleyan Methodist church, which church, obably it would be more correct y, of the Methodist Episcopal ongregation, for as yet there was church of the Methodist Union in the bridegroom's own team of orses which drew the first load of ick for that church. Until ur day the brick church at Belle- y stands as a living testimonial the power of The Old Fashioned ethodist Revival. For it was built the result of an eight week spec- l service carried on by Samuel ilmot, and Abel Hemmlyn, both the Stone Church here. Into s new church the young bride- couple came with great gladness as he thought of a church in which worship God.

"Like all skilful wives, the bride fifty years ago left her own ch. The Methodist Episcopal- ed the Wesleyan body with her husband. In looking back at the ny days of Church Union, this od couple assured us that there as much heart feeling between the EPs and the Wesleyans. And id Mr. Bird: "This feeling of al- ost blissful contentment for or- ve years after the Union was con- mmated." "There was," he added th a smile, "little real difference between the two Methodist bodies, t very few people who could tell ou what that difference was, yet knew that they almost hated ach other. These were the days of great Religious revivals. Ah, for ear that old fashioned Gospel ower.

"Once ye sinners poor and needy Weak and wounded, sick and sore Jesus ready stands to save you Full of pity, love and power- ning, and then see you here and here making their way to the Pen- tent Form, and to experience con- ing within one's very soul and ife which could not be destroyed. owever it was the work of these arly Revivals which made the istinction between the early Meth- ist Bodies, not only lasting, but olid and fruit bearing.

"The Bridal Couple began their ife life in the Church and what better still, they have never left it. Always in the stronger days of ife, Mrs. Bird was a most en- husiastic Missionary worker. And was in connection with this work hat our Society here at Wallbridge ve years ago, found her a life ember of the Women's Mission- ry Society. Mr. Bird on his part as been an office bearer in some hurch. At first nearly sixty years go, and shortly after the Union- ation at stazen, he was a Sunday chool teacher at Salem, and be- ame in a honoured member of the official Board of the Bidner Church. Many reminiscences, tinged with humour lighted the faces of this people as they were giving a bit of heir past. One was in connection ith the first car that went through hose roads. It was owned by Dr. ach Faulkner, who drove with his ar all off and went for "dear life". Horses and particularly old ladies, ere much frightened by the "de- il hard times", said Mr. Bird, ere hard times then. But never- heless they didn't make so much noise bout them as they do now." oreover the farmer paid to his hurch even if he had to borrow money to do it. "I remember one ear distinctly when there was no ain for sixteen weeks and when a hole day's pouring of peas only fil waggon box." We sold hogs for our cents a pound and cheese for ents. "But I must confess that in hose days the Governments had ot found out so many ways to tax he farmers." However we can truly ay that in all these years the word roken by Genesis has not failed. While the earth remaineth spring- time and harvest shall not cease."

About twenty-five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Bird moved into Sidney. They lived nearly two years near Belleville, and the other twenty-five in their home at Wallbridge, in this home, we today, they children, grandchildren, relatives, and friends have come to bring our best wishes on this anniversary of their years married life. We are glad that they have thought of us all and that they have invited us to be with them. We all wish them the happiest years of the days, and pray that whenever the "Sweet chariot swings low" it may "carry them home", and there that they shall,

"Rest forever after earthly strife, In the calm bliss of everlasting Life."

The programme was brought to a close by singing "Good Be with You till we meet again," and fol- lowed by Prayer by Rev. R. J. Smith. After which a dainty buffet luncheon was served, and enjoyed by all.

The guests present were:

Mr. and Mrs. D. Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. S. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. J. Her- bertson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. H. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. B. Redner, Messrs Malcolm and Clarence Bird, Miss Florence Bird, Mrs. M. Bread, Madoc, Mr. and Mrs. F. Howe, Mr. and Mrs. C. Wilson and Mr. J. Wilson, Mr. Earl Bird, Mr. and Mrs. D. CALL ME RED

by Paul Hawk

Elsie carrying her heavy travel-dark hall. I just know he was lis- lug, looked up at the rambling tening in on me. I thought he was white house that was to be her home for a long time. It was a beautiful old place surrounded by spacious grounds, and it seemed to be a per- fect setting for the gay which an- nounced in Old English letters— Mrs. Hudson Hennessy and Miss Jessie Hennessy.

She crossed the wide veranda and entered an oak panelled hallway. Mrs. Hudson met her and her a dancing class was being held. Muted sounds of piano came to her from various parts of the house. She went into the office on the right.

"I'm Miss Chesterton," she an- nounced in her clear voice.

"And I'm Mrs. Wilson," said that lady. She was little and energetic as befitted the business manager of such a large school. "I'm glad you are here, you certainly quite a large class of beginners for you. Come, girl! Show your self to your room, get settled today, and tomorrow you start work."

The single living room and work room—was on the third floor.

"Some time to myself, Chesterton," Mrs. Wilson told her, "that it's the first thing you must have. Understand it's not to make you nervous or anything, but, although I hate to mention it, I must in fair- ness to the pay about all our instructors. And I'm not complimenting myself, I stand for any disturbing noise. So you'll have to be quiet. French Exhibition Draws Huge Crowds London, (by Thomas T. Champ- lon, Canadian Staff writer)— "These days art lovers from all ov- er England and from overseas flock off on doubt, are flocking to Burl- ington House. At this great cen- ter of the fine arts, the exhibition on exhibition more than a thousand of the finest specimens of French art in pictures, tapestries, reliquar- ies, church ornaments, and the like, been gathered from pretty well all over the world.

The King has lent Phillips de Champaigne's portrait of Richelieu from Buckingham Palace, the Duke of Devonshire has temporar- ily released some of the gems from the galleries of Chatsworth, the Duke of Westminster has sent pic- tures from Eaton Hall, and half a dozen other noble lords contribute their example. The Louvre and other famous museums and many churches of France have added their quota; not a few rare speci- mens have been borrowed from gal- ers in America, Germany, Belgium and other countries.

No doubt it will surprise some holders to learn that the 17th cen- tury picture of Richard the Second by Herr Hanel, Gentleman in Or- bey. Roughly speaking the exhibi- tion has been brought together by collection is work of the 18th and 19th centuries. It is an introductory note to the Catalogue, by G. Con- stable writes:

"The break-up of great French collections consequent upon the Re- volution gave new opportunities to English collectors, which were apt- ly taken. A new generation of artists were ready to learn from their acquisitive tastes. And the 19th Century French art may be assign- ed to a decisive share in the rise of modern landscape painting. Soon England was to be the scrapheap of the debt she had incurred."

Writing in the Daily Telegraph R. R. Tatlock says: "French art his- tory is continuous, because it has relations, in time, with former cen- tury, to contemporary life. In most other countries the artist has often tended rather to close his eyes to the things around surrounding him and has indulged in day-dreams about the past, or has invented the realms of literature, poetry and ev- en music."

JUMPS WITH CANOE TO WATER 50 FEET

Paris, Feb. 1 (Canadian Press Cable)—Thousands of Parisians re- gained a holiday spirit when Captain Smyth, Canadian canoe expert leaped from Pont de la Concorde bridge, which has jumped into the river heighth of 50 feet and landed on the river with a perfect right side up. He barely got his feet wet in accomplishing this spectacular feat.

Our observation is that nowadays four out of every five haven't anyth- ing.—Dallas News.

Embarrassing Moments

"Bout my age," said Red. "Did you read that book?"

"I've never even had a good look at him. He's always in a hurry. Want to go to a play with me to-night?"

"Yes, I do!"

The next day, Mrs. Wilson called Elsie into the office. Mr. Wilson- ton's not exactly pleased with your method of giving lessons," she said. "He hopes you'll be more patient and try harder."

Patient? As if she weren't!"

"Why doesn't he talk it over with me? Elsie wailed.

"Now don't be too alarmed, my dear. He just doesn't like inter- views and routine work. We have to humor him you know. And it does show he's interested in your work."

Elsie returned to the garden. She was down in the summer house, hid- den from view. Her best chance, and she was failing! The tears came to her eyes.

At time in. She couldn't re- well enough to tell he wasn't at all flirty from his gardening.

"Red," said Elsie definitely, pre- pared for criticism about her ac- quaintance with a gardener.

"Imatine! And with his tempera- ment too! Oh well, Mr. Chesterton has many things—such as that—and putting around in the garden. All great men do."

Elsie gasped—and finally under- stood.

MAYA MONUMENT IS FOUND INTACT

It is a Stone Platform Beautifully Sculptured and Painted

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.— A "victory monument" of some ancient Indian ruler, carved long before the days of Columbus, has been dis- covered in the jungles of the re- mote Empire of the Mayas of Cen- tral America.

Finding of the monument on the site of the Old Maya metropolis of Chichen Itza in Yucatan, Mexico, was announced today by the Carne- gie institution of Washington it is a stone platform beautifully sculp- tured and painted.

WORSE THAN WAR

"Tremendous Trifles" is the title of an article issued by Travellers' Insurance Company with diagrams showing that "the best friend is self" is a safe motto, per-son." Comparing the World War losses with motor traffic fatalities, the report for 1931 shows:—

"Every mile, yes, every minute of driving an automobile requires the operator to make some little decision that often means the difference between life and death, well-being and serious injury. Every time that a pedestrian sets out upon street or highway he too is called upon to make some minor decision.' Terribly impressive is the comparison that in the World War 56,535 Americans of all ages were killed in action or died of wounds in eighteen months and 182,674 were wounded; while in the eighteen months ending ec. 31, 1931 53,684 Americans were killed in motor vehicle accidents and 1,576,840 were injured. Not all the accidents are reported.

"The figures in this report are as accurate as investigation can make them. To give a 'close approximation' of the situation,' returns from States having a population of 80,000,000 are 'carried out' to the rest of the country. According to the compilation, 34,400 persons in the United States were killed in 1931, and 997,600 were injured. The fatalities showed an increase of 3.3 per cent over 1930, with a 2 per cent decline in registration of cars. In comparison with the year's total weight, for the rise in fatalities. Pedestrians seemed to be more careful, for their fatalities dropped more than 5 per cent. On the other hand, deaths from collisions increased 24 per cent," says the New York Times.

THE PRINCE'S MESSAGE

His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, remains the most popular figure in the world. If it is possible he must be even more popular since the mass meeting in which he sat down with ten thousand boys and girls at a banquet and later told them of the part they were to play in the recuperation of the world. His was a ringing call to be optimistic.

One thing is clear—the prince has won ten thousand boys and girls and the millions of boys and girls they represent, to the side of improvement. He has pointed out that not only the parents but the children must work together to bring back normalcy of times.

Whatever is undertaken in these days will benefit the future, even to the times when these boys and girls who heard the prince will be adult men and women.

HOSPITALITY FOR THE MINSTREL

Members of an English light opera company finding themselves stranded in its way impossible were preparing for the worst—to be deported individually to England. But this was to be for them. Citizens and Mayor of Winnipeg underlook their care and will see to it that the company will go home in a happier mood than if they were sent back. They are being treated as they should be, feted, and entertained.

This is a bright spot in the run of bad fortune which has been dogging this company financially.

Sad it is to think that those who offer the world amusement when the world most needs it often have to suffer. The creator of the humorist and the wit, who delight millions, often have a very unpleasant life of it.

But the last days of the opera company in Canada are to be brighter days and the members will carry away a sense of the hospitality which marks the west, and ought to mark every part of the country for the minstrels who come to please.

Like Scott's minstrel who found the way long and the wind cold, himself infirm and old, and with his harp his sole remaining joy, they have had their ups and downs and like him the opera company's members have their art, their harp and that is their great joy. Like Scott's minstrel they have found warm firesides and attentive audiences.

THOUGHTS ON GETTING TOGETHER

Several points stood out at the annual foregathering of the city and county representatives and officials at Hotel Quinte a few nights ago. One was the remarkable racial sentiment which persists as in the case of the United States ambassador, who though a United States native had forbears who were pioneers in and about the city of Belleville. Belleville had been a tradition in his family as the seat of the old home of the MacNiders. The other is that the growth of the spirit of unity between city and country is only and that nothing but the best results have come out of the get-together feasts which have been held here every January for eleven years past.

No happier choice could have been made in the selection of a speaker than that of having the ambassador from the United States as guest particularly owing to his family's connection with the Belleville and the Hastings of a few generations ago. Col. the Hon. Hanford MacNider was himself a sort of symbol of the tie which binds the city and country owing to the fact that his progenitors and their relations were residents of both city and country.

This is the purpose of these gatherings to build up a field of cooperation in the study of municipal problems.

TOGETHER
By Aline Michaelis

Can we go back and find again
Old ways where once we trod
Before we drained the cup of pain
And kissed the chastening rod?

Not I alone or you alone
Can find those paths no dear:
If we would win to roads well known,
We two must journey near.

We must keep close together. Sweet,
Throughout the whole, long way
Back to glad pathways where our feet
Danced many an April day.

And if we seek it hand in hand
I think that we may find
That lovely, lost, enchanted land
Still beautiful and kind!

LAKE PLACID, New York, little village in the Adirondacks, will be the 'centre of world-wide interest this week on the occasion of the Olympic sports being decided there. Twenty-five nations are expected to be represented at the Olympic Winter Games and great preparations have been made for the hundreds of athletes and thousands of visitors who will be in attendance. Lake Placid is a wee village high up in the hills of the Adirondacks, a favorite resort and a winter resort only of increasing popularity. Los Angeles secured the 1932 Olympic Summer Games and Lake Placid was awarded the Winter Games, which shows that the business men of Lake Placid are plenty progressive. Lack of now this winter threatened to make the event but recent reports show a good fall of snow and favorable weather. Lack of snow and cold weather would mean a financial calamity as considerable money has been expended in preparation for the great event, including a new Olympic stadium which cost $125,000 and has seating accommodation for 5,000 spectators with standing room for 1,000 more. Lake Placid has 250 miles of ski-ing trails and a bob-sled course which cost $200,000. Ice skating, hockey, dog-sledding, tobogganing and all kinds of winter sports will fill the program as the various nations entered strive for the championships. Accommodation has been provided for ten thousand visitors in Lake Placid hotels and boarding houses, nearby villages, Pullman cars and even Montreal is but two hours away by train. As the biggest sport event of many years this side of the Atlantic it is to be hoped that Lake Placid will have ideal weather and that the expectations of its backers will be fully realized.

"CUCKOO! CUCKOO!"

"And what if the engine stalls when we're away up the clouds?" asked the young lady of the pilot as she was about to enter a flying-machine for her first trip.

"Well, if that should happen," replied the pilot, "you just leap out, count ten and then pull the cord on your parachute."

"But what if it doesn't open up?" she asked anxiously.

"In that case the only logical thing to do is to flap your arms up and down and say 'I'm a bird! I'm a bird!'"

Four-Footed Deputy.—The chief constable of a small English town was also an expert veterinary surgeon. One night his telephone bell rang.

"Is Mr. Blank there?" said an agitated voice.

Mrs. Blank answered yes, and inquired:

"Both, madam," came the reply. "We can't get our new bulldog to open his mouth, and—there's a burglar in it."—Boston Transcript.

GOUT IS VERY OFTEN DUE TO FOOD, DRINK

Podagra is Fancy Name For Age-Old Disease

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D. Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

Podagra is sort of a fancy name for gout, and gout is a disease that is much more frequent than we might suppose. Being due to faulty metabolism, it can occur in individuals who themselves might least suspect such a possibility.

By metabolism is meant the assimilative proper-ties of the body in conjunction with its wearing-down processes, both through "catabolism" we break down. The two terms combined are metabolism.

Regarding the chemistry involved in metabolism in general, and in the condition known as gout in particular, much precise and sure knowledge is available. In the case of gout, however, may be said to be defective oxidation of certain foods or in the proper elimination of the tissue wastes.

Apparently, an hereditary factor is important here, in more than half of the cases, the gout disease existed in parents or grandparents or both. Usually it does not appear before thirty. Most cases develop, however, before fifty. Men are more often affected than women.

Overindulgences in alcoholic beverages has always been considered a powerful factor in the development of this disease. Drinking beer and ale, especially, is bad. Lighter beers do not seem to be so injurious in this respect as are the heavier varieties. Distilled spirits, in addition to fermented ones, are less liable to produce the disease.

One must be a habitual drinker to develop gout, however. Cases appear even in teetotalers. Here food plays an important part, and usually the gout is due to overeating, with too little exercise.

Some people have a gouty diathesis, a real disease; yet in England they have a so-called "poor man's gout", caused by bad food, poor general hygiene and too much ale or beer.

Lead workers seem specially susceptible to gout. What especially here is probably kidney trouble, from the poisonous effects of handling lead, and not the gout. Gout is treatem through unclean hands and by inhalation. Lead poisoning over a period of yearse also affects the circulation, producing hardening of the arteries, of which interferes with proper elimination of waste products.

Gout somehow seems to be associated with the overacidity in the blood and tissues of uric acid. A healthy person passes it in the system in the urine from four tenths to one gramme daily. Gouty individuals concrete to 1.5 grm., particularly just before a gouty attack.

In an acute attack there are intolerable pains, general temperature is often some form of indigestion as warning signs. Sometimes, too, changes of skin in the small joints of the hands and feet are experienced, and sometimes only following sleep.

The real attack, however, usually begin in the early morning hours when severe pain, commonly in the big toe and more often in the right one than the left, awakens the patient. Soon the severe pain soon begins to swell and to become more and more sensitive, and tender. Fever may occur, up to one hundred and four degrees centigrade.

A few hours later, however, the harassing symptoms disappear and the patient may feel fairly comfortable all day, but the next night the attack will probably repeat itself.

Chronic cases are the rule, and with repeated acute attacks of gout or or lesser severity, extending over a period of years. After a time the joints may become actually deformed and ankylosed.

Proper diet, no alcohol and an up-building healthy program of living are, of course, indicated, but even at that, gout may be a stubborn ailment to cure.

KINGSFORD SMITH CRASHES PLANE

Calls to Passengers to Stick to Their Seats

Sydney, Australia, Feb. 1.—Air Commodore Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, noted pilot, displayed coolness in the air today to save his own and the lives of fourteen passengers in his acroplane, Southern Cross.

"Stick to your seats and trust me" he yelled at the passengers as the machine tipped to the left with two broken Longerons.

The plane went into a spiral dire and landed in a "pancake." None of the passengers was injured but the plane was considerably damaged.

Other Papers' Opinions

CHIEFLY FOR GROWN-UPS

While all the English-speaking world pays homage upon the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, few recall that it is only by a chance that the immortal name of his literary alter ego—Lewis Carroll—was ever given to the world. The author of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" was nothing if not shy. Casting about for a pseudonym under which to hide his identity, he submitted a selection of pen names to Edmund Yates, the magazine editor. Amongst these was one which achieved English via German and Latin, as follows: Lutwidge, derived from Ludwig, in Latin Lodovicus, becomes Lewis; and Charles, in Latin Carolus, becomes Carrol. From "Lodovicus Carolus" and a variety of other suggestions, Yates picked Lewis Carroll.

"Alice" books are amongst the most priceless in the whole heritage of English literature. It is true that they are ostensibly written for children. But in reality it is thousands upon thousands of grown up readers who treasure their delightful humour and keep them immortal. Of course many children love "Alice" and "Through the Looking Glass" But positively all good grown-ups do.

Much that is best in English literature is seemingly directed towards children. Barrie never equaled "Peter Pan." In the opinion of many people, the best of Kipling is to be found in his "stories for boys" like "Pucks of Pook's Hill" and "Rewards and Fairies." Stevenson's "Child's Garden of Verses," and Kenneth Grahame's "Dream Days" and "Golden Age" also spring to mind. Writing about children and especially for children, the English chose abyest of men, will reveal intimacies of pathos and humour which they never would parade before their fellows. So they label their best efforts "For Children" and sit back and chuckle when the adults snatch the volume from their children's hands to devour it themselves.—Montreal Star.

STRUGGLES IN THE EAST

In taking "drastic measures" to protect her citizens in the Shanghai area, Japan is probably doing what would be done by any other power under similar circumstances. But the employment of armed force to end the Chinese boycott against Japanese goods, and the bombing of the Chinese city, is another matter.

The boycott is not only a legitimate weapon, but it is a measure to which members of the League of Nations are given the right for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear upon a nation which resorts to war. Under present conditions, nations not directly concerned are reluctant to add to the complications which harass trade. China's appeals for united action have produced only discussions and investigations. China alone has employed the boycott.

When Japan decided that intervention in Manchuria was necessary it was careful not to wound the susceptibilities of the League of Nations. It did not go to war. It merely overran the country with horse, foot and artillery, and bombed towns from airplanes.

In using armed forces to end the Chinese boycott, Japan does not seem to worry much whether the League likes it or not. The pretense that Japan is not at war with China can scarcely be maintained much longer.—Toronto Telegram.

SITUATION IN ORIENT

But it may easily be that Japan envisages far wider ambition than that most of us are now considering. China has been conquered before from the north. It was from that direction that the Manchoo came, they ruled China right down to its southern borders for over a century. There appears to be little resistance in China to an armed and resolute conqueror; and is it not quite possible that the Japanese, see themselves playing again the Manchu role and extending the rule of their emperor, not only to Peiping but to Canton and beyond. What the ambitious little men of Nippon would do with their wonderful organizing skill and four hundred million Chinese in organize who have no precicit! We might easily see a Pax Japonica which would not finish with a new Monroe Doctrine, and something the world with something like half the human race marching under one flag.—Montreal Star.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows was standing around in Jim post trawling and argwying about different subjecks, and Shorty Judge and Skinny Martin started have a argreament about weather its more of a advantage to be tall or short. Shorty saying, Good mite look at all the advantages a short person has. Suppose you want to look through a key hole for any reason, all you half to do is stand there and look, if youre short enough, but how about a big tall guy trying to look through a key hole, he has to bend away over looking like a big fish trying to get trapped scene-place, Shorty said.

O yeh, well how about if a little scawd off guy wunts to look through a transom, where is he gonna look? Skinny says.

Nobody wunts to wawk with a big tall girl, Shorty said. And look how much money a short fellow saves on his clothes by the absens of material in them, he added. Skinny said, O yeh, well how about who's he tries to run away from a robber with his little short legs, what happens to his money after he's saved it? The robber gets it, that's what, Skinny said.

O yeh, well look at history, Shorty said.

All rite, look at it, what about it? Skinny said, and Shorty said, and Look at Napoleon, he wasent hardly any bigger than me, and Skinny said, well look at big Bill Tilden if you wunt to look at somebody, you wouldent even meant up to his knees and if you did he'd think you was a Dee.

O yeh, well if im a flee youre a flea-flie, Shorty said.

Sounding as if it would end up in a flie, ony it ended up in a game of cops and robbers instead on account of the rest of us fellows getting tired waiting for the kite to start.

Poet's Corner

THE WAVE

Sired by the Storm and mothered by the Deep,
It rises from its immemorial sleep,
Waxing in size, and gathering in might,
While rolling through a thousand miles of night

Lashed by its father's fierce, Antarctic breath—
Fateful as Life, implacable as Death,
On its unhindered unrelenting way
It storms through a thousand miles of Day!

So gains its journey's end, and near at hand
Perceives its mortal enemy, the land,
It rears and swings, and sways from side to side,
Then thunders onward, with the whole force
And, in one glorious charge well spent,
Dies in a million little wisps of foam!

With all the shouting... don't forget the fundamentals

THIS has been a great year for outstanding improvements in new motor cars, hasn't it? Which achievements interest you most? The new streamlined bodies? The new Wizard Control with Free Wheeling? Or the remarkable Ride Regulator? But with all the shouting about 1932 improvements—may we as McLaughlin-Buick owners remind you that the most important improvements of all are those that you don't see?

We submit these facts: McLaughlin-Buick has been continuously manufactured in Canada since 1903. During 1932 alone it has earned the enviable reputation of being Canada's standard car. We think that this is a reasonable statement because more than twice as many people buy McLaughlin-Buicks as the second car in its price range.

Then, too, 80% of our owners buy McLaughlin-Buicks again and again. And while you consider the tremendous value to you of such a reputation as a buying guide, don't forget that the new McLaughlin-Buick 1932 contains 100 improvements! They are most modern cars, in advance of the industry in many respects.

SILENT SYNCRO-MESH
Enjoy quiet gear changes as well as smoother ones. A 40 miles per hour in second silently.

WIZARD CONTROL
Shift all gears—first, second, third and reverse—without using the clutch pedal.

RIDE REGULATOR
Adjust shock absorbers to varying conditions of load, road and speed by means of a convenient control on the steering column.

Buick dealers place before you a basic thought? Regardless of the many new improvements which thrill you remember that back of the brilliance of new lines and new improvements must be an integrity in manufacturing—a thoroughness in building — which will guarantee to you that you are going to get carefree and uninterrupted service from your car.

FREE WHEELING
Have instantaneous change from Free Wheeling to conventional Drive at will.

We cordially invite you to learn by your own tests the great pleasure and ease of driving you will enjoy in the new McLaughlin-Buick Eights.

You can buy conveniently through the economical G M A C time payment plan. Your continued satisfaction is assured by the liberal and generous terms of the General Motors Owner Service Policy.

OVERTIME WIN FOR TORONTO

Second Stringers Deliver in a Brilliant Victory

Toronto, Feb. 1 (CP)—Terminating a brilliant exhibition of hockey in an overtime session, which netted three goals, Toronto Maple Leafs blanked, with a rush Saturday night to earn a 6-3 victory over New Rangers in one of the feature week-end attractions of the National Hockey League.

The victory gave the Leafs a four-point lead over Canadiens in the International division of the league while Rangers' setback handed the New York stand-pat Tex Patrick men stepped into undisputed last night and handed the Black Hawks a 3-0 reverse which left them 3 points in front of their rivals.

Spoiling their strong opponents three goals, the Maple Leafs came from behind and by adding a goal in each period the game only to finish with a rush and earn a 6-3 overtime victory. A feature of the victory was the outstanding performance of Plumides and Grachan, third string forwards of the Leaf, who each added three scoring points to their records and led the Toronto attack. Irving Keeling, Dillon and Muldoon had counted for Rangers in the first 16 minutes of play, Keeling assisted on both Dillon and with Grace, Finnigan and Conroy each adding a goal in the remaining time evened the count within minutes before the bell. From the face-off at the start of the extra session Conroy grabbed the puck for the Leafs, squirmed his way through the Rangers' defence and beat Hoosh with an angle shot for the winning tally. However, the Leafs were not the only ones with offensive and before the first five minutes had passed Jackson and Clancy each added a goal. "Red" Horner, husky Toronto defence man had his collar bone broken in a collision with Johnson early in the first period and will be out of action for a month.

After sixty minutes of strenuous hockey the local juveniles held the fast Kingston Juveniles to a 3 to 2 score and the Jack Hardy Arena in Kingston on Saturday afternoon. The local kids returned home high in praise of their treatment in the Limestone City both during and after the game.

The kids fed quite proud of the fact that they be'd the fast Kingston team to a tie on their own ice. The return game will be played in Belleville on Saturday afternoon, February 28th. The Juveniles are all under the age of 16, but they play real smart hockey and give the fans plenty of action throughout the game.

While the Belleville intermediate hockey team are in Gananoque on Wednesday night, the local "basketeers" entertain the Kingston Y.M.C.A. basketball team here in Bellevile. Coach Morden has the boys working overtime and they expect to "take" the Limestone City team on Wednesday night. All fast basketball teams, in the E.O.B. A. have won their first home game with the result that each team now has a win and a loss to their credit. The local's can take pride in the fact that in winning from the Kingston "ringers" on Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A.

Queen's hockey team have but three more games to play in the Big Six loop, one each against S.M.C., Gananoque and Belleville. Two of the older men must take a fall out of the Students if they hope to get into a play-off position with Queens. (Stranger things have happened).

As for the juniors it is about time that they finished up their group games in Belleville. As the first and second teams play off in this district, not start this week with their play-off? As the group stands at present the two teams are assured of the play-off positions and as the O. B. A. have agreed upon a rule to the affect that all junior groups must have their group winners declared on or before February 15th the junior group No. 1 will have to get busy pretty soon as the group is divided into two sections, A. and B. Kingston city team have assured themselves of winning group A while Belleville and Trenton have yet to declare a winner. One person had better get busy on the subject very soon.

It was with regret that we heard of the untimely death of Frank Dalnty, one of the best all-round premier jockeys, early Sunday morning. Dalnty was just coming into prominence and had a wonderful future in store for himself when the unfortunate accident occurred. He died from the result of an automobile accident which occurred near the Carrying Place late Saturday night.

On Thursday night the opening game of the local Interscholastic hockey group will be played when the O.S.D. meet the C.C.I. at the local Belleville Arena. Coach Les Shiels has unearthed a couple of new guys for his "Collegians" and expects to have as good a team as in the last year. The O.S.D. team are as unknown quality as they have not been playing hockey in the school leagues of late. It is reported, however, that Coach Ed Lajy has some real classy "speakers" up at the School for the Deaf and will give the local students all the boys they want in sixty minutes.

After reading of the showing of the Canadian Olympic hockey team in Europe we are satisfied that their opponents won't score very many goals on them at least. But on the other hand they do not seem to be able to score very many goals themselves. (It is hard that win hockey games.) Again, on the other hand they will not have such proficient Goalies to halt as they experienced in Toronto, except for the goaltenders. We are satisfied that they will hold the Canadian colors as high as heretofore. May they have success in their enterprise.

SPELL-BINDER

The biggest factor in pushing Cecil Dillon to the front as right wing in the New York Rangers' sensational scoring secondary defense line, says Elmer Ferguson, Montreal hockey expert is his "repertoire". Dillon never skates around the ice or shoots the puck the same way twice—he's a fast skater and he keeps "guessing". Another achievement of his is that at the age of twenty-three he is the father of two lusty coming kid-liners. He is pushing Bill Cook in the goal scoring department at twenty-game point, one of his major feats being the scoring of two goals against Boston in overtime giving the Rangers the first game in three years on Bruin ice. He comes from Thornbury, Ontario, having been picked up by Lester Patrick scouts from O.H.A. ranks when he played for Owen Sound. He was a champion league scorer with 24 points to his credit when he was called to the Ranger's camp.

SYRACUSE NOW IN THE RACE

Score Six Straight Wins Before Halted Last Night

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 1 (CP)—The lengthy winning streak of the Syracuse Stars, which extended to six games Saturday when Minty Mcnch's club handed the pace-setting Buffalo Bisons a 2-0 reverse, was suddenly halted last night when the New York entry were forced into a 2-2 overtime draw with the London Tecumsehs.

By virtue of their victory and draw in a pair of week-end fixtures Syracuse are now perched in a fourth-place tie with Windsor in the International League race, a single point behind London, who received one of their most decisive setbacks of the campaign in Windsor Saturday when they were blanked 4-0 by the speedy Bulldogs.

German Hockey Club Arrives For Games

New York, Feb. 1.—One of the last groups of Winter Olympic competitors to arrive, the German hockey team, was in New York today ready to move on to Lake Placide after a preliminary game. The ten members of the hockey team arrived yesterday along with Ernst Reiter, figure skating champion. They play the Bronx hockey club in an exhibition game here tonight.

Bob Sleigh Captain Fractures Arm

Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 1.—Captain Werner Zahnu, Great War aviator, and head of the German bob-sleigh team, suffered a fracture of his left arm yesterday in a crash on the treacherous bob run as the sleigh teams of eight nations defied a blizzard to attempt practice for the Winter Olympic games.

SEND OFF FOR OLYMPIC TEAM

Banquet to Winnipegers at Toronto on Saturday Night

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Confidence in the ability of Winnipeg Canada's Olympic hockey team to uphold the honor of the Dominion at the Winter Olympic next month was expressed at a civic dinner tendered the Winnipeg team here Saturday.

"We wish you best of luck and will welcome you back as winners at a later date," declared Mayor W. J. Stewart. He congratulated the team on its past successes and the honor it had brought Winnipeg.

Dave Thomson, president of the Winnipeg club; "Bobby" Robertson, the manager, "Jack" Hughes, coach and Bill Cochrane, goalie and captain of the team, replied, predicting that Canada would have no cause to regret the choice of the team to carry the colors of the Dominion into the International hockey contests.

BROCKVILLE MAN KILLED IN CAR

Brockville, Feb. 1.—Following an automobile collision here Saturday night, Alex. Saunders, 40, unmarried, of Brockville, died in a hospital yesterday. The accident in which he was in collision with another driven by Cyril Coupal, of Lansdowne Miss Mamie McMahon, who was with Alexander, escaped with a shaking up. Coupal was unhurt.

ROB PARTNER OF SLAIN MAN

Fing Shin's Cafe Robbed of $35 By Predatory Customer

Toronto, Feb. 1.—"Yea for two" was the order of a pair of young men who dropped into a Chinese cafe at 122 Church street just after midnight to-day.

As soon as Fing Shin, one of the owners, went to the tea, one of the youths hopped over the counter and pushed the key which sang a little bell and opened the cash drawer sliding open.

"Hey, whatta you doin'?" yelled Fing Shin, returning with the tea.

Each of the customers drew a revolver and pointed it at him.

"Shut up," said one.

Fing Shin stood helplessly by and watched the till being emptied.

Out of the kitchen came Johnn King, the chef, brandishing a lengthy butcher knife.

"Stand back there," smarted the one in front of the counter. He waved his gun fiercely.

John froze in his tracks.

The youth behind the counter slipped a roll of bills, later found to total $35 in the pocket, and the two, keeping the Chinese covered, slipped out the door.

Vanish in Night

John King and Fing Shin, the former still wielding his bracher knife, rushed to the street after them. But they had been whisked up by the night.

Several Chinese who had been upstairs in the restaurant were called down. One went to the Second Street police station and gave the alarm.

Detective Sergeants Crowe and McAllister and Detectives Sullivan and Taylor were dispatched to the scene. Police on beats all over the city were notified. The city signal system, and inside of half an hour two suspects were in Dundas West station. Later they were released after the Chinese had failed to identify them.

It was not ascertained whether the robbers had used a car in their get-away. At a late hour last night the police were busy combing the city. According to descriptions obtained, the two are thought to be the ones who held up a Dominion store on Broadview Avenue a few days ago.

The Chinese cafe at 122 Church street is the scene of the murder of Lip Yuen, late partner in the business, was fatally attacked by four men who were trying to force him to beat a $1.10 meal check just before the New Year.

LITTLE DAMAGE TO MOTOR CAR

Answering a call at midnight Saturday night, the local fire department arrived at the scene of a blaze when a car was caught fire on the corner of Bridge and Front street.

The blaze was quickly extinguished and no damage of any particular amount was reported.

McGILL DEBATERS WIN

Kingston, Feb. 1.—McGill debaters were given the decision over Queen's on the subject, "Resolved, that the freshman hazing should be abolished in Canadian universities," in which McGill took the affirmative. FOG HOLDS UP PLANE SEARCH

Machine With Eight on Board Disappears in Mountains

Los Angeles, Feb. 1.—Snow-covered, almost inaccessible regions of the Tehachapi and Topatopa Mountains north of here hold the secret of the fate of a tri-motored Century-Pacific plane and its eight passengers.

With hardly a definite clue to follow and weather too bad to permit a continuation of the air search, scores of men on foot, on horseback and on snowshoes struggled through canyons and up mountain sides searching for the plane.

Officials of the Century-Pacific Line hoped the plane had made a safe landing and that its pilot and three women and four men passengers would be found alive.

Experienced pilots and mountain men, however, doubted this. They pointed out that there were only two valleys in the region where a successful forced landing could have been made and that both of those have been searched minutely.

When Pilot J. V. Sandblom left Bakersfield Friday with his seven passengers and headed for Los Angeles, he ran into stormy weather. Other pilots who crossed the ridge route late that day reported that snow, fog, clouds and high winds made flying extremely hazardous.

More trees and shrubs will be planted along the motor highways in England.

SUIT CHANGED IN JAIL AND PRISONER OUT

GUN IS USED

Escort in Jail Garb Protests in Vain He is Visitor

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Police reported that a prisoner exchanged clothes with a visitor at the point of a woman's gun in the Cook County jail Sunday and strolled out, free.

Warden David Montgomery denied the reports vehemently, then had all the jail telephones disconnected and went looking for Cupid.

If the police are right, and they usually are, Mrs. Alfred Russell went in to visit her husband, held on a kidnapping charge. The police said she had a baby in her arms, a pistol in her purse and a masculine escort, named Russell, at her side.

She presented a visitor's card, made out to her and one Joseph Casey, continued the police, and gave in to Guard George Gibson. He scanned the card, noticed that it was signed by Frank Wright, the sheriff's secretary. He took Mrs. Russell, her baby and her escort inside the bull pen to see Russell.

When the visitors left, deputies started to lead Russell back to his cell. He protested, according to police accounts.

"I'm a visitor here; you can't put me in a cell."

He explained that Mrs. Russell drew her gun and ordered him and Casey into the exchange cloakroom whereupon she and Russell walked from the jail.

MILD WEATHER SPEEDS WORK

Trans-Canada Highway Exceeds Expectations of Department

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 1—Premier George S. Henry last night told the Canadian Press work on the trans-Canada highway in Ontario had progressed with unexpected speed owing to mild weather prevailing throughout the area in which construction camps are situated.

The result, he said, had been that more money had been spent than officials had anticipated. The original estimates called for funds to carry work on until April. The province and the Dominion provided the money on a fifty-fifty basis. Mr. Henry said he could not immediately determine the amount of money remaining from appropriations for the length of time it would be possible to carry on the work without calling for more funds. Eventually, he said, more money would have to be appropriated.

ARMED MAN SURRENDERS

Lindsay, Feb. 1—Four Lindsay policemen, armed, searched a section of the country south of Lindsay Saturday in search of a mental patient, who was known to have a shotgun with him. He had been placed in custody some time ago and was about to be removed to an institution when he fled suddenly. When found he held the gun across his knees, but offered no resistance.

Passage to Paris

Patou launches a color called Rose Opaline. Agnes creates a little string beret; and Vionett startles Paris with her diaphanous evening gowns worn over incredibly brief maillots. Bruyere makes a coat with a scarf, and Schiaparelli sponsors dinner pajamas.

Those things happen when the closely guarded portals of the great French houses. Only one woman in a million will see them as the mannequins pass by. But two weeks later—three weeks at most—every Canadian woman who reads a newspaper may know as much about the Paris Openings as the fortunate few.

Great department stores, tiny specialty shops, alert manufacturers, offer through their advertising what practically amounts to a restaging of these semi-annual presentations. Every successful model will be shown. Every significant trend will be recounted—and Canada will wear it Basque berets and its evening pajamas as nonchalantly as Cannes or Juan les Pins.

Two generations ago—or even one—this could not have been. And advertising has been a tremendous force in making it possible. Advertising has become the common carrier of fashion. There's a message to Paris in the advertisement almost any day you look.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Beware of Freak Reducing Diets

Fashion, sponsoring a graceful, normal figure, has proved to be a Good Samaritan. The reducing mania has quieted down to a comfortable extent; at least girls who weigh what they should aren't starving themselves to a mere bone. An element of humor was furnished during the time when plumpness was the most popular subject of conversation at the bridge party; it was furnished by the flyweight, sitting on the scales at 115 who thought she was all set for the winter months to add 10 pounds of fat to something about it.

There was the eighteen-day diet. It appeared and disappeared, no one where. It was eighteen days of practically nothing to eat but grape fruit, and it was suspected that the creator was a bright publicity lad, employed to boost the sales of grape fruit. It wouldn't kill anybody. It would no doubt do them good, but it was not exactly safe, because it deprived the body of food elements of which it has proved to be in need.

There are women who successfully pulled in their belts, deleted hip cushions and otherwise decreased the two-full measurements but who within the short space of a few months of nothing-to-eat and strenuous exercise, took on more weight than they would normally collect in ten years.

After forty, facial tissues are delicate, the under padding has lost some of its fullness, fail into a state of collapse when the intake of good nourishing food is curtailed and massive lives on a lettuce leaf a day. Even when weight-lighting is only a mild-mannered skirmish, the complexion is entitled to insurance against ill, much worse than pimples, plenty of cold water and astringents.

It isn't safe to do away entirely with fats, sweets and starches if the system has been accustomed to them. They are concentrated foods and plump down weight is usually the fatty upholstery too rapidly, by taking dangerous medicines, or by going on a starvation diet. Any woman who is considering a figure change is advised to down, to what she calls up the old family Doc and ask what he thinks about it.

The views of Henry Ford with regard to economics, wages, and employment, add what has been done in the Ford plant to meet that problem are discussed in the new book "Moving Forward", written in collaboration with Samuel Crowther. Ford maintains that there is no "depression" and that the periodical exhorbitant wages', 'bottom prices', minimum costs' and thereupon carries ill. Charles Chaplin, writes the book for the New York Times says "When poverty in America is at last routed, he (Henry Ford) will have contributed more to the victory than perhaps any other individual living or dead". When the target engineer, Ford, is mentioned the reader will be natural's' curious to learn.

The ill-fated voyage of Sir Ernest Shackleton's ship, the Endurance, 1914 is described by his companion Commander Frank Worsley in his book "Endurance; and epic of Polar adventure". The expedition is discussed from the time it left the port of London in August 1914 till the last survivor and crew were rescued from the ice fields by Shackleton and the author in August 1918, after Commander Worsley had sailed the latter also tells his adventures as commander of a ship during the war, and with Shackleton on his last expedition in 1921. The book closes with the death of Shackleton in 1922. Admiral Jellicoe in his foreward to the volume comments "It is a story that Shackleton's friends can justly claim as his crowning in full, for he would not speak of himself except from the service and safety of his men. Worsley writes frankly that Shackleton was not always popular. "A born man is without faults? If we as a nation have Shackleton's courage, and the devotion's side by side with the splendid loyalty he possessed, we shall not do badly."

A number of typical folk-tales have been collected by Susan C. Woodley for his book "Legends of the Maritime Provinces". The author believes that an appreciative understanding of the literature is a certain path to the hearts of a people and in that sphere, folk-ales and legends occupy no small part. Through his little volume, Mr. Woodley hopes to have a share in the development of mutual understanding between the two great races in Canada. Such stories as "The black horse of St. Augustine', "The Lady of Beaumanoir' and "The Phantom of Cape Rosier', are included.

The Beauty Box

Every facial illness days includes an special. Considered from the standpoint of beauty, eyes are the most important feature, the conscientious eyes before one notices a nose or even the lustrous hair. During the patting and tapping of the complexion, which is usually covered with pads of gauze that have been dipped in witch hazel and cucumber juice, a delicate massage, gentle fingers sweeping from the eye outward to the temple, over the upper lid, combining back beneath the eye. Try that movement on your eyes tonight. Takes tired look away and is guaranteed to be death on tuckey tracks, the old meanies.

The cautious department in the home is responsible for some beauty ills. All housewives should learn about food values, diah up a balanced diet for the family. Too much starchy food coarsens the skin, puts a strain on sebaceous glands, invites blackheads and pimples. For the sake of health of the teeth orange juice, lemon juice and milk are to be included in daily menus.

Ordinary oatmeal is an ideal ingredient for bath bags; it's a small quantity of ground oatmeal cloth and almond meal are added, the bath bag goes into the water. Make them of cheesecloth. Let them float in the bath water for a few minutes before using. Very helpful for overcoming dry skin, which makes some arms and legs unsightly.

BRITISH JUDGE'S JUDGMENT CAUSES SENSATION

ROSE ROTHENBERG JUDITH COTTELO

Judge ruling of Justice McCardie, British bachelor Judge, the woman has the right to leave her husband; to choose her own occupation, political party and religion, and decide whether and when to bear children. A woman is a citizen, not a serf, according to the Judge, and he says she has the right to decide her own future. Only last year a similar judgment was given in the United States when Mrs. Marion Kahn was upheld in a New York court because she refused to bear children. Judge Learned Hand of the United States Supreme Court does not agree with the British brother justice in the matter of having children, and Miss Rose Rothenberg, assistant District Attorney of New York, and Judith Cottello as far as child-bearing is concerned, although she supports Justice McCardie's contention that a woman or man should have the privilege of seeking happiness elsewhere if they cannot find it with the person they married. The ruling was hailed in England as the ultimate step in the emancipation of women.

THE NEXT MATCH

For a long time the friends of the Drummonds had been aware of some trouble existing in their home. Finally it was that the Drummonds had ceased to publicly [illegible] evidence of a happiness [illegible] confidence for each other, but rather in a quiet restraint in their relations which had never been present in the past.

Sylvia Drummond was perhaps the best looking man in Medfield, while Allen, his wife, had always been considered somewhat of a beauty. But since she had been appointed as secretary of the Medfield Country Club, she had blossom many of her charms in her manner of dress and athletic proclivities.

When Bob married Alice she was not an ardent follower of outdoor sports. In fact, the quality that appeared to impress her suitor the greatest was her appreciation of home-loving tendencies. Just as soon as she was married however, Bob began a fondness for golf, and caused Mr. and Mrs. Robert Drummond to become interested in a member in the local club.

Gradually Bob was persuaded by his wife to become a regular but unwilling spectator of her game. At first, he had to receive necessary instructions. But he never showed any ability in the game, so no matter how hard his wife pleaded. He much preferred a comfortable chair in the clubhouse with his beloved books. Th's he could do on occasions, but Alice would usually require his presence on the course in order to demonstrate how she was getting on, and also to prepare him so he would know what she was talking about when she wished to discuss her game in the evening.

Step by step, or game by game, she fought her way up among the women members of the club, finally eliminating one after another until she was eligible to compete in the state championship. She demonstrated herself to be a gentleman, and now the race for the much coveted championship resulted in a match play final between Ish of the Scarboro Country Club. Ish had never attended any important event as agreeably as he had followed his wife through her many succeeding triumphs. But he just couldn't become as enthusiastic as his wife was. He tried hard enough, but there was something wrong in his spirting blood, he thought, and he manufactured artificial interest in the hope that his wife would not notice the [illegible].

The night before the great event, which was held on the Scarboro course, the club gave a dinner dance in the visitors. Bob was present, trying to express some of his artificial enthusiasm to a member of Scarboro business men. He was getting along very well indeed when he was dragged off by the club's hostess and presented to a young lady by the name of Sylvia Thornton.

Sylvia was a very agreeable as well as a very beautiful young lady, and she endeavored to talk about the subject which must be the closest to Bob Drummond's heart.

"Mrs. Drummond is a wonderful player, isn't she?" Sylvia began, when she and Bob were seated at a table which was screened from the view of the other guests.

"Oh, yes," Bob replied as brightly as he could. "At least, I believe she is so considered."

"I regret that I am not an enthusiast," Sylvia sighed. "Somehow I cannot interest myself in golf."

Bob was startled; everyone with whom he had talked about the contact was wild about golf. He looked this strange young lady over, wondered how she could be so indifferent for the first time that her sex was golf mad, much further than the deep tan of the outdoor sports lover.

"Then you play any games well?" he finally asked.

"Yes," Bob laughed a low gurgle of joy as he expressed surprise. "Then see," she went on, "I am am a book worm—love the old masters best of all, but I am also fond of pictures and statues. Father's queer person to belong to a country club, don't you think?"

No, Bob didn't think so. His face lighted up with pleasure as he told Sylvia about his library and books, and how much better he enjoyed them than golf. And then their conversation became so interesting that the dinner hour until they were told by Alice who, it appeared, had been looking for them for the past half hour.

"Do you like Sylvia Thornton?" asked Alice, when they were driving home.

"Yes, she's a peach—knows a lot about books and pictures and things," Bob replied, briefly.

"Tonight is the first time I have talked with a book lover in a long while."

Alice gave her husband a quick look, but only replied. "I shall call now that Sylvia is fond of golf."

A large number of spectators were gathered around the first green to watch the contest the following morning. Alice Drummond and Sylvia Thornton were out to win. It was a great battle, and as Sylvia remarked to one of the spectators, 'o there were two outstanding stars in the sporting world very little interest in the match. While the battle was going on from hole to hole, Bob and Sylvia followed along discussing the relative merits of their favorite authors and artists.

There was a tense moment when the match was finished on the eighteenth green and one of them must be lost. It was Sylvia Standish's first shot. Although she had been playing a very good game on the green, she made a wonderful shot, coming within inches of sinking her ball. Alice followed with an easy shot before Sylvia could recover from the play she glanced up and saw Bob and Sylvia, the latter looking into Bob's eyes in her excitement. No wonder; the match then was lost.

The effect of this scene was too much for Alice. She played her ball poorly and much too hard missing the hole and rolling to the far side of the green. Myrna then made her easy shot, thereby winning the game and likewise the state championship.

A great celebration was held at the Scarboro Country Club in honor of Myrna. Alice received recognition for the excellent game she had played, and showed herself a good loser. But her mind seemed far away from the club's festivities; she had a wan smile on her face, and although she remained very close to her husband, she had little conversation with him.

When the celebration was over Bob and Alice returned to their home. Bob was unusually quiet, only consoling words for the loss of the day's game which meant so much to his wife. It was not until Alice that listened without comment to his words of sympathy. He seemed to have nothing to say after an important match that Bob grew nervous and sat down and waited for [illegible].

"Alice dear, I feel perfectly all right physically," she replied. Her whole face was flushed up with excitement, and she seemed about ready to fill with tears, and added, "I am not at all disappointed, indeed in golf, are you dear?"

Bob looked at her, unlooked-for question that Bob started with surprise. "Why, why," he stammered, "that is rather a queer thing for you to ask me, Alice, but I am not disappointed in it I shall be frank. No, I never was very crazy about the game."

"I rather thought," returned his wife, "Really, Bob, you would have been a lot more interested in things you like—now wouldn't you?"

Bob gazed thoughtfully in the face of the anxious young woman before he replied.

"If you could manage to give me some of your spare time, Alice," he said slowly.

"Don't say another word." Alice was now crying hysterically—the first weakness that she had shown since the third match—and Bob reached out his arms and drew her close. In another moment

WEAK AFTER INFLUENZA—
COULD NOT DO HOUSEWORK
Could Feel Strength Coming Back After Taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (Tonic)

"I took a severe attack of influenza," writes Mrs. John Cowan, 1 Bloor Ave, East, Owen Sound, Ontario, "and when I was able to get out of bed I was in such a weak condition that I thought I would never get my strength back. I could not do my housework. So a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I did, and after taking a few doses I could feel my strength coming back. After taking six boxes I was complete-ly well and as strong as I ever had been, and I haven't taken a severe attack of influenza since then."

Dear friend! Look out . . . If you've had the flu and can't get back to normal. That is the dangerous part of influenza. Even after effects. Influenza weakens the blood—makes further sickness likely. The iron and other elements in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) increase the blood count—that is they multiply the number of red corpuscles in the blood. Through these pills thousands of persons weakened by influenza, nervous breakdown, worry or other causes, have been helped and kept in health. Start taking them today.

"Now Strong as Ever"

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) at any druggist's—or from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.—50 cents a box. Don't wait. It's dangerous to continue in a run down condition.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Learns He Wanted to Know

By Thornton W. Burgess

In gaining knowledge of no use. You've waited long without excuse. —Old Mother Nature.

Jolly, round, red Mr. Sun had gone to bed behind the Purple Hills. The Black Shadows had crept across the Green Meadows, through the Old Orchard and into the Green Forest. Jolly Mr. Moon with her silvery light was driving them into black huddled masses. Peter Rabbit sat on a big hiding place in the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard and slowly hopped along until he reached the end of the old stone wall on Farmer Brown's dooryard lay before him.

For a long time Peter sat looking across that dooryard. Over in the barn a horse whickered, and then. From inside Farmer Brown's house came muffled sounds. Patiently Peter waited and watched. He must make sure that Bowser the Hound was not up to mischief. He felt sure that Bowser was in the house, but he wanted to be sure. Finally all was so need for hurry. He had been sure all the night of necessary. It would be foolish to run a risk that could be avoided. It always is.

Far off in the Green Forest the hooting call of Hooty the Great Horned Owl sounded. Peter gave a little start of relief. That call had sounded so faint that he knew Hooty was far away.

"I haven't got to worry about him," thought Peter. "If I thought he was near I wouldn't dare go out in the open. Now is my chance. I'll just follow Grandfather Frog's tracks and find out where he has gone. Then I will be satisfied."

Peter hopped out into the open and started along. He stopped every few hops to look and listen. He was scarcely more than a shadow in the moonlight. At first there were no other tracks. Then Peter came to a place where one of there the tracks were lost, for the ground was covered with the tracks of horses and men. Peter kept on and presently found Jimmy's tracks and Billy's. Then he came to Billy's tracks, and there Billy came to a stop. Peter saw that Billy had sat there for a long time. Then Billy's tracks and Jimmy's were all mixed up. Peter could make out

STOCK and MINE MARKET QUIET

Turnovers in Both Marts Are Light and Slightly Irregular

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Standard Stock and Mining Exchange opened another week's business with little turn-over remaining light and price action irregular in slightly lower in tendency. Changes were confined to a few issues, with losses somewhat in the majority at noon.

Teck-Hughes, which reported per share earnings of 15.76 cents for the three months ended November 30, dipped 3 to $4.50, but other highest priced golds were holding. Sisco also dropped back 3 to 55, while in the pennies McLeod River and Rubago were down fractions and Canadian Kirkland was slightly higher.

Noranda firmed a few cents to $18.50 but International Nickel eased off 10 to $9.50. Oils were mixed, Acme Gas adding 5 cents and Dominion Chemical Research and Noranda showing small recessions.

Trading was light.

Toronto, Feb. 1.—Toronto Stock Exchange marked time as dealings resumed for the week today. The market was waiting to see what the New York would take following the agreement between the carriers and employes and what effect it had on developments in the far east. There was no appreciable difference in the stocks on Toronto from either of the above mentioned sources.

C.P.R. opened firm but before mid day had swelled back to point to 18½ and in the base Metal group, Noranda was inactive, Smelters unchanged and International Nickel easier just under last week's close.

Ford and Canada Malting gained a small fraction, Loblaw A was softer at 35, Walkers at 3¼ was practically unchanged, Canadian Industrial Power were unchanged from last week's price.

Oils were sluggish. The leaders are unchanged to fractionally easier at the same price level. Canadian Oil was a little higher at 4¾, and International Petroleum fractionally above that again at 11. All were unchanged from Saturday's finals.

Scots' Birth Rate Lower 19 Per 1,000

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The Scottish birth rate for 1931 was 19 for every 1,000 population, according to provisional vital statistics issued today by the Registrar General of Scotland, as the lowest on record. Nevertheless, the figure is above that of England and Wales, which had a low birth rate in 1931 of 16.5 per 1,000.

The Scottish birth rate was 0.5 below the previous year and 0.9 below the mean birth rates for the previous five years.

The death rate, 13.3 per 1,000 was the same as the previous year, but 0.3 below the average for five years. The mortality figures were 62 per 1,000, compared with 66 per 1,000 for England and Wales.

HANGED FOR CRIME

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 1.—(Canadian Press)—Joseph McGrath, convicted butcher-knife murderer of his 18-year-old wife at Russell, was hanged at Headingly jail early today for the killing. He was pronounced dead ten minutes after the trap was sprung at 8.22 a.m.

Fourth Motiveless Murder Since Jan.

Chicago, Ills., Feb. 1—Another apparently motiveless murder in the fourth since January 1—puzzled police today.

The fourth victim, Earl Davis, 22 was beaten to death yesterday with a hammer as he slept in the garage where he was employed as a watchman. Investigation of the death in the same manner as the other three

CAR STRUCK WHILE PARKED

No One in Car at Time and Police Allege it Was Without Lights

Saturday evening about seven-thirty Miss Mary Ann Sheller, daughter of Otto Miller, left her car parked, facing east on the South side of Dundas street, near the children's Shelter and shortly afterwards it was found upon the sidewalk with its rear left side badly damaged.

Investigation by the city police investigated the accident and it is thought that the car was struck by a truck travelling east, as some pieces of wood, apparently from the body of a truck were found near the car.

The car was parked without lights according to the police report. There were no witnesses to the accident.

DRIVER'S NAME NOT DISCLOSED

One Killed and One Injured in Car Crash at Hamilton

HAMILTON, Ont. Feb. 1.—William Todd, 24, was killed and Walter Todd, 27, suffered critical injuries Saturday night, when they were struck by an automobile. Both were of Hamilton. The driver of the car, whose name was not disclosed, is being held on a charge of criminal negligence.

NOT ALONE IN OPPOSITION

"Hydro Not Attacked But Something Undermining it," Says Sinclair

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 1.—Hon. W. E. N. Sinclair, leader of the Conservative Opposition in the Ontario Legislature issued a statement last night in answer to declarations by Alfred Maguire, member of the Ontario Hydro Commission, in an address before the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association here last week.

Denial is made by Mr. Sinclair, that the charges opposed at a resolution before the Legislature in 1927 asking that the Ontario Government restrain him then Mackenzie King Dominion Administration to refuse the Georgian Bay Canal Scheme proposed at that time. The Liberal leader says Hansard shows the resolution was carried unanimously.

In reply to Mr. Maguire's statement that the Liberal Hydro policy attacked Hydro at the last session of the Legislature, Mr. Sinclair says "Our attack on Hydro was the purchase of Beck Niagara property and the House was scarcely closed when Dr. Willis Chipman, or John Aird, Jr., was disclosed. The liberals were not attacking Hydro, but something, which was undermining it."

FIRE WIPES OUT BUSINESS PART

Starts in Projection Room Doing Damage of $75,000

PEACE RIVER, Alta, Feb. 1. — (Canadian Press)—Believed to have started in the projection room of a theatre, fire destroyed eight buildings in the centre of business district of this town Saturday. Damage was estimated at $75,000.

Firemen were handicapped by low water pressure and the added difficulty of fighting the flames amid zero weather.

Hundreds of volunteer firemen assisted in the removal of merchandise from burning buildings. Some got out of control and razed everything in its path. The entire side of the business section of the street is a smouldering ruin today.

MILLEN SHOT ON RAT RIVER BY FUGITIVE

Member of Arctic Posse Shot to Death While Pursuing Trapper

PENNED IN

Guard Watches Barricade While Reinforcements Are Sent Out

Edmonton, Alta., Feb. 1.—Constable E. Millen was shot and killed by Albert Johnson, demented trapper, at a point thirty miles up the Rat River Saturday morning.

Details of the shooting reached Edmonton last night. It was reported to Aklavik by a portable radio station at the scene and word was then flashed to this city.

The Mounted Police in the rolling barrens of the upper Rat River, about 100 miles from where the stream flows into the rushing Mackenzie, according to the meagre early report, is cooperating. Johnson was fleeing westward from his dynamite shattered cabin in the Yukon boundary, about 100 miles distant. A journey of 200 miles separates him from the northern tip of the Yukon, would take him into Alaska, United States Territory.

CLUB MEMBERS BID GOODBYE

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Lane Recipent of Gifts Before Departure

Several members of the Hastings Club met at the home of Mr. A. W. Lane, 84 Gordon Street, to have a farewell time with Mr. Lane and family move from Belleville. After supper had been played, lunch was served, and at its conclusion an address and presentation was given as follows:

To Mr. A. W. Lane and family:

You are about to move to another place and so we wished to express to you our appreciation for joining in a social evening. Your efforts to promote goodwill, friendship and harmony in our Club have been very much appreciated. You have been a regular attendant, when possible, and enjoyed meeting with us and we are at your utmost in advancing our cause.

We have not always agreed about everything, but we do agree on one thing at least, and that is our interests that you have had, through your long term in this district, in all of work and consequently are moving in a new field to Collin's Bay. We wish you God-speed and in your new home may prosperity, health and happiness be with you at all.

On behalf of the Hastings Club we wish you to accept this lamp as a token of our esteem and affection, and hope, when you are using this lamp in your home, there may be no remembrances of your old pals and friends.

Signed by several members.

Mr. and Mrs. Lane expressed their surprise for the gift and thanked the friends for their kindness. Dancing was then indulged in until the wee small hours.

NO PREFERENCES FOR DOMINIONS

Lord Beaverbrook's Written Scathing Article on Subject

London, Feb. 1 (CP cable)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today said reports were current that the Dominions would receive such preferences under proposed tariff measures to be placed in the House of Commons by the government next Thursday.

The newspaper levelled a slashing editorial attack against the reported preferences for Dominions and declared the Dominions from any benefit from the new tariff proposals and the proposal was to reserve the question of preferences for discussion at the Imperial Economic Conference to be held next summer in Ottawa.

The rich mineral discoveries in the vicinity of Great Bear lake have no doubt, lead to more extensive prospecting throughout the little known sections of the North-west Territories.

F. H. DOBBIN PASSES AWAY

Well - known Peterboro' Newspaper Man Succumbs

Peterboro, Ont., Jan. 30—Francis Brucks Dobbin, veteran editor and publisher died here early today after a few days' illness. Mr. Dobbin was born in Watertown, N.Y., February 14, 1850, and came to Canada when three years later with his parents. He early received his education at the Union and Grammar School. With that equipment he commenced in the newspaper business as a compositor on the Peterboro Review from 1864 to 1869. From the Review he went to Lindsay in 1881 as manager of the Lindsay Post remaining there until 1887 when he returned to the Review as a partner in the proprietorship and also as managing director. He held that position until his retirement in 1914.

During those 27 years from 1887 until 1914 Mr. Dobbin held a controlling interest in the Review which was published as a daily and semi-weekly. His standing and his reputation in the newspaper world was reflected in the honor he was conferred by the election as president of the Daily Publishers' Association Press Association.

For five years Mr. Dobbin was a member of the Peterboro city council. He was also a member of the Board of Trade, for a time, three years president of the Peterboro Agricultural Society and secretary of Old Home Week three years ago. In 1881 Mr. Dobbin married Miss Lucas, or other connected with practically every branch of life in Peterboro' district. He has left a written history of this city and district.

He leaves a wife, son, Ross, who is manager of the Peterboro Utilities Commission; Wm. R., a printer, and four daughters, Mrs. H. C. Hyde, Montreal; Mrs. George Darnell, St. Catharines; Mrs. S. C. Cook, Toronto and Miss Daisy at home.

French View Will Be Defined Monday

Paris, Jan. 30 (AP)—Marius Moutet, Socialist member of the Chamber of Deputies, filed an interpellation today in the Chamber asking what attitude France proposes to adopt on view of the bloody events in Japan which have reached a state of war."

Moutet's interpellation was filed immediately after publication here of a dispatch from Nanking saying the Chinese government had decided to take the matter upon itself.

The government, it was understood, probably will not reply to the interpellation until next week.

DISCOVER 11 NEW OBJECTS

Searching Parties Have Not Yet Found Missing Submarine

Portland, England, Jan. 30—The flotilla searching for the sunken submarine M-3 discovered 11 new objects on the bed of the Channel off Portland yesterday. Six divers, investigating under ideal conditions, found all to be old wrecks.

Some of the finds were the old Great War. Although all hope of rescuing the crew of 60 men on the M-2 has been abandoned by Admiralty officials, the search will be continued.

Large quantities of oil bubbled up to the surface in West Bay, but it was impossible to establish where they came from.

DALHOUSIE GIRL ATTENDS MEET

Will Represent Her University in Buffalo

Sussex, N.B., Jan. 30—Dalhousie University will be represented at the quadrennial convention of the Student Christian Movement of Canada and the United States, which opens in Buffalo, N.Y., on Thursday, by Miss Mary Freere, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Freere, Sussex, who was the one of two Canadians placed on the committee of arrangements.

Miss Freere had a most interesting account to give the convention. The Canadian students' delegation will include the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, to appoint a student on the Canadian Section of the Continuation conference on disarmament which will be held in Geneva. The 2000 United States' student delegates voted unanimously for the Bennett suggestion that Professor Ralph Hartley Easton, Amherst, Massachusetts, Mass., ask President Hoover to appoint a student of the United States delegation.

The delegation also voted by a large majority to send a telegram of pity to the Emperor of Japan and that Canadian and United States prayers be offered for the safety of other governments. The convention voted against compulsory military training in the United States by a small majority.

Miss Freere was graduated from the Sussex High School in 1927 and after graduating from Mt. Allison, was at present in her senior year in Dalhousie University, Halifax, taking co-ed' residence and is to receive her bachelor of arts degree at the convocation in May.

New Real Estate Firm is Formed

Belleville is to have a new real-estate firm. Messrs Robert Deyo and Ralph Bell have entered into a partnership arrangement and will open business on Monday, February 1st, at 256 Front street, east.

The new company will carry on the usual operations surrounding the purchase and sale of real estate and will, in addition, look after rentals, leases, mortgage loans and insurance.

Mr. Deyo is a native Canadian having been born in Prontenac County, Ontario. He has been a resident of Belleville for more than a year. He has had years of successful experience in the real estate business in the Western States, including Oregon and Washington. He has, during recent years, been in business in Toronto.

Mr. Green is well known to the public of Belleville. For years he has been a salesman at the shop of E. Green & Son, Ltd., as manufacturer and producer. Mr. Green is unusually popular with the public he has served.

ERECTS 67 STOREY BUILDING IN N. Y.

Mr. Alfred J. S. Holton, a Belleville boy, has made considerable prominence in his profession as an architect, in New York City. At present he is bringing to completion the sixty-seven storey building for the Cities Service Corporation at 70 Pine Street, New York.

This building towers 950 feet from the street level to the flag pole up and dominates the southern end of Manhattan Island.

Messrs. Clinton, Russell, Holton, George, is the firm of architects with which Mr. Holton is associated.

MASSEY HALL REMAINS OPEN

Hon. Vincent Massey Contributes $20,000 to Cover Deficit

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)— Fears of Massey Hall—Toronto's ancient music hall—would be closed down by the $20,000 financial gift to culties were dispelled when Hon. Vincent Massey, Chairman of the Foundation, announced that the Music Hall announced that the Music Hall announced that the $20,000 to cover notes which are held by the banks. The famous hall was built in 1894 by the late Hart. A. Massey, grandfather of Mr. Vincent Massey.

"The Trustees now must turn their attention to the avoidance of future deficits," Mr. Massey said, "while they had the alternative of selling the property and applying the proceeds to charity, they were not inclined to recommend such a course.

"The foundation would assume the $20,000 debt as an emergency measure," Mr.-Massey stated, "with the hope that it would not be a similar action in future. It had no intention of undertaking to be a perpetual subsidy of Massey Hall.

"The money which Massey Hall was left in trust, that of providing education and high-class entertainment for the people of Toronto, has been more or less achieved from the start," he said, "until recently the style of entertainment offered under national artist was regulated not by conditions in Toronto but by the conditions in the world. We were in a situation which could not continue and we have come to the end of the debt.

"It is my opinion and that of the trustees that the future of the hall lies in orchestral music. Mr. Massey said. "Now that Toronto has a permanent symphony orchestra, which in time will become one of the finest orchestras in America, Toronto was more and more acquiring the atmosphere habit, and the next step was to put the orchestra on a permanent basis and arrange a series of popular concerts which would enlist public support."

Acoustic properties of the building—a three-storey brick structure without end or side windows—were not a concern, Mr. Massey said, "it was designed with the acoustics in mind and I would like to say that I have seldom found one so near perfection as this is for speaking."

PREMIER ASKS LARGER GRANT

Appears as Suppliant For York Children's Aid Society

Toronto, Jan. 30.—Premier George S. Henry of Ontario adopted the role of suppliant when he appeared before York County Council to ask the council to increase its grant to the York Children's Aid Society's Aid Society, because of the additional burden placed on the organization through unemployment.

Premier Henry referred to himself as a promoter of humanitarian activities of the county within which he has been a resident.

"This isn't the time when in the Province I have the greatest, largest, increased expenditure," he said, "or even in the years having just recently sent out economy suggestions to all municipalities. This is probably one of the times in which you should economize," he went on.

EUCHRE PARTY HELD AT CANNIFTON

A successful euchre party, the second during the past months, was held at the home of Mrs. Mitchell, Canniffon, on Friday evening, January 29th, when a large number were present and after the euchre hands had been played refreshments were served. Captain Ayland proposed a vote of thanks to Mrs. Mitchell and others who gave of their time in making the gathering a most enjoyable one.

The prize winners were as follows: Ladies' first, Mrs. Latimore; second, Mrs. Ashmore; consolation, Mrs. Van Dusen. Gents' first, Mr. Seal; second, Mr. Webb; consolation, Mr. Stanley Pope.

The proceeds were in aid of the Canniffon Anglican Mission and will go toward the erection of a church.

5-YEAR ARTS COURSE QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

Kingston, Jan. 30.—A new five-year course in arts, to take effect with commencement of the term at Queen's University, has been prepared by the authorities of the University. The object of lengthening the course has been approved by Dr. W. G. Fyfe and Dr. W. E. Mc-Neil. The changed course will not affect any of those registered at present, but will apply to students registering next year. The requirements for a B.A. with honors will be equivalent of 23 courses. Each course will run three hours per week and will be divided into major and minor course groups.

U. S. Warships on Way From Manila

Manila, Jan. 30—Eight more destroyers of the United States Asiatic fleet were ordered here today to dash for Shanghai on their belated mission to protect lives in the new area of conflict between China and Japan.

Four destroyers sail at hurriedly yesterday and 4 others were made as reports of fighting in the Chinese city were received.

Three other destroyers, a dozen submarines and a flotilla of minesweepers will leave Manila tomorrow.

There were rumors of possible trouble between the large Chinese colony here and the much smaller Japanese colony, but both the consul-general of the two countries denied the reports.

"GO STRAIGHT" FROM NOW ON

Eludes Police For Four Years But Gives Himself Up

Brantford, Ont., Jan. 30. — Four years ago Leonard Gunn robbed the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo station at Scotland, Ont. A warrant was issued for his arrest but he eludes the police and lived here under an assumed name. A few days ago, inked by conscience, he handed himself up to Brantford police. Yesterday he was arraigned before the charge, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to three years in the Ontario reformatory. He declared he would "go straight" when he came out.

London-Capetown Air Mail Starts

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(By the Canadian Press) — Another great stride in the history of the England-South Africa route was made this month when the mail from London to Cape Town air mail service started. The plane left London Jan. 2 and arrived at the Cape Town on Jan. 31. During the first month one mail a week was sent—with the exception that three dispatched between Christmas and New Year's.

Aboard the first plane, Sir Vyell and Lady Vyvyan and G. G. Bertram, Deputy director of Civil Aviation. Regular fare will be $650.

The first experiment of the route from this country to Kenya Colony, have been in operation since March last, and have proved already of great utility in the rapid transport of mails and passengers to and from Central Africa, while the final section, from Kenya to the Cape, will have now been organized completely in respect of the installations of the aerodromes, intermediate lighting-apparatus, wireless equipment, weather reporting stations, and rest-houses for passengers.

Passengers leaving here on London will fly in one of the latest 36-passenger Imperial Airways liners, being transformed at Bristol to a big all-metal flying boat, capable of crossing the Atlantic.

Although, at this time, the schedule allows 11 day, for the flight from London to the Cape, it is hoped that after operating experience has been obtained this time-table will be reduced to nine days, and with this end in view a number of fast mail-carrying aeroplanes are likely to be added to the "Atlanta" class, have been ordered by Imperial Airways and Messrs. Armstrong-Whitworth Aircraft Ltd. These new machines will have a high maximum speed of between 140 and 150 miles-an-hour, and will cruise at 120 miles-an-hour.

Obtains Certificate For Blind Flying

LONDON, Jan. 30—(By the Canadian Press)—Just before Christmas Lady Bailey, one of the first women pilots in the world, had a most remarkable flight to the Cape and back alone in her plane and received a certificate for blind flying. She is also the first woman to receive a commercial pilot's qualification. Her success also denotes the growth of the movement towards amusement flying since a course of instruction was started at Heston only a few months ago. The development of instruments and navigation aids to be able for blind flying instruction has led to the preparation of courses for the Service officer and for the civilian pilot.

Blind flying means ability to accept the evidence of instruments as to what an aeroplane is doing when clouds, fog, or darkness deprive the pilot of all ordinary visual aids outside the machine. The pilot has to learn to disregard the testimony of his senses and to accept the proof offered by his instruments. His training is done in a hooded cockpit, and, the experience of most pupils is that their senses disagree widely with the evidence of the instruments. Mrs. Victor Bruce, who underwent instruction recently at the School of Air Service Training at Hamble, suffered much more unpleasant sensations in recovering from a spin than in the spin itself—a reversal of the usual order.

Happiness is always a home-made article.

KALADAR MEN GOING STRONG

Letter Received By Paper Tells of Work Going on

Friends of the Belleville men who are employed in the gold and base metal construction work at Kaladar, Ont., will be interested in the following letter which was received recently by the Ontario Intelligencer, from Mr. Ellis:

January 24, 1932

Dear Sirs:—

I am writing to let you know how the boys are getting on here and how the work is going. Everything is good health and happy, some of them are working today on the drilling as the weather is fine. We had a good breakfast this morning; every man had three eggs, potatoes, three kinds of preserves or coffee and fruit and if that is not a good breakfast—well, I believe the major does not get that himself.

Well, yesterday we were digging into the canvas to see what's eggs they were a light cream color with small brown spots. If I had anything to write to Fabergé now I would have done so. The boys said it was a waste of your money to mail the daily paper as they would be reading it 2 days after. I get it the first words as a rule are: "What a low in Belleville!" The boys wish me to thank you very much for your kindness which is very much to the liking of some of our home town.

The Belleville men have been returned home, one for sickness, and Mr. Ellis, Jr., has gone with all the news. Every man wishes to be remembered to his friends and also to the new mayor and council.

Yours truly,

W. J. HAMER.

Camp 4, Kaladar.

EIGHT MORE ARE ON WAY

Destroyers of Asiatic Fleet Sent to Shanghai

MANILA, Jan. 30.— Eight more destroyers of the United States Asiatic fleet were cleared here today to dash for Shanghai on short notice to protect lives in the new area of conflict between China and Japan.

Four destroyers sailed hurriedly yesterday and four additional preparations were made as reports of fighting in the Chinese City were received.

RETURN BOUT IS IN OFFING

Larry Gains Mayo Meet Same Opponent in Near Future

London, Jan. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—The Earl of Durham's famous "Lambton Lambton), by Sir Thomas Lawrence is to be sold at Lambton Castle, near Ayrt. Although not to be sold by auction, part of the castle's contents would be sold on the premises, the Earl announced in the list of pictures outside London is surprising.

Mr. Lawrence, who said a prominent member of Christie's when told by the Chronicle of the announcement. Lord Durham stated his decision to "sell out" in the past, had previously received an offer of $400,000 for the "Red Boy," made by Jules Bache, of New York.

DRIVES 70 MILES HOUR TO GET CELL

Kingston, Jan. 30. — Despondent because he had no money and had no money to pay for his board and lodging, George Irons, an able-bodied young man, decided he would do something that would land him in jail. He would be sure of three square meals a day and a bed to lie in by the time he left there. He stole an auto, drove round recklessly, was arrested and in the police court this morning he was sentenced to one year in the Kingston Penitentiary. The stolen car belonged to Herbert Coughlin, Motorcycle Constable Down leaded that he had been forced to chase the man at a speed of 70 miles an hour in order to make the arrest.

SUFFRAGETTS' BOLD SCHEME

Attempt Made to Kidnap The Prince in 1914

LONDON, Jan. 30.—(CP)—Suffragettes narrowly missed kidnapping the Prince of Wales when he was an Oxford undergraduate, it is revealed in a book of reminiscences published today by Cecil Hunt, formerly a prominent detective at Scotland Yard. The prince, in March 1914, was going for a day's motoring trip when Pankhurst plotted to block the road with a large motor car. The plan was to pretend they were ill, then to entice the prince when his car stopped.

As things happened, the prince's car broke down before he emerged into another, the kidnapping plot proved foiled by the change.

JIM THE CONQUERER

by PETER B. KYNE

"En route to Valle Verde, my dear," I've wired the old gentleman a hearty invitation to come down and visit us, and he has accepted and was on his way." Thus Jaime Miguel Iñguenes—the Hon. Mex., he comforted himself with the thought that it was only a white lie and was to be pardoned to vivifying the word of honor to Crooked Bill not to reveal to his niece the news that only two days previous he had been in Los Algodones, plotting against their peace and happiness.

"You're such a dear, Jimmy. So thoughtful. Dear Uncle Bill. I know he's missed me. Does he know I'm hurt?"

"Yes, the papers carried the story. I've wired him on the train to save his tears until our wedding day."

"Are we engaged, Jimmy? I can't remember that you've ever asked me to marry you."

"Oh, didn't I, sweetheart?"

"Never."

He rubbed his chin and his eyes roved over her whimsically. "I suppose I was afraid I might speak out of my turn, but of course when you came stampeding into that corral yesterday and broke the glad news to me, I couldn't, as a man of honor, pretend I didn't understand you. So, I rather took it for granted."

He bent low over her and swept her cheeks with his eager lips. Still interested in his work of irrigation, brown babies and choloi men and women, bent, dust and purple lights on the buttes at dawn and sunset, darling?"

She nodded. "I can be a good partner, Jimmy. I never had any responsibilities—and now I want to badly to share yours—always. How are your wounded getting?"

"Taking an interest in life. Mrs. Canby is still wrestling with my over our engagement, and Robbie is jealous as a collie dog. He has an idea that when we're married he'll have to leave the ranch."

"I wouldn't even have a ground squirrel leave this ranch, Jimmy."

"Then we'll keep Robbie and his ma on the payroll. After all, we owe Robbie a great deal. If he had not blabbed to Ken Hobart, that unfortunate Yankee, Glen Hackett, might have got you on the rebound, although to be quite frank, it was never my intention to permit you to escape. I schemed too darned hard to get you here—and sorry that Jaime Miguel Iñguenes rolls the crust for a pie, nobody else is going to eat it."

"Does Uncle Bill know of our engagement?"

Don Jaime produced the telegram and read:

"I never figured on you taking over my principal responsibility but now that you insist on being reckless tak; a tip from one who knows stop do not spoil her story I did that long ago stop you are as welcome in our family as the silence that follows a congressional oration.

"Sheepishly yours.

"Uncle Bill".

"Why does he sign himself sheepishly yours,' Jimmy dear?"

"Some far-fetched allusion to the sheep that brought you here, Bobby Just some of his grimpo humor, I imagine."

"I see. She was silent, tuning his brown, strong, useful hands counting the callouses on them. Hands that had been good—and would always know it. the hands that build empires," hands that, when folded at last in the peace that would mean their perfect would be kissed by lowly people and sprinkled with their tears.

"It will be forever and ever, Jimmy," she whispered, "and I'm so happy—and grateful."

"The Iñguenes men keep their promises," he assured her gravely.

She thought of Glenn Hackett. "Poor dear," she murmured absently.

"He never had a chance." Don Jaime assured her, with a flash of that prescience, that clairvoyancy, that would always make him, for Roberta, a new, puzzling, yet wholly understandable human being and a joy forever. Yes, he would be the same always, yet always new, always challenging her interest, always holding it. Of him she girl thought.It might be said that she could not wither nor custom stale his infinite variety.

"I'll get my guitar and sing you a little Spanish love song my grandmother taught me," he suggested. "It's very old. It came to Peru with Pizarro and worked forth. Oh, by the way, I forgot something! Let's get this on record officially. Miss Antrim, will you do me the great honor to marry me?"

"You outrageous Colt," she laughed. "You're the last of the troubadours. Of course I will."

THE END.

Selma Tells All

Socially, Selma Gleason, signing herself R. Gleason, of the Gleasons, and Wayne Colt, of the Sun Telegram, got on remarkably well considering the fact that they were in star reporters on rival newspapers, and fought tooth and nail on every consignment. But—that was business.

It was on their third trip abroad, that Selma concluded it was silly nonsense. Wayne thinking he couldn't marry on account of his kid sisters. Of course a depend-ent woman—but a woman who could help keep the pot boiling, that was different. He was young. Something ought to be done about it. It would bear thinking about, and when Selma started to think out the solution of a problem—well it was as good as solved, besides, they had reached that stage when moonlight and music and everything that created a romantic atmosphere made them accident-incommunicative. Selma decided she had done about enough reaching out for nothing.

They were on the forward deck. It was a cool, crisp, and moonlight night. No moon, but that didn't relieve the pressure of other moons. Then, they were all by their lone-selves, that is, nearly; only an old Scotch man, stone blind and deaf tottered about on the aft deck. They could hear the tapping of his stick as he walked the whtif of a story aboard—not even a glib of which he was having a lot. Even the distant scent of a story would prove disturbing. The faintest essence of anything that could be use as copy seemed to fascinate Selma at the moment.

Leaning against the deck rail, Selma carefully removed .Wayne's cigaret from his mouth, threw it overboard, and drew him toward her.

"Wayne, are you going to ask me to marry you—or aren't you?" she asked, straight from the shoulder.

Wane snapped his square jaws together and hit big hand shut into fists. "Selma, I'm not going to ask you to marry me. You don't know. I can't, and you know perfectly well why." His voice was hard.

Selma couldn't see his face clearly but she knew how it looked. Tan and lean—blue eyes, flecked with gold, and hardened by sun and up emotion. She liked his broad, generous mouth. It looked generous now, but stern, she knew that too, and smiled.

"That's fine. I'm not quite sure why you won't ask me. If I thought you didn't love me, I—" She stopped suddenly.

Wayne stood perfectly still, silent. The stillness, punctuated by the sharp echo of the old Scotchman's stick on the aft deck, had a desperate feel. The wind stirred. Selma's silk scarf floated unreally between them. Wayne's head was turned—he appeared intent on the liner's wake.

"I don't think what you like," he said abruptly. His voice seemed brittle under pressure.

Whatever conclusion you come to wouldn't change matters," he added doggedly.

Again they were silent. Selma snapped it with a laugh.

"So—as usual you are prepared to fight me to the last ditch? Very well. I can think what I like." She laughed and snapped a defiant finger under his nose.

Unexpectedly to them both they were in each other's arms, for one thrilling, breathless moment. The feel of his hard, young mouth against hers, and the hint of desperation in the arms that held her close, made her aware that he could not be entirely angry. Then, there was something more that had to be done about it.

"Perhaps I think you're foolish to let life slip by like you're doing. However, that's your business. Experience has taught me not to bother about how folks get the way they are—only snap up the pieces and use 'em. She laughed, a defiant little laugh.

Wayne caught her by the shoulders.

"Selma—Selma," he repeated hoarsely.

For a moment she thought—but never mind what she thought.

It was the day after they landed that anything really happened. He stood in the middle of Selma's little living room. She faced him defiantly.

The Times had published an announcement of their engagement, conspicuous—you couldn't miss it.

Wayne was serious, a bit panic stricken. He looked at Selma with a pitiful appeal that was in eye y line of his six feet of brawn.

Selma patted him down beside the chesterfield and crumpled his hair. His big hand cupped hers, held it in and she was purposely too close to him for safety.

Suddenly, something must have snapped, something that penetrated all the separate layers of pride and obligations that kept the soft pedal on Wayne's emotions. He caught her in his arms she settled with a sigh of content. It was a glorious relief to find he knew.

"Never thought I'd find being licked—ever," he you—so—so—"

Her lips were conveniently near, so he kissed them that way.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 27.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Near Tarzan's prison, women were now preparing many little fires and fetching cooking pots filled with water. For a great feast was to be celebrated before the night was many hours older. Already a group of black warriors, their bodies smeared with white and blue paint, stood about a stout stake in the centre of the circling fires, waiting in savage anticipation for the coming orgy.

Tarzan of the Apes was to be the victim of their bestial appetites. And such an end! The most unthinkably horrid death that it is given a white man to die. He strained his mighty muscles at the bonds that pinioned him, but even his giant brawn could not budge them. Well he knew the fate that was to be his end. He writhed in agony at the thought that he had been trapped like a silly, dumb creature.

Tarzan was glad that Jane would never know his ghastly fate. He believed Rokoff's threats concerning her were merely blustering lies; that in reality his wife was safe in London. "But my little son!" he groaned. Tarzan of the Apes, mighty lord of the jungle, the only one in all the world fitted to find and save him from the horrors Rokoff has planned for him, will perish the boy's last chance for safety."

Through the thick, tangled jungle, for two nights, a giant, lithe creature pursued its lonely way. Half famished for food it had halted only once to make it kill. In utter silence, under the equatorial moon, it kept steadfastly on its way, and now had come to the palisades that surrounded a large native village. Here the beast sniffed for a moment and then turning its head listened with up-pricked ears.

JOCKEY KILLED NEAR CARRYING PLACE

Frank Dainty, Sitting in Back Seat Fatally Injured, Car Hits Pole

Confusion of Driver at Turn to Consecon Causes Crash

WELLKNOWN RIDER

Jockey Working at Consecon Stables on "Breaking" Yearlings

A skidding car careening off the road at the junction of Bethesville and Consecon roads, near Carrying Place, shortly after twelve o'clock Sunday morning, ended up against a telephone pole near the side of the road at that point, wrecked the machine, shook three other passengers up severely and claimed the life of Mr. Frank Dainty, internationally known and prominent jockey of Toronto. The passengers who were with him in the car were also injured with minor bruises were Mr. Henry Hare, Mr. George Pollard and Mr. George Hardy, Jr., all of Toronto. The driver, Mr. Hare, after being questioned in this city shortly after the accident was taken to Picton Sunday afternoon and was held by the authorities pending bail. Bail was arranged on Sunday at $5,000 and the driver was allowed out.

Mr. George Hardy, senior, well known Toronto sportsman, in whose employ the late Mr. Dainty had been in, had been following the party in another car some distance behind and arrived on the scene shortly after the accident. Placing the injured man in his car he immediately set out for the Belleville General Hospital, but before this city had been reached death had occurred from what was believed to be internal injuries. A preliminary inquest was held in the burial parlors of F. C. Martin and Son, Church Street, at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, and after establishing the identity of the person and taking one or two questions from the witness, Mr. George Hardy the inquest was adjourned until the evening of February 4th at 8 o'clock at the police station, Belleville.

Prior to his association with Mr. Hardy the deceased had been in the employ of Mr. J. J. Barnes, also of Toronto, and for whom he had won many races both in this country and the United States, reports both were well known. Recently he transferred to Mr. Hardy of Carrying Road, Toronto, and had been in charge of the latter's harness stables. Evidence at the inquest on both sides of the border had followed the activities of Mr. Dainty closely and very many local residents of this district recall many outstanding races in which the latter had consistently romped home ahead of the field.

The party had been spending a week end in the cottage owned by Mr. Hardy in Amelisburg and had been returning there from a visit to Belleville when the accident occurred. The road at the point where the car left the road is a tobacco with a patch of gravel intersecting the centre of it.

In conversation with the driver of the car it was learned that just as the road they were travelling was one that they were very familiar with, and when they reached the intersection each occupant of the car seemed to have a different opinion of which turn to take. Accordingly the driver when that point in the road had been reached, swung the car to the left and immediately put on the brakes to slow the machine down. Loose gravel at the intersection, however seemed to roll from under the wheels and cause the rear end of the machine to swing around, off the road and against the telephone pole. Mr. Dainty, who had been sitting in the rear seat appeared to have been thrown with some force against the back of the front seat and was internally ruptured. The machine was almost a total loss and while the rest of the passengers were quite badly shaken up they were not seriously injured. Immediately upon receipt of word of the accident in this city Traffic Officer Frink at once set out to investigate the scene and question the other members of the party. Measurements were completed Sunday morning by both officers, Frink and Sykes, and were presented to the Coroner.

At the inquest which was held in the Martin Burial Parlors, Mr. Chas A. Payne, K.C., assisted in the investigation with Coroner Dr. G. S. Crook in the chair. Jurors, who were summoned by Coroner's constable Sergeant Harman, were Foreman Alf. W. Mallory and Messrs. J. Barlow, Thos. Thorne, Thos. Holland, W. R. Vallance, E. Deacon, Chas. Walters, S. J. Wedden and W. Thompson.

After being sworn in the jurors viewed the body and then returned to their places. Mr. Geo. Hardy, who was the only witness called stated that the deceased had been employed by him and that he had formerly resided in Toronto. The inquest was then adjourned until Thursday evening, February 4th at which time it will be resumed. The body will be taken to Toronto for burial.

The famous Medicine-Maligne lakes system of Jasper Park, Alberta, was first stocked with Eastern speckled trout in 1928, and the fish are now abundant.

Special Easter Fare Announced

Montreal, Feb. 1.—Travellers in Canada at Eastertide will have the benefit of the same ticket and reduced fare privileges as were granted them at Christmas, according to an announcement made by C. P. Boyd, chairman of the Canadian Passenger Association, on behalf of the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian National and other railways of Canada. Special concessions will also be made in favor of non-resident pupils and teachers in Canadian schools. This is the first time in many years that such concessions have been made.

The railways will charge one first-class fare and one-quarter for round-trip on the general public, permitting starting of journey on Thursday, March 24, Friday, March 25, Saturday, March 26, and Sunday March 27, with return starting up to and including Tuesday, March 29, 1932.

Arrangements for passengers from schools will be completed through the principals of such institutions in co-operation with the Canadian Passenger Association.

Prehistoric Elk Antler is Found

Hamilton, Feb. 1.—Workmen digging in Ollmaa Brothers' gravel pit at West Hamilton late Saturday uncovered the antler of a prehistoric elk which they later conveyed to McMaster University.

Prof. W. H. McNairn of the geology department said the antler probably belonged to an elk migrating north shortly after the glacial period about 25,000 years ago.

The discovery was made in a shaft thirty feet below the surface, and during recent weeks other bones have been found. The antler measured five feet in length and one and a half inches in diameter, and was in a good state of preservation.

TECK HUGHES GIVES REPORT

Gross Income For Quarter of Fiscal Year is $1,485,460

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 1.—Gross income of $1,485,460 for the first quarter of its fiscal year is shown by Teck-Hughes gold mines in an interim report just issued. Gross income in the three months preceding was $1,586,545.

Total operating costs for the period under review are figured at $578,700, compared with $643,028 in the previous quarter. Net operating profit is estimated at $755,150, as against $803,078 for the last quarter of 1931. This is after setting aside $78,200 for depreciation and $79,810 for taxes.

FIREMAN BREAKS LEG

KINGSTON, Feb. 1.—Fire of unknown origin broke out in the reading-room of the Red Cross depot, Clarence Street, Saturday morning, and as a result the room was gutted and only the good work of the Fire Department prevented the blaze from reaching much more serious proportions. Fireman William MacDonald of the Brock Street Station suffered a broken leg when he jumped from the truck and a loop of hose caught his leg.

CHANGES SEEN AT OPENING

New Lieut.-Governor Will Officiate For First Time

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 1.—Several changes will be noted at the opening of the fourth session of Nova Scotia's seventeenth legislature since confederation.

No date has been set, but it is customary to start the sessions in February or early in March. Last year the opening date was February 19th.

Hon. W. H. Covert, who succeed the late Hon. Frank Stanfield as lieutenant governor of the province will officiate in the legislature the first time since theappointment.

The front line of the government forces has been shuffled many times since the Conservatives were swept into power in 1925, and this year a number of ministers will be in seats new to them.

Col. the Hon. Gordon S. Harrington will face the assembly for his second session as prime minister, but he will be without his former first lieutenant and attorney general, Hon. W. L. Hall, who now is a justice of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. In Justice Hall's place will be Hon. John Doull, who resigned his position as provincial secretary to become attorney general. Hon. J. Fred Fraser, formerly chairman of the Nova Scotia Power Commission, will appear as provincial secretary, Dr. Fergus Little Halifax physician, not a member of the assembly, has been appointed a member of the power commission, but it is understood Premier Harrington will assume the responsibilities of chairman. Hon. Joseph MacDonald, member for Cape Breton Centre, will move up to the front benches as minister of the government without portfolio.

The opposition line-up will appear much the same as last year. A. S. Macmillan, veteran debater and former minister of highways in the Armstrong government, will lead the Liberal forces. He will have the able support of William Chisholm, K.C., who resigned the leadership last year because of ill-health. Mr. Chisholm has been in better health the last few months and is expected to take an active part in the legislative battles this winter.

Angus L. Macdonald, former professor of law, who succeeded Mr. Chisholm as chief of the Liberals in the province, is not a member of the assembly but he will be a prominent figure during the session. He will occupy a seat at the right of his followers in one of the chairs reserved for distinguished visitors. Last year Mr. Macdonald was on the floor nearly every minute the house was in session. He was in the gray from start to finish, although he was not permitted to speak.

FOUR SEATS IN SENATE VACANT

Likely to Be Filled This Week at Caucus Meeting

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—The four vacancies in the Canadian Senate will likely be filled this week. Two vacancies are in the Nova Scotia representation, one for Montreal and the other from Ontario. It is expected Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen will be named to fill the Ontario vacancy caused by the death of Sir George Foster, and that Mr. Meighen will be chosen leader of the government forces in the Senate at the caucus of Conservative Senators on Thursday. The caucus will be held soon after the opening of parliament. The present Conservative leader, Senator W. B. Willoughby, has resigned from the leadership on account of ill-health.

Hon. E. B. Rhodes will likely be sworn in this week as Minister of Finance, relieving Premier R. B. Bennett of that portfolio. Mr. Rhodes will continue to hold the Fisheries portfolio for the present.

Received But Few Dollars For Trouble

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 1.—Two armed men, who held up W. H. Chalmer's grocery here Saturday night received only a few dollars for their troubles. The till had been emptied of the Saturday takings a short time before. A stolen automobile recovered yesterday at Kingston Junction is believed to have been used by the robbers on making their escape.

BRITAIN ASKS UNITED STATES

sight that while the Japanese fleet was passing the plant Chinese ashore set off a bunch of firecrackers and probably the Japanese thought they were being fired on.

Besides those bursts of shooting which the people of the International Settlement have come to regard as normal, a steady fusillade of shots rang from the area at 4 p.m. There was no more firing from the north blast so one knew what no one cared to go and find out. The Nationalists who live in the city of fear jostled each other in the struggle for company and safety, the British and other foreign troops hastily throwing up barbed wire defenses.

NANKING, China, Feb. 1.—(AP)—Thirty thousand of the finest troops in all China streamed into the city today and lined up back to riverfront where a number of Japanese warships lay at anchor.

They barricaded themselves behind sandbag fortifications on the Bund and the situation grew tenser while civilians moved back into safer ground.

Many refugees came down only a few days ago from Shanghai bringing word of the new and terrifying aspect of developments there. Had they piled into British steamers bound back for Shanghai, dozens of cities would have been sending parties up the docks but there were no open boats.

This evening the Japanese Consul General called on Dr. C. T. Wang, Chinese Foreign Minister, who remained behind when the seat of government was moved a year last week to Loyang. The consul logged a formal protest against fighting at Shanghai, charging that the Chinese started it.

The Foreign Minister retorted that since the fighting began in Japanese territory the Japanese must have been the instigators. The conference ended without having accomplished anything substantial.

Press of Japan

Shanghai, Feb. 1.—Four or the world's five great powers—Japan is the fifth—stood on the brink of war after a bloody Sunday.

The British cruiser Suffolk arrived from Hong Kong this morning with a party of marines aboard, while the cruiser Berwick, with 800 troops and one machine gun company aboard, sailed from Hong Kong at 3 p.m.

Four United States destroyers steamed into the harbor during the afternoon and four of six more left Manila Shanghai bound.

Barbed Wire

French authorities mounted machine guns at important street intersections and barricaded other streets with barbed wire. Chinese newspapers said 10,000 troops of the Japanese troops enter the French section. A small force of Italian marines joined the joint forces patrolling the boundary line of the International Settlement.

Fifty patients, all of infectious diseases, were moved out of the settlement's isolation hospital and guarded while they were moved yesterday. They were taken to a hospital in the French concession.

All Japanese residents in the northern quarters of the city have been moved into Japan territory.

Fears Fell

All through the entire lower section of the Chinese River valley a wave of apprehension spread. Reports from various cities was that fear-stricken as Hankow, 650 miles away, told of feverish preparations for the Japanese communities against possible Chinese attacks.

This stirring a shower of rumors came from somewhere near the central position of the line of the Soochow Creek close to the border of the Honkew district.

Crowds were quiet but no one was wounded. The passersby rushed to cover when one heard a sudden quick succession. Japanese marines surrounded the building and set up machine guns, but they could not locate the source of the firing.

The International authorities stepped in and established a demilitarized guard of the "white" Russian section of the settlement, garrisoned.

It was reported that Japanese marines were in the position but the Japanese authorities denied this.

Negotiations by the British and United States consuls to bring about truce between the Japanese and Chinese broke down. There were reports that the Chinese had agreed upon but the foreign authorities denied this and said the peace negotiations had not changed since the close of the conference at which no agreement was reached.

The British and the British marines and the knowledge that additional British forces were on the way, together with the lull in firing throughout the city, eased the tension in the foreign colony. In addition to the British and Japanese the only ones from Hong Kong the British aircraft carrier Hermes had embarked at her piers since the second ready to proceed north at the shortest notice, while H.M.S. Danae berland, now in drydock at Hong Kong, also was ordered to prepare for service with all speed.

Defense Guard

The defence forces of the International Settlement increased their guard as much as possible. Using the forces at their command, the authorities began the construction of secondary defense lines within the settlement. A tour of the British ment's western borders, where British troops, volunteer corps, United States marines and a small force of Italian marines were patrolling revealed conditions quiet.

A hectic situation prevailed in the business section of the Settlement. The streets were jammed with all kinds of humanity. Thousands of Chinese refugees, afoot or in various types of conveyance, rushed about in search of safer territory. Private automobiles laden with families and personal belongings, scrambled for traffic clearance in the middle of a jam of automobiles and pedestrians.

Most of the Chinese shops were closed. Foreign stores continued business. Restaurants remained closed, but Chinese bankers persuaded compradores, shop to accept Chinese bank notes, thus relieving the financial situation considerably.

An inspection of the Hongkew area showed the Japanese forces were continuing their strict patrol, while many more had arrived. Hills of heavy machine gun fire. The fronts of some shops were literally carved out by the hail of bullets and others had their front windows caved in. Hongkew streets in the vicinity of the chaos of sector were closed and it was impossible to observe the situation in Chapei.

Sunday Bloody

Sunday was a bloody day. There were outbreaks of rifle fire in the downtown area of Hongkew, and in the Yangtzepoo district, in which a few many Chinese lines and fewer Japanese. Japanese in Nanking were reported to have caught 38 Chinese in the yard of the Japanese Methodist Church in Hongkew and to have executed them.

Tokyo, Feb. 1.—Referring to reports that the Chinese had fired on the Shanghai Settlement spokesman emphasized a wish that the powers might appreciate that the Chinese troops do not constitute a properly disciplined army whose efforts to keep a truce might be trusted.

For this reason, he said, it is impossible for the Japanese to accept Chinese proposals for truce negotiations, and, while the suggestion for the establishment of a neutral zone was under consideration, he proposed that the Japanese bluejackets be withdrawn from Shanghai, leaving other troops to take over the task. In the sense of keeping order in the Japanese, is considered impossible because of the lack of international sentiment, especially among the local Chinese population.

Implication Resented

"In official circles the implication that Japan is responsible for the situation was resented and it was considered that the Japanese had already no more than play their alloted part in the League of Nations' efforts.

London, Feb. 1.—Sympathy for Japan in her Shanghai operations grew today following reports that thousands of foreigners in the International Settlement at Shanghai were in danger.

At the same time arrangements had been made by the government for the dispatch of additional troops were ordered out by the government of India, commanded by Major-General George Fleming, British commander in the International settlement.

Group of W. M. S. Meets at Mrs. Hogle's

A very pleasant and profitable afternoon was spent on Thursday when Mrs. Hogle's home was delightained group number one of the Women's Missionary Society, 24 North Front Street. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by prayer by Mrs. C. Gerow read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. Embury the devotional exercises. The offering whose birthday was in January was received by Treasurer Mrs. Mary Mrs. Horton. The meeting closed with Mrs. Doonley and prayer by Mrs. Hogle and Mrs. Jarrell. At the Cone Mrs. Hogle served a delicious lunch, for which a hearty vote of thanks was extended to her by the society.

The newly elected officers for the year 1932 are as follows: Mrs. Laughlin, Sr., Convener, Mrs. Martin, secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Pro, birthday box secretary and Mrs. Hogle, pianist.

WILL HOLD DANCE AT MEMORIAL HALL

Local as well as rural interest is being centred on the forthcoming dance to be held by the local Labor Association which will be in Memorial Hall tomorrow evening, Feb. 2. Several residents of other nearby towns have stated their intentions to attend and have already purchased their tickets which are sold by the men for the past few days.

Several large prizes have been donated by a number of merchants in the city and will be given to the holders of the lucky tickets. A few may also be seen in the window of the Walker Hardware Company. All money accruing from the dance will be turned back into the fund for the unemployed and will be used to assist needy families.

SHELLING

Hongkew district.

Tear Flew Flag

They ripped down the flag, but did not molest any of the staff.

It was their second visit, Dr. Hawe said. Last Friday they ran it up and the place, charging that quantities of anti-Japanese literature had been issued in the property.

The cruisers Tsushima and Tenru and the Destroyer Hasu opened fire in Shanghai harbor before midnight last night. At 1.30 this morning the shelling stopped.

The Japanese conflict today took a grave turn when Japanese troops fired on Nanking over the last week the capital of China, and Marines started to land under protection of the gunfire.

A British destroyer and one from the United States destroyer shifted their positions to get out of the line of Japanese fire.

At Shanghai military and naval forces of Great Britain and the United States, France and Italy, joined to defend the embattled city against further sanguinary outbreaks.

The high command in Tokyo decided to sail the cruiser Suffolk from Hong Kong and a full army division to Shanghai.

Martial Law

Martial law went into effect in the Shanghai International Settlement. There was a lull in the fighting in the native sections of the city and the settlement itself was, for the most part, quiet.

A Japanese destroyer disturbed this period of unfamiliar peace by firing a few shots at the United States Texaco Oil Company with its bullets as it steamed down the Whangpo River. Nobody was hurt.

In Nanking the Japanese government went into defense positions behind sandbag fortifications on the city wall.

The British cruiser Berwick, with 800 men and a gun battery, left Honk Kong for Shanghai during the afternoon. The Australian light cruiser Hermes embarked all her planes and stood ready to leave at a moment's notice, while H.M.S. Cumberland, now in drydock at Hong Kong, was ordered to leave at once and service as specially as possible.

Fighting Elsewhere Harbin

Four United States destroyers arrived at Shanghai.

In Northern Manchuria General Jiro Tamon's Japanese division battled with its way to within 15 miles of Tsitsihar, according to a statement from Moscow warning Japan Soviet Russia would be compelled to protect the entry of the Russian troops into Harbin. At Tokyo the government stated that the troops would proceed regardless of a Soviet protest.

Officials of the Japanese government said the army will not take a hand in the situation at Shanghai unless the navy finds it impossible to control it.

Delegates of all the nations to the world disarmament conference at Geneva, which opens tomorrow, found themselves meeting under a dark cloud of pessimism.

The League of Nations Council studied a report from its commission at Shanghai.

Students Prepared

Georgia C. Tru, an executive of the Chinese Red Cross Society, said 2,000 Chinese Nationalist students there are ready to return to fight against those refusing help from other countries.

Wireless reports from Nanking said two Japanese cruisers and one destroyer were standing by there while marines were put ashore. The Japanese have seven ships there. Ten others also are in United States naval vessel and one British ship.

Yesterday morning a crack division of 20,000 Chinese National guardsmen, the pick of China's fighting men, steamed into Nanking and took up positions on the city walls behind sandbag fortifications. They were equipped with German automatic rifles, and unlike many Chinese troops were well disciplined and well-uniformed.

Tokyo, Feb. 1.—Subject to the approval of the Emperor, Japan's Cabinet ministers of war, navy and foreign affairs decided tonight to reinforce the Japanese forces in Shanghai with a full army division to Shanghai. It was understood that the division would be commanded by Lieut.-General Kenkichi Ueda, who would replace the 5,000 marines now ashore at Shanghai.

Shanghai Hears Chinese Executed Outside Church

London, Feb. 1.—The Government today ordered additional troops rushed to Shanghai.

A battalion of infantry and a battery of artillery will leave Hong Kong at once on a warship. These troops are being sent in response to a request for reinforcements from Brig.-Gen. George Fleming, British commander in the International Settlement.

Already the British forces in Shanghai a battalion of the Scots Fusiliers, a battery of Lincolns and a battalion of Wiltshires.

Naval Police There

The naval forces on duty there consist of the cruiser Cornwall, the sloop Scarborough and the Medway. The cruiser Kent is expected to arrive from Hong Kong shortly and the cruiser Suffolk was due from Hong Kong today.

A Foreign Office communique announcing the naval movements, and the reinforcements of troops and ments was made at a meeting at No. 10 Downing Street, participated in by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Right Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary; Lord Hailsham; Sir Maurice Monsell, First Lord of the Admiralty; Sir George Milne, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and Sir Robert Vansittart, Permanent Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs. U. S. Representative in Conference

Washington, Feb. 1.—American United States Charge d'Affaires conferred with Mr. Stimson for a number of times at the Prime Minister's Downing Street residence, it was learned here today from his sick bed to participate in the Shanghai conference.

The Foreign Office said the Government was urging the Japanese and Chinese Governments to accept a scheme for establishing a neutral zone between the two armies at Shanghai which could be occupied by American Colonial Foreign Office communique said:

"As a meeting held today at Shanghai, which was presided over by his Majesty's Consul-General, and at which the American Consul-General also was present, together with the Japanese and Chinese commander, it was proposed to establish a neutral zone between the Chinese and Japanese troops to be occupied by the troops of neutral powers which have forces in the International Settlement.

"His Majesty's Consul-General has now been informed that necessary arrangements should be made for the British troops to cooperate if the neutral zone can be established, and that the United States Government is being requested to take similar action.

"His Majesty's Government also are urging the Japanese and Chinese Governments to accept a scheme for a neutral zone and to issue immediate instructions to their troops accordingly."

Shanghai, Feb. 1.(Monday)—The Chinese public was aroused today by a report that Japanese forces had executed twenty Chinese without trial in the yard of the Chinese Christian Church in the Hongkew district of the International Settlement.

The report, which spread through the city like wildfire, was denied today by Japanese consular officials.

The Japanese Consulate refused to comment on the report said.

The Isolation hospital on the border of the International Settlement was evacuated today.

Fifty patients suffering from various infectious diseases were moved from the Settlement into a hospital in the French concession.

Japanese consulate also reported K. Kocchin, French Consul-General, as saying that French authorities would oppose any movement of Japanese troops into the French concession.

French military authorities refused to permit Japanese civilians to send troops into the concession to guard Tungwen College, which is the largest Japanese Eastern border of the French section. The French officials informed the Japanese that French marines would guard the college.

Babe Falls From Table, Breaks Neck

Hamilton, Feb. 1. — David Cowie, aged 2 months, son of Arthur and Mrs. Cowie, 221 Main Street East, died under unusual circumstances, when he fell from a table and broke his neck.

Mrs. Cowie was ill, and the father proceeded to tend to the child. He had bathed the little baby and then lifted the child from the tub to a table. As the father turned for a moment to reach for a bit of woolen powder the little boy fell off the table and his head struck the edge of the bathtub.

Realizing that his baby was seriously injured, Mr. Cowie rushed with the little fellow to the Mercy-Memorial Clinic. Doctors there feared that the child was dying, and proceeded to prepare him to the general hospital. But he died en route.

Whisk Manager Away Rob Him of Day's Receipts

With a gun stuck in his ribs and a command to keep quiet "and step on it" three young bandits with caps pulled down over their faces staged a daring holdup in Oshawa shortly after seven o'clock Saturday evening, forced their unwilling victim, Mr. T. H. Cakley, manager of the Oshawa Dominion Store branch, into a waiting machine and whisked him off out of town to a point near Bowmanville, where, after relieving him of the cash receipts of Saturday's business, dumped him out on the side of the road, and with further admonitions to keep quiet, sped away in the direction of Toronto. The amount taken was somewhere in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty-five dollars.

Although it was quite dark when accosted the three youths' sinister good description was obtained by the manager. Described as being well built and young, the one of them was tall, while one of them wore a light grey coat, the other a heavy weight coat in clothing. The machine used by them was a Ford Sedan. The amount taken was recovered in a ditch within two miles of Bowmanville.

It was known that the route taken by them was towards the city and it was thought by the Oshawa police that the men might reverse their course and pass through Belleville. The local police were on the lookout all evening for the machine but it failed to appear. That makes the second hold robbery in Oshawa in that city within the past few weeks.

Cheque Theft is Laid to Workman

LINDSAY, Feb. 1.—When A. McKinnon of Nixon, Ont., a farm workman on Dorset Highway, near Minden Village, came to Lindsay last week, he was given two endorsed cheques by Harold and Leo Tracey, brothers, which were to be delivered to their father in Lindsay. He cashed one cheque and left the cheques at the Bank of Commerce. He received a balance of $76 for his own use. He claimed he mailed the cheques to Mr. Tracey Sr., but, police say, later admitted the theft.

China Defers War Declaration

Nanking, China, Feb. 1.—Informed quarters here today expressed a feeling that the impending arrival of British and United States warships at Shanghai might avert a Chinese declaration of war on Japan.

The Chinese Government decided to declare war before it left for Nanauto to establish a temporary seat of government there, these quarters said, but the decision was held in abeyance pending the situation at Shanghai developed.

ACCEPT CUT

Chicago, Feb. 1.—The Labor Union forces on United States railways yesterday accepted a 10 per cent. wage reduction for the year beginning February 1, making an unprecedented decision in the expressed hope of stimulating the revival of business.

NORMA SHEARER AND ROBERT MONTGOMERY

How delightful! Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery, those expounds of high comedy, at banter and ingratiating romance are the stars being delighted to be cast in a delightful fairy tale adaptation of Noel Coward's celebrated New York stage success of last season, "Private Lives."

Here you have the motion picture news of the moment and it promises to be one of the big hits of the season. Montgomery in "Private Lives" will be on display at the Belle Theatre beginning Friday and Saturday of this week. To prepare yourself for a play bubbling over with grand fun; unexcelled entertainment and unanswered interest, you will be amazed.

In "Private Lives" you'll find Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery, as newly married people on their second honeymoon, but this time each has discovered husband and wife respectively. They have the misfortune to secure adjoining suites at a honeymoon hotel high on the South of France. Naturally Norma and Bob are thrown into open panic when each discovers the other's honeymoon. Bob to a former wife and Norma to a stubborn husband.

Obviously complications arise — complications which gather steam when Norma and Bob are thrown together. They talk it over only to discover they love husband and wife more than ever. Verging on the unbelievably humorous climax of the picture very much out of the ordinary, and one which should most certainly be seen.

SETH PARKER HERE FOR THREE DAYS

Heralded, awaited and discussed, Seth Parker's initial screen production, "Way Back Home" arrives on Wednesday at the Capitol for three days only.

Manager Holmes, ever seeking to give his public full advantage of the good things in screen entertainment, will hold a special matinee for children on Wednesday at 4.30 p.m. The usual admission of ten cents will be charged and there will be the matinee in charge.

Seth Parker needs no introduction, neither do the same moneyed neighbors, so it is just a case of what shall have to see Seth Parker in.

His Worship Mayor Tice has kindly consented to be present at the Capitol Theatre on Tuesday night to draw the lucky ticket in the Free Pass Contest. Four prizes of five passes will be given by the management, the first for one day, the second for nine months, the third for six months and the fourth for three months. The drawing is set for 9 p.m. so be there from comment up and down the line. Everybody will be entertained to capacity.

The feature picture tonight and Tuesday at the Capitol is one of the most unique mystery dramas exhibited for a long time. It is safe to say that no one guessed who murdered Herbert Fulton and why "The Secret Witness" was. The large crowds who filled the Capitol on Saturday were completely mystified up to the last five minutes, and when the picture was over Cleverly unfolded an audible gasp of enlightenment went up from everyone.

Tim Markel, William Collier Jr. and Zazu Pitts lead in making "The Secret Witness" a picture very much out of the ordinary, and one which should most certainly be seen.

RAIN AND COLD WEATHER ARE NEW DANGERS

Thousands of Men Fight to Hold Levee in South

RIVERS FLOOD

Two Members of One Family Drown in Flood

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 1.—Rain and cold weather created new dangers and hardships in the flooded lowlands of the lower Mississippi valley today.

Two thousand men fought to hold the weakened levees at Monroe, Louisiana, against the rain.Ouachita river and the northern part of the city was flooded. Guardsmen patrolled the levee tops and entire town of West Monroe across the river was inundated.

The levee at Bosco, near Monroe, was abandoned as water washed over it and but half a dozen families of Brownville's 3,500 population remained to their homes. Richton, in northwest Louisiana, was evacuated and Coushatia was partly flooded by backwater.

North of Shreveport, La., the Red River threatened to smash levees protecting East Point, Colfax, struck by high winds yesterday, also fought Red River overflows and the town was virtually waterbound. Falling temperatures and a threatened freeze added to the worries of the refugees.

Oxford, Miss., looked for overflows of the Yocna and Tallahatchie on the strength of a two-inch rain yesterday. The promise of cold weather struck fear into the hearts of thousands of farmers in the Delta.

Two members of a family were drowned yesterday at Ellisburg, Ky., when floodwaters caused by cloudbursts swept through their home. They were John Russell, 66 and Allie Orrah, 6. Approximately 250 families in southeastern Kentucky, were forced from their homes as rivers and streams were swilled by rains.

JEANNE MANCE STORY TOLD

First Canadian Nurse Founded Hotel Dieu, Montreal

Saint John, N.B., Feb. 1.—(By the Canadian Press)—Many are the legends and stories that have grown about the beautiful life of Jeanne Mance, who when but seven years of age, decided to dedicate her life to the service of God. The first authentic biography to be written in English however, is that by the late Dr. Forgan, K.C., Litt. D., L.L. D., written several years ago and published under the auspices of the Religious Hospitalrs of St. Joseph, Hotel Dieu, Montreal.

Dr. Forgan aptly and vividly describes the heroic Jeanne Mance when he writes "A foundress of communities and a nurse by profession and, we might also say, by instinct, a person with lofty ideals and magnificent aims, relying upon the guidance of providence, yet anxious to utilize every human means to attain her ends."

And it was her fine character and achievements that led Hon. Dr. MacLaren to choose as the subject of his address before the graduating class of nurses of General Public Hospital, Saint John, "Jeanne Mance, the First Canadian Nurse". In his address Dr. Murray vividly described the story of her life in Canada, the founding under her auspices of the Hotel Dieu at Montreal in 1644, and the trials and hardships within this ramshackle building. For a year the little colony was blessed with peace, while they ministered to the sick and destitute. But for at one time, during the next decade, they were to know the horrors of Indian invasion.

After the foundation of the Hotel Dieu, Dauversiere of Le Roche purchased the Island of Montreal there on to found a hospital and set out for Quebec in 1641 with Maisonneuve as Soldier General, and forty men. They were accompanied by Jeanne Mance, who, legend, has it, was the first white woman to set foot on the island.

Many extracts from Dr. MacLaren's address have been reprinted in the published biography, thus showing the approval with which the publishers regard his interest in her life.

Concluding, he says, she was "the soul of the expedition that settled in Montreal. Her energy stimulated the lazy, her indomitable courage shamed the timid. Her gentle sweetness comforted the sick and wounded. Her life was truly a resource of Christian chivalry. She not only assisted at the birth of the great Canadian metropolis, but powerfully aided by ensuring its continuous existance by inducing colonists to come and settle here and by procuring funds for its maintenance.....Some of the old writers speak of her defiled frail appearance, her rare charm, exquisite manners and refinement, inspiring great interest and pity, yet neither terror of the Iroquois nor any difficulty presented to her could daunt her.

"Through every thing she maintained the courage of her convictions and persisted in her work. Endowed with an energy that would be intolerable in a man, this frail woman had no fear in leaving her native land and civilization to become a leader in an expedition destined to found a new colony in a strange and barbarous country, and to suffer the ills and afflictions which were the lot of the colonists in their strife against the elements and the ferocious Iroquois....the necessity of the work to which she had consecrated herself in her fervour of devotion upheld her in her task, for she possessed unalterable confidence in the Supreme Master.

"Jeanne Mance might well be called the Florence Nightingale of Canada's Nursing System."

REASONS FOR DELINQUENCY

Home Conditions and Environment Are Causes

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 1.—(By the Canadian Press)—Delinquency among boys does not arise from any one factor but rather a number of factors which continue to bring it about, according to the report of an investigation recently made here. The survey was conducted under the supervision of the Big Brother movement, of which Frank T. Sharpe is general secretary. Joseph McDermoid, graduate of McMaster University of Hamilton, Ont., and a student in Social Science in Toronto University completed the survey in detail. The conclusions are embodied in a pamphlet entitled "Children Bound" issued by C. L. Burton, president of the Big Brother movement. The facts brought to the surface are instructive to all workers in the field of juvenile delinquency.

The report is based on the complete history of 42 boys between the ages of 11 and 15 years, who having appeared before the Toronto and District Juvenile courts a total of 308 times, were committed to the various industrial schools.

"The central figure in such cases is always the delinquent but the boy cannot exist alone without an environment," says the report. "Behind the 42 boys were 42 homes, each with its several members, and with its own peculiar moral and spiritual atmosphere. The neighborhood and also institutions have also brought influences which have helped to mould the lives of these young boys."

All the boys committed were Canadian born though in some instances the parents were foreign born. It is pointed out this is contrary to the suggestion that most commitments of children are from the foreign-born population not yet adjusted to the customs and habits of Canada. The commitments were not "an easy disposal of the delinquent problem but rather a long history of delinquency with a sustained effort on the part of interested social agencies and court probation officers to re-establish the boy in the community." In each case there was an accumulation of charges which showed the necessity for more drastic measures than had previously been tried.

Conditions leading to truancy and delinquency, the reports says, are for example when home discipline is poor, the boy mentally dull, the neighborhood congested and tools free boys to gang together. Home conditions in question are not merely bad economic conditions but result from a combination of these with a bad family atmosphere. Not only is the family poor and compelled to live in cheap, congested areas of the city but the father, as head of the home, is either permanently removed or not filling the position adequately. In some cases mothers were found to be incapable home-makers or instructors and in others both mother and father are bad examples for their children. The result was a break down in home training.

"The influence of the neighborhood can be for either good or evil," the report proceeds. "Much depends on the type of neighborhood. The outlying districts with open spaces gives every advantage for playing. The children there are occupied with wholesome games and delinquency is not nearly so prevalent."

CREW OF BRITISH SCHOONER SAVED

Boat is Sinking 100 Miles East of Pierre Miquelon

Halifax, N. S. Feb. 1.—The American steamer Flocrspar rescued nine men from the sinking British auxiliary schooner Ruth F. this morning according to advices reaching the east coast radio signal service here today from its Cape Race, Newfoundland, station. The position given by the Flocrspar was: latitude 43.43 north, longitude 50.21 west. This would place the scene of the rescue one hundred miles southeast of St. Pierre Miquelon.

BRITAIN DEMANDS WARLIKE ACTS CEASE

BRITISH M. P. CALLS ACTION JAP "PIRACY"

Veteran Labor Leader Refuses to Withdraw Words

NO "EAST" DEBATE

Premier Restores Quiet in British House of Commons

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP) — Rt. Hon. George Lansbury, Veteran Labor Leader, created an uproar in the House of Commons today by shouting that, "the Japanese Government has been engaged in a piece of international piracy in China."

There was an uproar from the ministerial benches. "Withdraw! Withdraw!" the Government supporters stood shouting, but Mr. Lansbury stood his ground.

"I know my responsibilities," he retorted, "and, I have not the slightest intention of withdrawing."

The uproar continued until Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald restored quiet for a moment, by asserting in solid tones that Mr. Lansbury had illustrated the inadvisability of permitting debate in the Commons on the Far East situation.

Mr. Lansbury declared he would seek to prevent an adjournment and force an emergency debate tonight.

This was the first meeting of parliament after a six weeks' recess.

Parliament Tense

LONDON, Feb. 2—Parliament reassembled this afternoon after a six weeks' recess in a tense atmosphere arising from the situation in the Far East.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who is to undergo a delicate operation on his eyes tomorrow, was present. His colleague, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council and the Conservative leader, and Rt. Hon. George Lansbury, the Opposition leader, Rt. Hon. Lloyd George, the veteran Liberal Chief, was not in the House.

Debt Cancellation

LONDON, Feb. 2.—(AP)—Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, today officially proclaimed in the House of Commons Great Britain's Balfour policy of "a general cancellation of reparations and war debts" as soon as possible in order permanently to settle those problems.

He said he realized that a permanent settlement was not possible at the present time, but declared that negotiations were continuing as to the date for the postponed Lausanne Reparations Conference.

Germany, he declared, was busy to make reparation payments and to pay obligations of the Hague Agreements and therefore could not renounce them. At the same time, he said:

"It is clear from the report of the Basel Committee that Germany is not in a position to resume fulfillment of these conditions. It is obvious that when the creditor countries come to consider these obligations that fact must be taken into account."

HIGHLANDERS ARE WELCOMED IN N.Y.

Ottawa and Montreal Regiments Take Part in Benefit Program

New York, Feb. 2.—Thousands of New Yorkers braved the wintry blast and milled about the approaches to Manhattan station this morning to get a glimpse of the picturesque detachments of the Canadian Highlanders of Canada, (Ottawa) and the Black Watch (Montreal) on their arrival here to take part in a gala benefit at the Metropolitan Opera House tonight. The performance is being staged under the auspices of the Canadian Club in New York in aid of disabled British, Canadian and United States veterans who served with the British forces during the war, and of the country's leading theatrical and operatic stars will also take part in the program.

MILK WAR AT STRATFORD

Stratford, Feb. 2—The town of St. Mary's is now in the midst of a milk war. For some time the price has been ten cents a quart. Yesterday, however, one of the distributors cut the price to eight cents a quart and before the day was over the commodity was being offered at six cents a quart. It is possible the price will become stabilized at eight cents.

Youngest Son of Gandhi Arrested

New Delhi, Feb. 2 (AP).—Devis Das Gandhi, youngest son of the Indian Nationalist, was arrested at a railway station today while enroute to the frontier.

A warrant for the arrest of Devi Das has been out for some time. He accompanied his Mahatma father to London for the recent round table conference.

BEAUHARNOIS SHAKE-UP IS UNDER VIEW

Bennett is Acting in Case of Changes on Board

AT MONTREAL

Premier's Visit Given Color to Report—Block to Succeed Sweezey

OTTAWA, Feb. 2.—Within a day or two announcement will be made of the names of the proposed new board of directors for the Beauharnois Power Corporation and of the conditions under which the Bennett Government will let the company benefit by vast power and canalization works on the St. Lawrence River near Montreal.

The resignation of Huth Griffith, secretary-treasurer of Beauharnois, coupled with the departure of Premier Bennett for Montreal tonight were regarded in the capital as presaging the completion of the Beauharnois reorganization.

This re-casting of the power company's executive will have been under consideration by the Government for some months. In the past fortnight due to the pressure of the banks which desire some action be taken for the millions they have lent Beauharnois, Premier Bennett and his cabinet have been hard at work on the question, Saturday's two cabinet meetings and the two which took place today were thought to have some connection with the Government's efforts.

W. R. Bonter, Trenton Abandons Appeal

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 2.—R. H. Sanboy, on behalf of the Bank of Montreal, appeared before the Appeal Court at Osgoode Hall today and announced W. R. Bonter, of Trenton, Ont., had abandoned his appeal against dismissal of his $300,000 suit against the bank for alleged wrongful conversion of stocks and securities.

"There are 29 exhibits in the action and to go over with them taken out of the jurisdiction of the court," Mr. Sankey said. "The bank has many of the documents were forged, and other proceedings to follow."

The court made an order directing the exhibits to be held in court until further order."

British Cruiser on Way to China

Manila, Feb. 2. — The British cruiser Kent arrived here late today from Batavia and sailed for Shanghai tonight after taking on fuel oil. The cruiser carried a full crew and a marine guard, a total of more than 1,000 men.

The Kent is in command of Admiral Howes, Sandy.

MRS. JUDD INSANE

Canadian Disappears in Chapei Seeking Friend

Shanghai, Feb. 2. — Anxiety was felt today regarding the whereabouts of Henry Benson Currie, described as a Canadian journalist, who entered the battle-scarred Chapei area of Shanghai Sunday carrying a Union Jack, to bring out his friend Lester Cole, a British subject said to be now missing since Sunday.

After venturing into the Chapei section and bringing back his wife and two children, as well as his Chinese acquaintance, Currie returned for the mother of the Chinese. Many were killed in the area into which Currie has vanished.

Currie carried a slip of paper inscribed in Chinese characters: "You and I follow me out. I will find the subject and you son and I will fetch you."

EVERETT RAE ARRESTED IN PHILADELPHIA

Former Inspector of Provincial Police is Captured

RESIDENT HERE

Alleged to Have Stolen 1500 Fines Remitted to His Trust

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Everett Rae, former inspector of Provincial Police at Kitchener, Ont., who disappeared from Hamilton, was arrested in Philadelphia yesterday. He is charged with theft of $1500, said to have been fines paid for breaches of the Ontario Liquor Control Act.

It is reported to have waived extradition proceedings. Chief Inspector John Miller, C. I. D., leaves for the United States city tonight to bring Rae back to Toronto for trial.

Investigations were made into Rae's activities at Kitchener by Provincial headquarters last May, he had been stationed at Barrie, and although only ten years in the Provincial Police had rapidly risen to the rank of inspector. He was moved from Barrie to Kitchener, where it is alleged he collected fines and failed to remit them to the courts.

He resigned and immediately disappeared.

Resident Here

Former Inspector Everett Rae resided at Bellevile as Belleville sergeant of the local headquarters during the inspectorship of Charles E. Gurnett, who now is in the criminal investigation department at Toronto. During his residence here the former inspector made many friends, he being a most capable and efficient officer.

Four Dead From Denatured "Alk"

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 2.—Four men are dead and an unknown number of others reside in hospitals ing denatured alcohol at what the police say was a drinking party yesterday afternoon and last night. Three of the men died at a local home in the night and a fourth this morning. At least three others are ill.

Sullen Silence Follows Battle

Shanghai, Feb. 2 (AP)—A sullen silence had fallen upon the ruins of Chapei today after a fierce artillery duel on Tuesday during which neither side appeared to have gained any material advantage.

The Japanese claimed a victory in the artillery exchange but the Chinese command only repeated their former statement. "We intend to drive the enemy out of Chinese territory."

Morris Lesser to Be Extradited

Albany, N.Y., Feb. 2—Albany police were advised today that Montreal authorities will instigate extradition proceedings to return Morris Lesser, 40, to New York, to the Quebec City, to answer a charge of robbery. Lesser was apprehended at a bus terminal here last Saturday.

Montreal officers desire to question Lesser regarding the robbery of Max Shapiro. Two men entered Shapiro's apartment, bound and gagged him and a servant escaped with $2100.

MAROONED ON ISLAND 20 YRS.

Scotsman Tells of Strange Adventure on Lonely Isle

London, Feb. 2 (CP)—Marooned on a desert island for two or three years and having been given up for dead for 20 years, a new "Robinson Crusoe" has returned to England, Andrew Swan, who like his great prototype, Alexander Selkirk, is a Scot. Swan recently arrived at the house of a cousin, Dugald McFadyen, of Letchworth, Hertfordshire, where he related details of his experiences that was almost as strange as that told in Defoe's great story of "Robinson Crusoe" though with many differences.

Thirty-four years ago Swan left Greenock in a sailing ship. The ship took fire near the Equator and was abandoned. Swan with four others, landed on an uninhabited island. There they found a hut, and stretched on a rough couch, the skeleton of a man. Beside it was the skeleton of a dog. There were scraps of newspapers, dated 1881. Nothing else to tell the story of the tragedy.

After six or three years on the island the party were rescued by a Portuguese boat.

Swan became a diver. One of his jobs was to recover stolen silk reels of real estate in Philadelphia from the wreck of a ship in which the unscrupulous thief had been travelling in the Gulf of Mexico. He kept the money he recovered.

When he landed on the wreck he opened the first door he came to and on the berth lay the skeleton of a man. He kicked underneath the berth and felt a box. He pulled it out. When the box was opened it was found to contain the stolen deeds.

Between his diving job—which often involved fights with sharks and devil-fish—Swan hunted for ambergris on the sands of New Zealand.

Now he is back home, resting awhile before seeking new adventures.

WAR BOOM IN MARKET DEAD

New York Prices Drift Quietly Lower Today

New York, Feb. 2.—Bullish vaporings of a "war boom", which had been discredited in leading banking quarters from the start, disappeared from the stock market today, and prices drifted quietly lower.

The market was firm for a time in the first hour, but rails soon turned reactionary, and a heavy tone spread throughout the list. Early gains of from fractions to many points were replaced by losses of 1 to 4 or more. Trading, however, was dull.

Henderson Says League Does Not Even Contemplate Failure in East, to Fail Would be World Disaster

Plans of League of Nations Outlined By Chairman Henderson

LEAGUE AIMS

Oriental Imbroglio First Thought of Arms Parley

Geneva, Feb. 2.—The world disarmament conference, attended by the statesmen of three score nations, opened this evening after having been delayed for an hour while the League of Nations Council met to consider the problem in the Far East.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, the former British Foreign Secretary who is acting as chairman, began his session with an outline of his problems.

No Thought of Failure

"I refuse to contemplate even the possibility of failure," he said, "for that is to one's mind, forfeit the evil consequences that might ensue."

The enfeebled chairman, who has been in poor health for several weeks, spoke for more than an hour. He called upon the delegates to "seize this opportunity—while it is still ours—to lead the people of the world one more step toward the high table land of peace and cooperation."

Rt. Hon. Arthur referred to the ominous thunderings from the Far East.

He then turned to refer to the tragic fact that at the moment when this conference began its work it was confronted with a situation of such extreme gravity as "probably has now existed in the Far East," he said.

Three Objectives

Mr. Henderson said the conference had three important objectives.

(1) To reach a collective agreement on a practical program for substantial reduction and limitation of armaments.

(2) To determine that no armament shall be developed outside the scope of that agreement.

(3) To plan for smaller conferences in the future at reasonably short intervals of time.

"It is difficult to conceive of a sharper spur to fear and suspicion than the indefinite growth in world armaments," said Mr. Henderson.

Safeguards

"It is imperative that all the signatories of the League of Nations Covenant and of other international treaties should make it their business to strengthen the general assurance of those great safeguards against acts of violence and war."

The conference, he said, is more encouraging atmosphere than had surrounded previous efforts to understand of the great powers in preparing conventions for the pacification in China, as outlined by Rt. Hon. H. Thos. Shaw, Secretary of State for the Dominions at the extraordinary meeting of the League Council in London before the disarmament conference began.

"I need not remind you of the staggering cost of the Great War nor of the horrors and carnage the next war would involve."

He reviewed the steps taken by the League of Nations toward disarmament, including the creation of a permanent advisory committee, the draft treaty of mutual assistance in 1923, the Geneva protocol of 1924, which carried the principle of recommendations further, the Locarno treaties of 1925 and the five years' work of the preparatory commission for this conference.

War Debts

He intimated in a way was open for the introduction of war debts and reparations into the deliberations of the conference, declaring that "one of the problems and difficulties to be met is the one excluded from the scope of our discussion."

Mr. Henderson's speech was his reference to the fact that the League of Nations Council, which studied economic and social factors are vital to any consideration of the world's welfare.

"The world wants disarmament, but disarmament will not remedy disarmament. We have it in our power to help fashion future history."

DECISIVE VICTORY

New Delhi, India, Feb. 2 (AP)—The Government today won a decisive victory in the Legislative Assembly when an opposition resolution of censure was defeated by a vote of 62 to 44.

BRITISH STATEMENT

Geneva, Feb. 2 (AP)—Following is the text of the statement by Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, on behalf of the British Government before the League Council today.

"His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom feel it to be impossible that the present situation in the Far East should be allowed to continue. Every day brings news of some fresh incident of the utmost gravity. Fighting over a wide area is practically continuous.

"Shanghai is the centre of a series of conflicts in which rifles and machine guns, artillery and aeroplanes are taking part. War in everything but name is in progress. To such a state of things members of the League of Nations cannot be indifferent. If it is permitted to go on the covenant, the Pact of Paris, and the Nine-Power Treaty must inevitably have lost the confidence of the world.

"It is not without significance to members of the League that the United States Government take entirely the same view of the situation.

"In all efforts toward peace put forward by the council during the past four months it has been loyally supported and the whole-hearted sympathy of the United States. On several recent occasions the Council has pressed its members to second its efforts by diplomatic representations to the Government concerned. His Majesty's Government and other Governments, members of the League, have shown themselves ready to respond to this appeal.

"Unfortunately these efforts have been so far unsuccessful. His Majesty's Government therefore in concert with the Government of the United States has decided to make further efforts to bring the present lamentable state of things to an end and they trust that other governments will see their way to take similar action. They have accordingly presented at Tokyo and Nanking formal protests.

"First, that all acts of violence and preparations for hostilities shall be brought to an end. Second, that in the Shanghai area both sides shall withdraw their troops and that further protection to the International Settlement a neutral zone should be arranged. Third, that negotiations shall then be begun immediately to settle outstanding differences in the spirit of the Pact of Paris and the Council's resolution of December ninth last."

Mr. Thomas added that at about 11 p.m. yesterday Japanese men-of-war on the Yangtze River opened fire with several rounds of fire shell in the direction of the City of Nanking.

"Our latest information is that all is quiet for the moment and that all British subjects are safe. In bringing their action in this matter to the notice of the council, His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom are satisfied that it will receive the approval and support of their colleagues."

United States Joins With Britain in Demand in Far East

KELLOGG PACT

Other Nations Asked to Join in Bringing End to Trouble

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Feb. 2 (CP cable)—Great Britain showed her hand today. Before a special meeting of the Council of the League of Nations—in a crowded room and amid some excitement—Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, quietly announced full co-operation between the British and United States governments in an endeavour to bring peace in the Far East.

"His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom," said Mr. Thomas in a decisive tone, "feels that it is impossible for the present situation in the Far East to continue."

The council meeting was hurriedly called at the instance of the British government and at the opening of the meeting, the opening of the World Disarmament Conference was delayed an hour. Joseph Paul Boncour, president of the League Council, still in Paris, was replaced by Andre Tardieu, French war minister. And in a sentence M. Tardieu announced at whose behest he had been summoned and invited Mr. Thomas to speak.

War Is Forgone

Mr. Thomas briefly reviewed the situation at Shanghai. "War in everything but name is in progress." he declared. "Such a state of things the members of the League cannot be indifferent. If it is allowed to go on the covenant (of the League) the Pact of Paris, the Nine-Power Treaty, must inevitably lose the confidence of the world. It is not without significance. If the members of the League that the United States takes the same view of the situation."

In all the efforts toward peace put forward by the council during the past four months it has been loyally supported and the whole-hearted support and sympathy of the United States, Mr. Thomas continued. Unfortunately the efforts of the council had been unsuccessful.

Ask Aid of Others

A $200 fine was not disturbed.

Tells Kiwanis Club Japan is Led by Spirit of Aggression

J. A. Richens, Ship's Mate of Sea Cadet Corps, Speaks

JAP. OUTLOOK

First hand information was given the Kiwanis Club today respecting the conflict now raging in Shanghai when Capt. Richens, R.N.V.R., Richens, ship's mate of the Belleville Sea Cadet Corps, who is a member of the club at the weekly luncheon. Mr. Richens served his term in the British Navy and was severely wounded in the Great War as at least two naval engagements. During [illegible] antecedents with the Japanese and the Japanese service by making the hazardous trip up the Yangtze River to Hankow, the second boat and his tale of that trip held the club.

Speaking of the recent trouble between the Japanese and the Chinese, Mr. Richens stated that Japan had no other motive other than aggression. Japan is a small country and is thickly populated and Manchuria was open to them as the speaker expressed it. The Japanese, he said, developed Manchuria as it should be developed and the Japanese believe it was their destiny to have made out of the settlement. Japan is ready to fight war, espoused Mr. Richens, and is ready to battle any nation that thwarts their efforts. They give as an excuse thenonsense of Japan's need primarily their motive is aggression.

GIRL'S SPINE IS BROKEN IN CRASH

Oshawa, Feb. 2—Following a motor accident at King and Burke Sts. Monday afternoon, Miss Dorothy Simpson, 22, of Brighton, an occupant of one of the cars, was rushed to the Oshawa hospital, where it is said, X-ray examination showed that her back is broken. Although her condition is quite serious, Dr. Reid, attending physician, is hopeful of her recovery. Fred Marshall of Brighton, was the driver of the car in which she was travelling, and the other car was driven by Morley Kinsman, 24 Alexander Street, Oshawa.

ASK FOR SAND FOR YOUR SIDEWALKS

Do Belleville householders want something for nothing? That is something that will cost them nothing, but will be effective and worth while in preventing accidents.

"Tell the people that, we will be pleased to distribute free of charge sand to householders asking for it for the purpose of sanding snowy and icy walks. The number of the phone is 1851 and a truck will bring a keg of sand. The citizen has only to put a box to contain it. A. We shall send sand as much as people require," said City Engineer Mott today.

THEY MUST RECUSE 1932 MARKERS NOW

The time has expired for the carrying of 1931 license plates on motor cars and trucks. The Belleville police department will immediately enforce the regulations and it will be to the interest of all car owners to obtain new license plates without further delay.

SNOW SHOVELS AGAIN CLANG

Quite Heavy Fall of Snow Recorded With Mounting Mercury

Snow shovels again clanged on the streets of the city this morning and the cheery sound of the shovels punctuated the stillness of a calm and pleasant day. The freezing snow flakes again commenced to fly after an intermission of a couple of hours yesterday night before. Throughout the evening a depth of several inches was recorded and again today up to noon the fall continued unabated.

With the cessation of the frigid breeze, which swept over the city from the west and forced people indoors to the security of the fireside of the radiator a mild warmth has appeared and a thaw is expected. What snow is falling is of the heavy variety, just right for sleigh runners, and not least important, of a sufficient packiness for the manufacture of snow balls which have been flying near the school yards all day. The younger generation are trying to make up for lost time in the various winter sports, which they have denied them so far.

Temperatures for the last twenty four hours have undergone considerable change. Yesterday the high point was 31 above, while the lowest was 6. Today from a low mark of 6 on Monday morning the mercury has ariesn to 30 at noon with a low mark this morning of 20.

Miss Mary Callery 80 Years Old Today

Celebrates Event at Her Home in Village of Cannifton

Today a very popular resident of Cannifton, Miss Mary Callery, is celebrating her eightieth birthday and her hosts of friends in that village are honoring her in a fitting way. Miss Callery's splendid qualities and wide disposition have endeared her to many hearts and all join in wishing her long years of happy life.

For thirty years Miss Callery was post mistress at Cannifton, relinquishing her duties there just before Christmas. The post office occupied one part of her grocery store of which she still takes complete charge. Miss Callery has been a familiar figure in Cannifton for many years and her little store is remembered with affection by residents now grown to womanhood or manhood, as a favorite shopping place whose goodies were dispensed with a liberal hand by the kindly proprietor.

In the community and church life of Cannifton Miss Callery takes the keenest interest. In the work of the woman's organizations of the United Church she still takes an active part. She is a charter member of the Women's Association of the church, which was organized in 1925. Her unflagging devotion to the work of this organization has been outstanding and she is its most liberal contributor.

In the Sunday School Miss Callery is counted the most faithful member. She is to be seen there each Sunday and is in charge of a class to which she is most devoted. Today the Women's Missionary Society of which she is also a member is entertaining at a birthday party in honor of Miss Callery. Mrs. G. W. Hammond of Campbellford and Miss Hattie Callery of Detroit, sisters of Miss Callery, are in Cannifton today to attend the function.

ROPE FOUND ABOUT NECK OF VICTIM

Toronto, Feb. 3—Despite police efforts, no identification has been made of the body of a man found drifting in Toronto Bay yesterday. The body had evidently been in the water for a long time and was badly decomposed. The man was murdered, police believe, for a ten foot rope was wound around his neck. Theories that the body, due to a number of gold-filled teeth, might be that of ambrose small, missing theatre magnate, were discounted by the police.

The fortress of Louisberg, Cape Breton Island, commenced in 1720 was planned by th. great French engineer Vauban, and took 20 years to construct.

BEAR FAILS TO SEE SHADOW

Wintereless Winter Over, Ask Weather Phophets

Today is Candlemas Day.

For Roman Catholics it will be observed as the Feast of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, celebrated by all Roman churches throughout the world on February second. The festival gets its name from the fact that on this day there is a procession of candles, and those candles which will be required in divine service for the coming year are consecrated. The festival is also observed by the Church of England and by the Armenian Church. It has been compared with the Roman festival Lupercalia in honor of Februus, god of Mars, at which time candles were burnt; possibly the old custom was taken over by the church and turned into a Christian ceremony. Candlemas or Candlemas Day is the first of the quarterly terms, when all taxes, interest and other outstanding debts must be paid. The whole of the weather on this day is said to determine that of the whole years.

"If Candlemas is fair and clear, "There'll be twa winters thro' the year."

While other countries may pay little heed to Candlemas and other wise celebrate the day in fashions peculiar to the country they are in, Canadians look upon it simply as a day on which old Bruin comes out from his den, takes a squint at the weather and then either decides to go back and roll over for another nap or else stay up and go looking for something to eat to fill his ravenous stomach. If he sees his shadow they tell us he'll go back. If no sun is shining he'll stay out and prowl around for good. But today there was no shadow to be seen, and if he was out and about, as he probably was, he got pretty well covered with the snow, that started to fall this morning.

Bears have been up all winter, so far as is known, in exceptional bear, or the very tired one, has almost forgotten how to hibernate a nice warm den and sleep the long winter months away. The winter has specialized in breaking all traditions other better behaved winters for years and years. It sets up on the bears like a lot of people are alleged to do when they indulge in being able to stay up and enjoy the warm weather on New Year's Day celebrated.

While Canada for generations has watched the bear and the day very closely, on the American side it is the ground hog, that tells them whether or not they can order more coal, or more wood for another week or so of cold weather, and the day is called Groundhog Day.

While prognostications can be made fairly accurately concerning the weather following the day in which they are made, this year has decidedly set to naught any predictions made concerning the weather, and even the offices every can give no enlightenment on what is to come. Some say we will have about 40 days zero weather for the rest of the winter," he said, "but while we may have some snow it won't amount to much and will soon go. We are due for a warm February, and early Spring. There don't seem to be ice on the bay but there won't be much. And outside of that there isn't much that can be said."

WILLIAM HARVEY COUCH

The funeral of the late William Harvey Couch took place Monday afternoon from his late residence in Rawdon township, to the Belleville Cemetery and was largely attended.

The service was conducted at the house and at the cemetery by the Rev. Mr. Rowland, pastor of the United Church at Stirling.

The bearers, old and close friends of the late Mr. Couch, were Charles Hoard, Hector Whitton, Frank Bailey, Oscar Merrick, Frank Spencer, and Will Potts.

The floral tributes which were very beautiful were as follows:

Casket spray, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Couch and Harvey; wreaths—Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Couch and Stanley of Moniteau; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Couch and family, Brantford; sprays—from grandchildren; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rose, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Symons and family; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Harden; the Merrick family; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hoard and Mr. and Mrs. George Rosebush.

JOSEPH BANNON

The death of Joseph Bannon of Norwood, occurred in the Belleville General Hospital yesterday morning, February 1. The late Mr. Bannon was sixty-nine years of age and born in the village of Hastings; he was an adherent of the Church of England, being a member of that church at Norwood. He has been ill for some time and was finally moved to the hospital here.

Two sons, Richard of Drummer, Sask., and William of the city, also a brother William of Kamloops, B.C. survive him.

The funeral will take place from the home of Mrs. Clyde Bannon, Norwood, on Thursday afternoon. Interment at Hastings.

Late Mrs. Thomas Montgomery

Stirling, (Special)—Seldom, if ever, was there a larger funeral held in the United Church than that of Mrs. Thos. Montgomery, Sr., who was laid to rest on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. After a short service in the house, Rev. Rowland and Rev. R. F. Byers conducted the service at the church. Rev. Byers read the Scripture lesson, found in John 11th. Miss Bessie Conley sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul." Rev.Rowland took as his Text "In the world ye shall have tribulation but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." He said trimulations and sorrows could be taken in two ways, evasively or accepted in the Jesus way but be of good Cheer.

The Pall-bearers were, Messrs W. L. Anderson, Roger Metkiejohn, F. Sprenkell, W. Molse C. McGee and S. Hallsbury.

The Honorary Pall-bearers were all the members of the Council, Reeve W. C West, Messrs O'Donel, Pitcher, J. E. Noble, R. Hollist and Geo. Lurry, Clerk of the municipality.

Many Floray Tributes

The floral tributes: From husband and children, Mr. and Mrs. A. Pelerson, Jim and Laura Donnan and children; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Tamplin; "Lion Club"; Frederick Maryland; Bryson Donnan and family, Belleville; E. R. Pearce and family; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Reid; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Penn and family, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. F. N. McKee; Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan; Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Donnan; Mr. and Mrs. James Chambers; Jas. Donnan and family; Mr. and Mrs. James Ward; Ladies Association of St. Paul's United Church; W. M. S. and Ladies Aid, St. Andrew's Church; Flags of Sterling; County of Hastings; Hydro-Electric Commission; Hydro-Electric Employees; The Liberal-Conservative Association of North Hastings; Stirling Lodge No. 447, and A.F. and A.M.; Modern Aliveswanes Local Board of Hastings County, Mrs. Chas. Vandervaer, Mrs. Simeon Fox, W. H. Nugent, Alex Moore.

LATE EMILY S. ETHERIDGE

The funeral of the late Emily S. Etheridge of Sidney, took place on Saturday forenoon from the home of her nephew, Mr. J. S. Connor, 9th concession of Sidney. Services at the home and at the graveside in Sine's cemetery were conducted by Rev. E. W. Purdy, pastor of the United Church, Stirling. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The bearers were Messrs J. Campbell, W. Detlor, H. Bird, B. Finkle, J. Frederick and J. Marshall.

GILBERT SEAME, SR.

The funeral of the late Gilbert Seame, Sr., took place this morning from the Belleville Burial Co. Funeral Parlors to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Madden. Interment was made in St. James' Cemetery, Rev. Father Madden conducting the services at the graveside. The pallbearers were Gilbert, William and George Seame, Percy Burnett, Joseph Seame and George Seame, Jr.

MRS. ANNE LEE

Many attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Anne Lee which took place this morning from her late residence to St. Michael's Church. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., celebrated Requiem Mass and interment was in St. James Cemetery, with Rev. Fr. Baker officiating. The bearers were Messrs. M. Lynch, A. Parrell, W. Herrigan, F. Corrigan and W. Dolan.

SURPRISE FOR MRS. G. TEALE

Birthday Party Held at Her Home on Foster Avenue

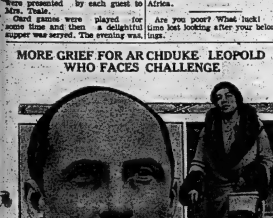
Mr. and Mrs. George Teale, 320 Foster Avenue, who have been very highly respected and popular residents of Belleville for many years, were surprised by a number of their friends at their home on Saturday evening.

Sunday was known to be Mrs. Teale's birthday and their friends desired to greet her in a body and to offer their congratulations and good wishes. The surprise was entirely complete, as the visitors entered the house at different times and Mr. and Mrs. Teale were most happy at receiving them. Birthday gifts were presented by each guest to Mrs. Teale.

Card games were played for some time and then a delightful supper was served. The evening was, indeed, most enjoyable.

Mrs. Teale, who has reached her eighty-third year, is very bright and active and takes a keen interest in affairs. In her earlier life she was much interested in church and charitable work.

Mr. Teale was for many years one of the most successful and popular engineers in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway, and later with the Canadian National Railway. He is now living retired, having been granted a pension by the Canadian National Railway some few years ago.



AGED MAN SUFFOCATED

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 3—Alone in a flame and smoke-swept dwelling, William Clyde, 80, met death early this morning. Trapped in the second storey, Clyde had made his way from a bedroom into the hall where his body was found dead. Death was due to suffocation. The house was badly damaged by the flames.

MORE GRIEF FOR AR CHDUKE LEOPOLD WHO FACES CHALLENGE

ARCHDUKE LEOPOLD.

Rescued from the ignominious cell he occupied in the Tombs prison, New York, by Mrs. Alicia Coburn, wealthy United States widow whom he was held in connection with the disappearance of his aunt's $400,000 necklace. Archduke Leopold of Austria showed his gratitude to his benefactress by becoming engaged to Mrs. Coburn and then jilting her on his return to Europe. Popularity waned as a consequence of his shabby behavior, and when he appeared at a Vienna night club wearing his brilliant array of medals, one of which was fixed to his belt instead of his collar, His Grace quickly received the cold face and as many challenges. The challengers, three counts and a baron, considered among the foremost swordsmen in Austria, consider the Archduke's act a slight to their country, and the latter looks blue and brief for the stormy petrel of the House of Hapsburg.

Thomas announced, "has decided to make a further effort to bring the present lamentable state of things to an end. They trust other governments will join with them in this similar action."

Accordingly the governments have presented a formal note to Tokio and Nanking alike, requesting:

(1) That all acts of violence and reprisals by the hostilities shall be brought to an end.

(2) That in the Shanghai area both sides shall withdraw their troops and that as a further protection to the International Settlement a neutral zone shall be arranged.

(3) That negotiations shall then immediately begin to settle outstanding differences in the spirit of the Pact of Paris and the council resolution of December 9.

Mr. Thomas then read a statement which was also being made in the House of Commons at London outlining the naval and military measures taken by Great Britain in the Far East.

"In bringing their action to the notice of the League," Mr. Thomas added, "His Majesty's government in the United Kingdom are satisfied that they will receive the approval and support of their colleagues."

Germany, Italy, France, Great Britain and the United States have agreed that the fighting in China must be brought to a halt without further delay, Mr. Hon. J. H. Thomas, secretary of State for the Dominions, declared this afternoon as the League of Nations Council met for special consideration of the trouble in the Far East.

The British and United States governments, said Mr. Thomas, would be glad if the other powers would follow their lead, but in any event the two English-speaking nations are determined to stop the fighting and to try to bring about a settlement under the League and in the spirit of the Kellogg Pact.

The British representative spoke with breathless emphasis and, by his side, listening quietly, sat Naotake Sato, the Japanese representative, poring over a booklet of the league covenant before him as a crowd of tense spectators.

As Mr. Thomas finished, the German delegate said he was informing his government of developments.

Dr. W. W. Yen thanked the council for China, and then Sato rose to reply.

Mr. Thomas lit his pipe and turned sideways in his chair to regard his neighbor.

The Japanese expressed satisfaction at the "important declarations" of the great powers and said the plan they proposed amounted to execution of the procedure already proposed by China.

At this there was laughter by some of the spectators who had sealed at the Council table.

Japanese Provoked?

Sato ignored the interruption and read a long statement explaining that the bombardment of Nanking was provoked by a Chinese attack on Japanese blockhouses.

Sir Eric Drummond, the secretary, announced that the League nominal diplomatic representatives on the Japan-China representatives on the spot would meet today at Shanghai.

France, Italy Support

When Sato had finished his brief but emphatic declaration of policy, Dino Grandi for Italy, and the French representative announced that their governments approved the stand of Washington and London. The German delegate made a similar cordia statement.

Ontario Synod to Choose Bishop

A special meeting of the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario will assemble in St. George's Hall, Kingston, on Wednesday for the purpose of electing a Bishop to succeed the Rt. Rev. C. H. Mills, who recently was installed at London, Ont., as Bishop of the diocese of Huron.

The meeting will be presided over by the Rt. Rev. J. F. Sweeney, the Lord Bishop of the diocese of Toronto.

The following representatives to the synod will be in attendance from Belleville:

St. Thomas' Church, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar; Mr. John Elliott, Mr. J. J. Kerr, and Mr. H. A. Geen.

Christ Church, Rev. O. G. Wright, Rector; Mr. O. A. Scott, Mr. George B. Smith and Mr. George Stokes.

St. John's Mission, Hermon Avenue, Mr. Wilkinson.

Rev. H. A. Geen will also be in attendance.

PLAINFIELD W. M. S.

The January meeting of the Plainfield Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. H. Rollins. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. J. Harrison, Mrs. W. Hall and Mrs. R. Rollins. Devotional leaflet was read by Mrs. R. Harrison on Phillip. Mrs. Hubel and Mrs. Cafley led in prayer.

The roll call was answered by name of a missionary in Korea. The officers for the year were installed by Rev. Mr. Cafley. The programme included: solo by Mrs. R. Harrison; reading by Miss M. Hamilton, reading by Mrs. C. Hall on Dr. Aylson; poetry reading read by Mrs. J. W. Hamilton.

Mrs. Cafley spoke on "Guides to prayer." Prayer by Mrs. Denyes closed the meeting. Mrs. Rollins served a delicious lunch and a social half hour was spent.

The Jordan Roberts, who have been doing the drilling will move the drilling machine and resume operations.

Tri-Weekly Service

The problem as to whether the train to Picton is to run tri-weekly or daily was discussed and it was decided to cooperate with Picton in the matter. The C.N.R. railroad had a former bill waiting to put on a tri-weekly service which was voted down. It is likely now that the tri-weekly service will be put into effect

Mr. Waldorf the tax collector, was urged to make every effort in the collection of back taxes.

Garage on Fire

A fire broke out at 8.30 a.m. Monday in Titus Garage back of their stores on Dundas street. Two nearby barns belonging to Mrs. Williams and W. H. Ireland also took fire. Mr. Titus had a number of cars stored in the garage and the top of one of these was burned also some tires which were stored on the second floor. The fire was largely confined to the upper part of the three barns. The roofs and upper structure suffering the greatest damage.

SPEED AND ACTION IN "PRIVATE LIVES"

Can you imagine the predicament of a bride who, on the first day of her honeymoon at a fashionable hotel, discovers her first husband has the suite adjoining hers? And then can you picture her added embarrassment when she learns that her first husband is also of the honeymoon party with his latest marriage to a second wife?

Well, that's the perplexing situation confronting Norma Shearer in Metro's glamorous and scintillating adaptation of Noel Coward's Broadway success, "Private Lives." In which this charming actress is costarred with the debonair Robert Montgomery. And to make matters even more complicated Norma's new husband is a man possessed of a jealous fellow who is always taking sleeping pills when Norma's first husband, Robert Montgomery, is around. And Bob's new wife is a pretty little chatter box who constantly bores Bob's first wife. So Norma and Bob are faced with trying explanations, wants to leave the hotel at once, but neither Norma's husband nor Bob's wife will budge.

Bob and Norma are forced to talk things over and, in doing so, discover they are still madly in love. So very promptly indeed they decide not to take things too seriously and, to show how hurried they are, they elope together for the second time leaving their respective wife and husband to eat lunch.

That's just a bare outline of the story of "Private Lives," one of the most amusing films in which you've ever seen. With witty, clever, biting lines to speak, and extravagant, riotous situations to interpret, Robert Montgomery and Norma Shearer certainly have a field day. Or have these two clever players been ever so brilliant before? Especially in the final scene, a breakfast experience in which Norma and Bob entertain their respectively deserted and dejected husband and wife.

In addition to Miss Shearer and Montgomery, two other important roles are portrayed by Una Merkel and Reginald Denny. Elio as the deserted wife and husband, learn that all's well that ends well. Metropolitan also contributes a grand performance in a comparatively small role.

"Private Lives", comes to the Bells Theatre, Belleville, for five days, Matinee daily. Preview audiences are already evidencing their superior entertainment to the original New York success. While failing to lavish praise, ladies and gentlemen, lavish praise.

"Dubarry Was a Lady", co-starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Blondell, closes a successful engagement at the Bells tonight. The breath taking action of this romantic comedy-thriller takes place in and about the confines of a train, railroad station, whose ever changing throngs creates atmosphere rich in drama and human interest.

Eugene Angers K.C. Raised to Bench

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—Eugene Real Angers, K.C., Montreal, has been appointed Puisne Judge of the Exchequer Court of Canada. Official announcement of the appointment was made last night. Mr. Angers, who succeeds Mr. Justice Audette, who retired on May 14 last on reaching the age limit.

A leading member of the Quebec Bar, and a nephew of a former Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, Sir Auguste Real Angers—the newly appointed judge has practiced his profession in Montreal since his admission to the Bar on July 4, 1907. He was appointed a King's Counsel in 1930.

At The Capitol

SETH PARKER AND JONESPORT FOLKS

Which is the hardest to face for the first time, a radio broadcasting "mike" or the microphones and cameras of a talking picture?

There are six radio celebrities who are in position to give an expert opinion; Seth Parker and five of his original National Broadcasting Company troupe, who play tomorrow in RKO-Radio Pictures' rendition of "Way Back Home," at the Capitol Theatre, which opens a three day run this week.

"The first time I faced a radio microphone was in giving a free talk on 'How to give an elocution,'" Seth declares. "I was perfectly confident about it until I was about to speak, and then the worst case of stage fright in my life hit me. It's something I've never gotten over, quite, in broadcasting hundreds of times since. Also over the giant NBC network and other stations.

"It was the thought that my voice, once spoken here, couldn't be recalled for editing or revision; that it was being made forever, and would ring in the ears of countless listeners-in!

"While I've never persisted from the first, least-important broadcast I ever made, I didn't seem to feel it when I was suddenly confronted by a camera, microphone, and and complicated business, the filming of a picture. Somehow, I wasn't afraid."

Effie Palmer the "Ma Parker" of radio fame in Seth's broadcasts, declares that it was the movie "mikes" that terrified her. She turned from long training for the stage to the broadcasting studio and wasn't awed, but when she saw both cameras and movie "mikes" glaring at her along with a number of movie folk and spectators she was "petrified." She soon recovered, however, as her fine work in the film attests.

Sophia Lord, who plays "Lizzie" in the film and on the radio broadcasts, didn't mind either. "I have a "worried" characterization, so I fancy I do all my worrying in character, not off the side" she declares.

Bennett Kilpack, well-known actor who depicts the quaint "Uncle Sus" in radio and film observers that "It's highly complimentary to film work to know that the director can say: 'That was rotten; let's go it again.' We can't do that on the radio, and you can't do it on the stage. I think it brings better results for this reason: The actor who has to worry about making a fatal mistake has some of his mind and energies devoted to this worry. In pictures he can throw himself wholly into his work, because a mistake, while it may be costly, isn't fatal."

Raymond Hunter, famed "Captain," the old sea dog in Seth's broadcasts and films, thinks also that the radio "mike" is the more terrifying. "Your audience seems ghostlylike; in the back of my mind when I broadcast is often the idea that they are sea in a story sending out a wireless message for help."

Tuesday night is the last showing of "The Secret Witness" and of "Free Pass Night," when Mayor Geo. O. Tice will draw from a black box, the four lucky tickets. These tickets will entitle four people in the audience to receive free passes for one year, for nine months, for six months and for three months.

The drawing is set for 9 p.m. and patrons are advised to be early to secure a good seat.

Kitchener Council Asks Investigation

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 3—The City Council last night passed a resolution calling upon the Ontario Government to appoint a Royal Commission to enquire into the workings of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission.

The resolution said the council was of the opinion an investigation by a committee of the Legislature would not be sufficient. It urged the appointment of an unbiased tribunal determined to ascertain the truth regardless of what the truth may be."

THE ARMS CONFERENCE

Today the world cannot but stop and listen to ominous sounds in two quarters of the earth. In the Far East there lowers the menace of a grave conflict by the ancient resort to war in all its ugliness, in the disaster, in loss of life and in national wounds which can never be healed. In the west there assembles a gathering to consider the reduction of armaments as a step in the way of permanent and lasting peace. The former situation has been in the making for many months and the other has also been in preparation. The former has shown itself in all its ugliness just on the eve of the arms parley and seems almost a sardonic gesture of the war-god to mock all the efforts put forth by civilization to put war as a solution of international disputes out of the way. It is leading many people to lose hope and to feel that wars in the long run are nature's way of taking care of surplus people, in this case Japan's overcrowded population and China's teeming millions.

The grim facing of the facts makes today's opening of the Disarmament Conference momentous. No unprepared zealots are to be found about the tables at Geneva, they are men who know what burden rests upon them. The present situation in the East demands the final analysis of security—What is to take the place of the security that armaments give?

If the League is able to assist in the solution of the Oriental problem then it will have proved that mutual understanding is the chief means of peace. It will have proved that there is some other security rather than guns and battleships to keep nations from flying to one another's throats. The present situation with competition of armaments does not guarantee peace, it gives a sense of false security. Jealousy and suspicion are the results. It is like a state of society wherein every man carries a weapon. He is afraid of his and one man tries to beat the other to it in a quarrel.

The peace of the world hangs upon this conference.

THE BOUNDARY WHICH BINDS

It was an appropriate message which Col. the Honorable Hanford MacNider gave the other evening when he spoke at the fine example of considerate neighborly behavior which exists along the border between Canada and the United States. The line which divides for political reasons is the line which draws together two nations.

We have the same great principle at work in the two racial divisions of the Canadian people, the English-speaking and the French-speaking. Col. Mac-Nider spoke of the division of the northern American continent into two peoples as being the best thing that could be arranged for the maintenance of the institutions which both cherish, so it might be said with regard to the French-speaking and the English-speaking portions of the Canadian people, that this very racial difference is a cement which has bound them closely together the parts of the nation and will lead to a richer national life.

So even in the case of the municipalities. The boundary is the point of junction.

AN AMERICAN VIEW

New York Times commenting upon the Shanghai loss of life says, "The most shocking story of what happened at Shanghai is that the Japanese military command blundered sadly. The intention could not have been from the first to bomb a nunfortified city and to leave burning houses and slaughtered natives as a kind of testimony of what that power will call a burst of Japanese savagery." The Times goes on, "Without hollow pretences of superior virtue or any hypocritical flourishes at all, other nations like England and the United States are warranted in notifying Japan that they regard the situation created by her at Shanghai as 'very serious'."

The situation the Times says is worse than war, "Besides its immediate terror it causes a sense of alarm to spread round the world. Apprehension will tend to take the place of confidence. Fear arming to the teeth will gain a new hearing in every nation. So much can be done by reckless action such as this age of all the world, when every part of the earth, even the most remote is under the minute inspection of mankind, to destroy the repose of civilized peoples."

Brevity is the soul of wit and the nearest approach to wit at any banquet given the country representatives under the auspices of the Toronto Council of the Chamber of Commerce was Friday evening's affair which was pure enjoyment and instruction because all speakers were limited to time.

The babes and children whose bodies were riddled with bullets in the warlike scenes at Shanghai did not have a chance to protest their right to live. War's curse! Gun-fodder again!

THE SOUL SPEAKS
By Aline Michaelis

I am a citadel,
Lofty and strong,
My deathless walls repel
The hosts of wrong.
Forever firm I stand;
Though foes assail,
The force I wield command
Must still prevail.

I am a ship that sails
The stormiest seas
And fears no angry gales,
No treachery.
With chart and compass mine
My course I keep
In spite of winds that whine,
Seas dark and deep.

A ship, a citadel,
A golden dream,
Deep in the life I dwell
And reign supreme.

A DRUNKEN COBBLER is blamed for causing a railway disaster in Russia that caused the death of sixty-eight persons and the injuring of one hundred more. Eleven railwaymen are being tried for negligence. Vesyolof was a cobbler and in Russia they say "drunk as a cobbler" when they mean very drunk. Vesyolof lay down on the track, by accident or design, but mostly through whisky, or vodka, as it is known over there. Along came a train and the Vesyolof body was trivial career. The train halted. Along came another train one minute ahead of time, going fifty miles an hour into the wreckage thirty, ploughed into the train stopped on account of the cobbler's death. Sixty-eight deaths and one hundred injured, with eleven railwaymen on trial for being responsible for the collision is the net result of the cobbler going to sleep on the track.

AN ANCIENT CIVILIZATION having as its habitat the west coast of North and South America carries deep and compelling interest to those who have read such books as Lew Wallace's The Fair God and others along the same line, of Montezuma, of Cortez, Pizarro and other prominent figures of the period. Mexico, Peru, Chili, "The Spanish Main" are names to conjure with for the reader who revels in historical novels dealing with North and South America. Interest is revived in the ancient grandeur of Mexico by recent discoveries unearthed by archaeologists. Pearls as large as doves' eggs, and perfectly formed, bracelets studded with jade, turquoise and emeralds, and plaques of gold, exquisitely worked and other priceless objects, found in the fifteenth century tomb at Monte Alban constitute the most valuable archeological treasure ever found on the American continent. Upward of one million dollars is the value placed upon it by the museum purposes alone. Great secrecy and care was taken in transporting the treasure in that land where bandits flourish and the law of the gun and knife still holds good. Every piece was wrapped separately and a close watch kept over the boxes. The breastplates found weighed as much as three pounds, many were beautifully engraved and the patterns are unusual that they are sure to attract world-wide attention.

Up on the asylum roof a few repairs were being carried out by a local builder, who had asked for someone to assist him in a little job.

All went well until lunch-time, when, as the clock struck one, the builder's assistant clutched him round the neck, and, giving a terrible laugh, said—

"Come on, let's jump off!"

The builder was frightened out of his life, but suddenly he had an inspiration.

"Oh, rats!" he replied. "Anybody could do that. Come down and let's jump up!"

SORE LOVE, BUT HONEY

Love and Honey came into the life of Harry Somerfield but, apparently, he objected to their manner of arrival.

Elmer Love and Haycroft Honey were in Love's car when it collided with Somerfield's. All three men alighted.

"Love," testified Somerfield, "hit me in the jaw, and Honey kicked me."—Washington Star news item.

MODERN ETIQUETTE
By Roberta Lee

A. Who gives the signal for leaving the luncheon table?

A. The hostess rises first, just as she does at the conclusion of dinner.

Q. May a woman ignore a slight acquaintance whom she meets in public, if she has no sufficient reason for doing so?

A. No.

Q. Should the hostess of a house party meet her guests at the railroad station?

A. Yes; this is her first duty.

Other Papers' Opinions

SPELL OF ORTHOGRAPHY

In a spelling bee held last week at Boston a student of St Paul "stood up" to the end of the contest. What does this remarkable performance indicate? Two theories may be advanced. In the first place, she learned to spell at a time when the world was more penetilious than it is today, the mid-Victorian period, when letter writing was done by hand, and the mails were in the sure mercy of a stenographer. As a matter of fact, the Victorian Era of fussiness and pomp nowadays does not need to know how to spell, though it, is rather important that the advanciness should have some education along this line. Even now many letters bear evidence that this knowledge is not possessed.

Another thought obtrudes: What class of words were called out in the contenders at the Picton spelling bee? It seems incredible that a woman of culture should be familiar with the strange new words that have become part of everyday speech. For instance, no one beam seventy years ago of "psychoanalysis," "complex," "inhibition," or even "cosmetologist," which has just appeared in print.

The coinage of words is keeping pace with the output of the world's minds. Strange combinations are, in the case of metals, the alloy of the language. Take the word "radio" of the lexicographer, and it is well for the late Dr. Johnson that he was not bothered with the sports pages of the daily press, with technical articles written at trials by medical men and atheists. As it is, most dictionaries are out of date by a year or so; a great thing for the publishers.

One of two conclusions may be reached in regard to the ability of the public to telegraphic spelling—either that a rather ancient dictionary was used in the contest, or, if modern speech provided the words, that the average boy knows of a wonderful age.—Toronto Globe.

CANNING INDUSTRY

The canning industry of this county has found a splendid home in Prince Edward, and the wide range of its product is sold, and, as well, used in this county. Statistics of the output of Canada's fruit and vegetable canning industry for 1930 was valued at $43,062,782 and the same year Canada imported canned fruit and vegetables to the quantity of $8,819,522.

Behind the branch of the industry which canned, evaporated and preserved fruit and vegetables had an output valued at $22,376,313, which in 1929 was valued at $31,-158,415. During the same five-year-period the value of vinegar, pickles, sauces, etc., produced grew from $7,962,804 to $11,635,377. The manufacturers' value of the output of the industry in 1930 was in the matter of tomatoes and peas, 339,949 cases of tomatoes being produced with a value of $1,736,796, as against 1,976,296 cases, valued at $4,933,217 in 1929.

THE FIRST CHEESE FACTORY

Controversy over the site of the first cheese factory which was operated in the Dominion continues to such an extent that Mr. W. A. Clemens, the Dairy Commissioner at Ottawa, who has interested himself in the matter, has appealed to the Historic Sites and Monuments Board to take the matter up. The Board has in regard to marking it.

The first factory in the was credited in the western Ontario cheese-manufacturing district, but long felt that the site of the first cheese factory in the province ought to be marked. After a series of inquiries prosecuted by him, came to the conclusion that honor was to be found in the county of Oxford, where the first factory was in early and successful operation.

He is still satisfied that Farrington's was the first cheese factory, but as many years have now been advanced that he considers it worthy of being marked by a monument unless there is perfect agreement on the matter.

That is exactly what the Record-er and Times did in the case of many months ago, when the subject arose for discussion. If the site of the first cheese factory in Canada is to be marked, there should be no doubt whatever about the matter, and the claims presented in behalf of the late Cheese. Since there are seems to be some doubt about the precedence claims of Farrington's factory, by all means let the matter be dropped until there is what Dr. Eadie calls "perfect agreement".—Brockville Recorder and Times.

REALIZATION
By H. Reginald Hardy

Purblind I walk the world of earth,
That far-off fields are fair,
And that which lie just out of reach
Is held beyond compare.

Perhaps illusion's magic spell
May guide my dreamer's step.
With fancies Truth must soon dispel,
And yet I sometimes doubt the thought.

For when in truth I see
Dark pines in stately beauty wrought
I know high ecstasy.

My heart leaps up, and in the still
Dun twilight hour I know
That dreams can never quite pursue
The sunset's smoky glow!

EARN MONEY LEARN TO BE SELF-RELIANT

Children Want to Test Out Their Wings Unaided

TOO MUCH CARE

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
(Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

LOUIS E. BISCH

Modern systems of education lay great stress upon the self-expression of the child and upon making him, as early as possible self-reliant.

If the little tot wants to walk in the sand alone, let him try it. If he wants to climb the stairs, don't restrain him or become excited. Stand by in case of real danger, but don't give him courage such an ego impulse.

Boys and girls, especially in their teens, are forever wanting to try their unaided pet, be we ever so fervent warning them of danger and frightening them too much. Athletics help especially baseball and basketball, where numbers play at the same time and competition is keen.

Swimming is also a self-reliant sport, as well as horseback riding.

One often sees a fond mother hovering over her son or daughter or girl who is trying to ride a bicycle or use the roller skates. She should assist the child, yes. But one must not foolishly "do be self."

In later life every child with more or less be bruised. Life is harsh. It isn't a Sat. Eve. Post story book. Therefore a parent should try to toughen a child a little, to prepare him for the hard knocks. Always a timid softy of him will only make him more susceptible to nervous breakdowns.

Allowing children to earn money is one of the best methods of teaching self-reliance. It helps to make them feel that they are useful, encourages thrift and makes them more careful of money.

One can, of course, begin by giving the child a penny for running an errand or drying the dishes. This should not be considered as a bribe, however, or even as a reward. That much must be made clear to the child. The money thus earned should later be used to help defray some expense, partly or wholly—better wholly—that does not mean luxury or merely a new toy. If a child earns money to spend on extra sweets, let us say, the habit may grow that it must buy it, such money is laboriously saved for a necessary. The child will get a hat or a sweater—something useful—and child knows will save the parent that much money. Such a child will arrise he would have to do without the extra sweets—which is a blessing one — self-reliance, plus a tender feeling of consideration for the burdens and responsibilities they have to undergo in the child's behalf.

Yes, look upon the money-making desire of the child as a good thing. Make them keep a home savings bank. Encourage an account in the "big" savings bank. Have them join the Christmas clubs, perhaps, and thus learn to save and accustom themselves as well as the money they accumulate.

During the adolescent years parents have the hardest time of it. They feel much is due them, children have free rein, and just how much is due them, and how much free rein means proportions; for from twelve to eighteen years of age or eighteen these modern youths want to take the bit in their own mouths and run away with it.

Absolute freedom does not teach self-reliance, however, especially it has not been prepared for from childhood up. Some restriction there must be used, to be sure, and just enough. Here, to accomplish the best results, the greatest tact and understanding must be exercised on the part of the parents. Sometimes too much self-reliance will lead to mortal disaster.

Old persons should drink warmly in winter to avoid draughts. Extra carbohydrates may be had from a cup of bouillon or milk and crackers is preferable during the afternoon or before bedtime. The body must have enough food to burn and keep the body warm.

NONSENSE TO SAY

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Feb. 2.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuter)—It was announced here that the government was determined to adhere to the Gold Standard regardless of the recommendations of the select committee, which is being appointed, declared Hon. F. C. Stevenings, minister of Finance of the Union of South Africa, in the Legislative Assembly Monday.

To be free-minded and cheerfully disposed at hours of meal, sleep and exercise, is one of the best precepts of long lasting.—Lord Bacon.

Little Benny's Note Book

It was a swell morning this morning, seeming more warm and sunnier than winter, and I was standing on our front steps with my hands in my pockets, when my father, who had a day school in such weather, and who lives out of the house on his way to the office, saying, What a day, and stopped up in an office on a day like this.

I said, I know about me cooped up in school? I said, and he said, Ye, I guess you're right, but there dunnent seem to be any help for it. This was a new angle to me, and I cheerfully celebrate it with you, but unfortunately it issent, he said.

Well gosh, you maybe is a, I said. Shall I look in my little red book and see? I said.

Meeming my combination calender and diary with something printed after each date to prove it, was handy for, and he said, It wouldent be any use, I bet.

Not axaly saying not to look, and I took it out, and opened it to January 25, saying, G, pop likem what it says in here. Abe Lincoln, 1809. Invention of the ferret cream separator by Julienne Nippers, known as the father of dairy products. G, he said, that's what I was talking out of thair I said.

Id like to but I does quite see how G pop, if he hadent of been born, Julienne Nippers, there wouldent of had cream for your swetie pie, Gertrude Gaines, nowthat would of made you feel. Dreamt that werth celebrating? I said.

It certainly is, I October at the 10th Dinner Club all that cream mitte of gone unopposed all these years, I said, Father was telling me at the same time its too late now to celebrate, and I said, I wonder if the naybors saw us loafing about on the porch, or if they was down or working, they mite not understand, he said.

Well, I said, we'll show them my little red book, I said, and pop said that's a good idea, and I guess its the best we can do in the way of celebrating. Then he let out a long puff for" lunch heres the money I owe you, he said.

Meeming a dime, and he went to his office and I went to school feeling a little better.

FOUND GUILTY OF EXCISE ACT

Paul Kruger, Dungannon, Given a Month and Fined $200.00

An interesting Excise case heard at the Police Court House on Monday afternoon before Magistrate Walter Wiggins of Bancroft an ex warden of Hastings County. Hastings was conducted by W. McGillicott special Customs and Excise Officer, Paul Kruger, of Dungannon, and Herman Wellner, all of the township of Hungerford, charged with the His Worship, charged with a breach of the Excise Act, section 193 (1) (a). A. Payne, K.C., conducted the case for the Crown and T. Y. Wills acted for the defence. After all the evidence had been submitted, Paul Kruger was found guilty and sentenced to one month and a fine of $200.00 and costs, with an additional six months Magistrate Wiggins took a lenient view in the "big" case. Clarence Wellner was also found guilty, but being the son of Herman Wellner, and since his father must serve time, he will be the main support of a family of eleven children. The Magistrate found that the boy was only serving his father's punishment as the father had to pay, in the case Herman Wellner. The case was dismissed, there not being sufficient evidence, and Magistrate Wiggins gave the young man the benefit of the doubt.

Dance Marathon Reaches 100th Day

Newark, N.J., Feb. 1.—A dance marathon at Dreamland Park finished the 100th day of its existence. The management took steps to make it harder for the dancing couples who remain, hoping to eliminate two and decided to do something.

The rest period was shortened from fifteen to three minutes an hour. Couples must dance closely together by a four-foot chain, which they must hold with one hand. Sadie Ray, former champion runner of St. Albans, Queen's, N.Y., still appeared fresh.

73,000,000 Moslems Back British Gov't

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 1 (CP) —"No one can prophesy what will take place in the immediate future in India but I think we may be sure that the government of India and Great Britain can count on the assured of the local support of the 73,000,000 Moslems in India in carrying on a workable constitution," declared Sir Abdul Qaiyum, leading Indian Mohammedan scholar, addressing a service club here Saturday. "We Moslems want to help the government arrive at a solution, which will help us all," Sir Ab. added.

A British scientist has advanced the theory that while brains develop, teeth rest and that many men with defective teeth have more than ordinary brain power.

RHEUMATISM IN HER BACK

"Took All the Life Out of Me"

KRUSCHEN BEAT IT!

This woman was tired of trying to find relief. Rheumatism had fixed her for rheumatism. But she made one more attempt. This time it was Kruschen she tried—and of course it did not fail her.

"For two or three years I was under treatment for rheumatism in my back, which took all the life out of me. I always had to go to bed until the pain had gone away. Then I took me of different things to take, till I was tired of trying, and then I tried Kruschen, and found it was the very best. About two years ago I started taking Kruschen Salts, and I find they keep the bowels in splendid order, and that keeps me free. I can say with all sincerity that nothing keeps me fitter than the little daily dose of your wonderful Kruschen Salts. You can make what use you like of this letter and my name for fellow-sufferers."—Mrs. W. G. I.

No remedy can bring permanent relief from rheumatism unless it performs three separate functions. These are (a) dissolution of the needle-pointed uric acid crystals which cause the pain; (b) the expulsion of these crystals from the system; (c) prevention of a further accumulation of uric acid.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are the most effectual solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swiftly dull the sharp edges of the painful crystals, then convert them into a harmless solution. Other ingredients of these Salts have a stimulating effect upon the kidneys, and assist them to expel the dissolved uric needles through the natural channel. Combined with these solvents and eliminants of uric acid are still other salts which prevent food fermentation taking place in the intestine, and thereby check the further formation of fatal obnoxious uric acid.

Heard On The Street

No one can perhaps hold as many confidences as knows more about human nature than the barber. His customer, in the home that is turned to when all else goes wrong. His parlor which is the confessional of the rich and the poor alike is visited by all classes of men and women seeking into the future—trying to find out what lies ahead of them on the journey of life. Many are forced to travel, and seeking to peer into the mystery which is life.

Nowhere else, perhaps, can one get as much confidence, smooth talk, personal attention and entertainment for the price. Where else dimly lit, low little parlors, where ballyboo is dispensed as freely as the imagination of the fortune teller is required. If there is needed there is the duty of the fortune teller to dispense that cheer as much as is consistent. A friend is kept as long as he is a customer, and having to be more likely to give a larger fee with attendant tip. That is good business. Many a fortune teller in the Canadayer set up his magic tent, peered into the tea leaves or gazed into a crystal ball and then told the waiting visitor to beware of the dark man with their across the path, or to look out for the man with the pale face, a man honored among men. He was a great shaman—his word was law, and when he spoke he was obeyed implicitly. Many a fortune teller has made and retained them at enormous fees for the happy assurances the fortune tellers were carrying to the waiting people. If one is needed there is a demand and forsee dire troubles, and then informed the king that he might be liable to lose his crown, if he was not careful, then that seemed to be in great danger of losing his job, his head and all worries of this world. The king must be pleased, and he was, since all has been handed down to posterity.

Some of your favorite teller to make sure that you will be. Who ever heard of one of them sending their client away disgusted at the information that they could see nothing in the future, and from under her himself?

True, out of one hundred guesses or so made by the mystic one or two of them are bound to come out right, but the majority give as much enlightenment as a blank wall.

But today the ancient art has deteriorated. It has been outlawed and driven to privacy. Behind closed doors in dimly darkened rooms. With some this has only added to the mystery which surrounds the man or woman who deals the cards and lays them out in neat triangles, and which tells what is going to happen to you, or what you have received. But they still practise and in Belleville there are as many as there are in any other city of the size or larger. And a number of local residents who patronize these homes would reveal many prominent and well known people.

Not long ago one resident of the city entered one home where the fortune teller explained to her that the placing cards were destined sooner or later to be taken out and laid face down on the table. Distinctively clothed with a red sash around her head and a star-spangled shawl around her shoulders, the fortune teller sat at a table with the little table on which also reposed a shiny crystal ball, reflecting the light of a single candle which was the only illumination in the room. As the visitor entered, she sat at a stylishly dressed girl with a thick fur coat, head bent forward and the cards were spread out in a fan-shape.

"You will be fortunate in your love affairs," droned the soothsayer, "very fortunate indeed. You will receive a proposal of love to him, as the cards foretell. But guard your love carefully for there is bound to be trouble. I see a blonde woman who is a friend of this man and who is attracted by her; after a lengthy period during which you have quarrelled with the man, he will return to you and life will be very happy. I see riches and all the heart could desire. You will be singularly fortunate in all that you do and there need be no fear of a future life of trouble. Your unhappiness will all be at an end, and God bless you will be nothing but sunshine. The cards tell me all this. I can see the many years into the future."

Is it your wish that I go on?"

So while the old mystic drones, of all the good times that are coming to the young lady beside eagerly forward to hear. Forgotten is all else when her—and how very life looks to her. Maybe those things won't happen her—and how very life looks to her. Maybe those things won't happen but it's nice to hear of them, and wouldn't give a nice crisp dollar for it?

MADOC WINS 4TH STRAIGHT

Defeats Stirling 2-1 and is Now Leading League

Madoc, Feb. 2 (Special)—Taking the lead in the first period the Madoc hockey team scored two goals in the first period last night and managed to pull out with a 3 to 1 victory over the Stirling hockey team. The game was played on a fairly good sheet of ice considering the weather, in the Madoc Arena.

Rupert and Henderson were the marksmen for the home team while Fraser Ingram and Stirling's lone scorer.

The game which was refereed by Allan O. Meagher, was rather fast throughout, only seven trips to the time-keep being made during the entire game. This win gives the Madoc team four straight wins over their Stirling and Tweed rivals.

The line-ups:

Stirling—Goal, Fox; defence, Akers and Ward; wings, Wanis and W. Fraser; centre, F. Fraser; subs, Hulin, Robertson, Reed and Scott.

Madoc—goal, C. Hickle; defence, Rose and Rupert; centre, Woods; wings, Henderson and Watson; subs Akey, Armstrong, Ross and Moon.

Referee—Allan Meagher, of Belleville.

OLYMPICS WIN TEST MATCHES

Defeat Port Colborne and Niagara Falls Each 1-0

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 2—The Canadian Olympic hockey team from Winnipeg and Toronto combined opposition of Port Colborne and Niagara Falls O.H.A. senior teams here last night and won but by 2-0, beating each of the peninsula teams by 1-0 scores.

The contest produced clever hockey, with the westerners showing up as worthy Canadian standard-bearers. The western visitors, while not as formidable a machine as the great Toronto Granites of 1924, are, however, a clever collection, and make strong defensive hockey their chief stock in trade.

Simpson, at centre on the second front line, showed to great advantage, scoring both of his team's goals and making other worthy attempts. The starting front line of Simpson flanked by Lindquist and Rivers, showed considerable ability, while Hincks, on defense, was much in the play. Cockburn in goal is cool, and much credit for the shut-out goes to him. He was the victim of an unfortunate accident when a flip from Kaminsky struck him in the face, necessitating four stitches.

BASKETBALLERS CAN TAKE LEAD

Kingston City Will Be The Opposition in Game

Considerable more than the usual interest is being shown by the local basketball fans in the game between Kingston Y.M.C.A. and the Y's Men, which takes place tomorrow evening at the Y.M.C.A. gym. This is partially accounted for by the fact that 5 of the Belleville players were former team-mates of the "Service Men" and are well known in this locality. Both Earl "Patsy" Allen and Harold "Bucky" Buck are capable performers and will undoubtedly make the task, which the locals have to perform, considerably more difficult as they are players of no mean ability. While performers with Belleville Allen played forward, while Buck was used as a forward and also a defence man when the occasion arose. Both of these boys are Limestone City boys, however, and will be seen playing for the "home town" tomorrow night.

The Y's Men are in no way discouraged by their failure to come through against the fast Queen's team over the week-end. They had what is known in sport parlance as a "night off" but will be right on the job here for tomorrow night's battle as the winning team takes the lead in the loop. The locals realize that they have a stiff opposition and will work that much harder to try and take the league leadership. Tim "Phil" Brockell is the coach of the Kingston crew and his ability as a coach is well known in and about Belleville. Although the Kingston the fast Queen's crew into camp last week, the locals are of the opinion that they will show that they have a "way home". Because of the small size of the floor at the Kingston gym they will be in vogue tomorrow night and this is the brand of basketball which the locals thrive on. Win who may, the patrons are assured of seeing a fast, exciting game from the first whistle until the final gong is sounded.

The Belleville-Kingston game gets under way at 8:15 p.m. but previous to this the fans will be treated to a church league play-off game when St. George's battle St. George's in the first game of the juvenile play offs. These kids play a smart brand of basketball and the fans are assured of forty minutes of action.

Louisville, Ky. — Billy Recdeer, Louisville, knocked out Bill Thomas, Louisville (7); Frankie Palmo, Cincinnati, outpointed (newspaper decision) High Grey, Evansville (10).

Square Edged Puck Again in Use

Toronto, Feb. 2—Bevelled edges were banned for pucks used in the National Hockey League at a meeting of the circuit's governing committee here yesterday, it was decided, the major loop will return to the square-edged disc in use until the newer form was adopted this season on humanitarian principles.

Decision of the league wipes from the list of N.H.L. equipment the second invention of Art Ross, veteran mentor of the Boston Bruins and stellar goal-tender of other days. The League still retains the official equipment hump-backed goal net designed by Ross to prevent the puck from bounding out after it enters the enclosure.

OUTLAWS' ADMITTED

Toronto, Onl., Feb. 2.—Doors of organized hockey were opened last night to "outlaw" members of the American Hockey League personnel with reservations. At a meeting of governors of the National Hockey League, it was decided to consider each on its merits, applications from players who joined the A.H.L. prior to 1st break-away from the N.H.L.

LINDSAY VICS TAKE TRENTON

Defeat Weatherers in Own Back Yard By 6 to 5 Score

TRENTON, Feb. 2.—(Special)—Trenton Terminals lost their second game to Lindsay, here, on Monday night in a close game, the final score being 6 to 5 in favor of the "Lindsay Vics". The last few days have not been helped in making a perfect sheet of ice and neither could find fault with it. The visitors showed up well playing nice combination at all times. Fear-all their centre man was undoubtedly the best man on the ice scoring two goals. Willis Williamson in wing ran a very close second he also netting a brace. McLarry in goal for the visitors had his hands full as the local boys were shooting hard and often. "Terry's Terriers", while working hard at all times some of the boys seemed to think that nice combination was the penalty box instead of on the ice. Bohan played his usual heady game giving two assists. Jennings was also in tally up two goals while old Sunfish Anderson, who has been rated as a has been for some time stepped right out with the young lads and played real heady hockey getting a goal. Gordon Bowen the big centre man had his poke check working to perfection, thereby working up one to his credit. Powell netting the other goal.

Third Period

The game started off with a bang the last ten being rather a novelty around here this winter. Bohan, Jennings and Powell displayed some nice combination, sliding through centre ice, Powell netting another for the goal repeatedly. Miller and York managed to get all the way down the ice but the shot could not be beaten. Williams after about a minutes play, was given a hard shot from right wing. A minute later Bohan, after the same man went in to score and at the tail end of the period, Cormier tallied the third one for the visitors to the local's goose egg.

Second Period

In the first minute of the play Williams went on the "Penalty" and a dispute followed before peace was restored by Jackie who seemed to think it was in, but Referee Hardin would not allow it. Miller, Bowen and Anderson went down and around it up around the visitors, goal Anderson scoring the first for the locals. A minute later Johnson scored, Bohan and Powell having a couple of shots a piece but unable to get one across, Pearsall, for the visitors, was to be commended for to score the fourth. Anderson fanned on the long shot, Williamson's puzzy while Bowen's back checking saw Spratt plenty to worry about. Pillon came right through the entire team alone shooting McLarry making a sensational stop robbing him of a goal. Anderson and Pearsall in a little unfriendly set-to were given a little time to cool off. Bowen, after several tries in the same line, Lindsay now was trying to get on the scoring end when Culverson got a penalty his second for the game. A minutes leaving Trenton with three men on the ice. Bohan and Johnson these boys sure played hockey and managed to keep the visitors from scoring until the end of the Second Period

Third Period

The frame opened up with the locals, two men still in the box against a complete Lindsay team. Williams scoring on a pass from Pearsall in the first minute of play. Bowen, Miller and Powell combined for another goal, Johnson scoring on a pass from Bohan. The local team had the best of the play for a while, but the big defence—Sean, came through a couple of times was unable to score. Bohan and Johnson then repeated their performance of a few minutes previous tying the game up. Needless to say the fans at this stage of the game were on edge. Incidentally it was the largest crowd that has been out to a game this year. In the last couple of minutes to play Spratt scored on a pass from Martin putting the visitors one up. The Trenton boys tried hard to tie her up again but were unable to do so in the short time remaining to play.

Lindsay—Goal, McLarry; Defence Bohan and Johnson; centre, Powell; Wings, Williams and Gerster; Subs, Martin, Crofton, Spratt and Barnet.

Trenton—Goal Steenburg; Defence, York and Culverson; Centre, Bohan; Wings, Parnell and Johnson. Subs, Pillon, Miller, Anderson and Bowen.

Penalties—

1st period—Spratt of Lindsay.

2nd period—Crofton, Wright, Pearsall, Trenton—Bowen, Culverson, Culverson, Anderson.

Belleville has at least six heroes who have been training for the past three or four months and are ambitious to have only had a few opportunities to display their prowess on the local circle recently. We are of the opinion that Belleville has missed a hand to stage a boxing bout in Belleville. We have in the city such a move until the O.H.A. season is over in March. We, yet we feel that the fight fans of this district are "starving" for a fight card in Belleville.

Belleville has enough competent boxers to stage a card providing the matchmakers can bring in enough fighters to take on the local lads. There are local fighters weighing from 118 pounds up to 180 pounds. With six or eight such local boys and an equal number of boys from, say Kingston or Peterboro we feel assured that the project would be received with enthusiasm locally.

We are glad to see that a local boy has been made good on the McGill basketball team. George Jackman, 2nd is the question is playing centre for the local "Redmen" this year. They won their first intercollegiate game last night defeating Varsity seniors on Saturday night. The McGill "basketeers" were victorious in the intercollegiate last year and seem to be headed for the championship again this year. George is considered one of the best centre men in the intercollegiate loop.

Today is Candlepeas Day or Ground-Hog Day as it is sometimes known. The winter sportsmen are all pulling for a bright day so that the shadow as they are desirous of a little more winter weather before spring sets in. They have been lucky of late this to date and we are of the opinion that they will have plenty of winter weather before April Fool's Day.

The Olympic games open on Thursday and the first game of Canadian sportsmen will be upon the Winnipeg Ice in their effort to defend the honor of Canada at the Olympic Winter games.

Upon reviewing the present lives of the ex-heavyweight champions of the world we find that Jack Dempsey is a versatile actor, Jim Corbett is an actor and writer, Jim Jeffries is a prosperous California farmer. Tommy Burns runs a cafe in New York City, Jack Johnson is leading a travelling show in the United States, Jess Willard is in the wholesale grocery business, Gene Tunney is also in business, is the political "racket." Jack Dempsey, the "Manassa Mauler" is staging a comeback at his old stamping ground, Jack is doing "as well as can be expected" and is looking for a fight for a crack at Max Schmeling's crown.

O.H.A. Convener Joe Shortt told the Trenton juniors that they must play their postponed game against Alliston as early as possible. The winners of Section A and the winners of Section B and both secures have to declare a winner by February 22nd. Somebody has got to "step on the gas" if they expect to comply with the O.H.A. ruling.

Coach Hoolway is giving the local juniors light workouts of late, but will get them down to hearty stuff again for the game this week. Coach Holway is grooming his intermediates for their league game in Gananoque on Wednesday night. Manager Kingston forwarded sentences on Friday night at the Belleville office. Here's hoping a member the old days when the Belleville intermediates used to come to Belleville via a special train. Those were the happy days.

On Wednesday night Ralph Morden's basketball team entertains the Kingston basketball team at the local Y.M.C.A. There will be two games played that night. The first game, of the Kingston league play-offs, will be staged at 7.30 p.m. while the intermediate game follows immediately afterwards. The local quintette can take the lead in their best two out-of-three series by winning the game from the Limestone City lads. All teams in the league are now tied for first place with one win and one loss to their credit.

CHIEF ON CORNICE WORRIES BISHOP

PETERBORO, Feb. 2.—During his height of fame as the "human fly" blase in the Bishop's Palace of Rt. Rev. A. A. O'Connor here, His Lordship became agitated when he saw a fireman scrambling like a monkey along the cornice of the jolly blading roof, with leaping flames on one side an da sheer drop on the other.

"I ran through the crowd frantically," Bishop O'Connor said, "searching for the chief to implore him to call the man from such danger. None of the firemen knew where the chief was, until finally one of them pointed upward casually and said: 'Chief Gumbleton up on the cornice.'"

Wedding Anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reid Celebrated

Picton, Feb. 2—Picton curlers will not enjoy the sport with beech and stone this year owing to lack of ice for this season. At the annual meeting it was deemed advisable to have no play during 1932.

Board of Management elected for 1932 was as follows: E. E. Calnan, W. H. Nettleton, Dr. Fublow, F. H. Minaker, Dr. Fluhr.

This Board of Management elected the following officers:

President—A. E. Calnan.

Vice-President—W. H. Nettleton.

Sec-Treasurer—F. H. Minaker.

Mr. J. P. Brown is the retiring president.

Wedding Anniversary

The members of Picton L.O.B.A. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reid, King Street west, last week, the occasion being their 35th wedding anniversary. The table was laid for fifty and a bountiful supper was served. A toast to the bride and groom of thirty-five years ago was proposed by A. Culmer and a number of fully impromptu speeches were given.

During the supper Mr. and Mrs. Reid were presented with a floor lamp by the members and tribute paid to their work in the lodge in an address read by Bro. Roy Cornett.. Mr. and Mrs. Reid suitably expressed their appreciation of the gift.

The evening was featured by another presentation when the lodge remembered Mr. and Mrs. Beckwith on the latter's illness, recently at their home and all contents by fire. Mrs. Beckwith replied to an address expressing the appreciation of their valued services in lodge work during the past, which was made of two lovely willow rocking chairs from members of the lodge. Mr. and Mrs. Reid and Beckwith were greatly surprised but suitably expressed their feelings of gratitude.

A social time then followed with dancing, contests, music and cards which lasted the early hours.

Help the Shelter

Miller Children's Institute is giving the Children's Shelter here a shower. At the March meeting, members will meet the Red Hall by bringing a gift, these later being brought to the Shelter. Such donations assist in keeping down the cost of maintaining the shelter.

At the January meeting of this Institute, Mrs. S. P. Dodds, of Cherry Valley, president of Prince Edward County Women's Institute, gave a splendid address on "Salmon." Mrs. Dodds is well informed on many societies on this subject and has secured many literary. Demorestville and Cherry Valley Women's Institutes are being held in which the whole community take part and prizes are presenting to start such classes. A number of schools are taking instruction in cooking and it is planned to hold an Empire Day concert in which all schools will participate and which promises to be very successful. GROUP PLAYOFF BY JAN. 8TH

Juniors Will Play Postponed Game in Trenton on Thursday

After receiving word, by wire, from W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., Manager Ralph Morden, of the local junior schedule must tinker with his schedule. Convener Joe Shortt at once informed the Trenton junior management to this effect.

The result of the ruling, from the O.H.A., means that Belleville juniors play their regular scheduled game tomorrow night and postponed due to the lack of ice, on Thursday night in Trenton.

The first game of the local junior group playoffs will no doubt be played in Belleville on Saturday night with the second game being played in Trenton on Monday or Tuesday night, according to the statement issued by Mr. Shortt.

LOCAL MISSION SHOWS GROWTH

Membership in Three Churches Amounts to 101

The Dundas Street United Church mission comprising Dundas Street Centre, and Rosemore churches was created by The Bay of Quinte Conference, meeting in the City of Kingston, in June, 1926, when the Rev. J. S. McMillan, formerly of The City Mission Oshawa, being invited, was stationed mission pastor.

The object of its founders was to consolidate all the home missionary work of these three strategic centres into one strong mission, efficient organization, to provide a regular ordained pastor for these three poor churches in common with the stronger churches of the city and as far as possible keep it off the Mission Fund. The Rev. J. S. McMillan having served forty-two years in the regular ministry and paid into the Superannuation Fund all that time was getting a grant of $240 which he brought with him as part of his salary each year as he served these three time poor mission churches, it being augmented by whatever these churches could pay and certain amounts donated by the other United Churches of the city.

A degree of progress has marked this most difficult work amid the stress and strain of this unique economic depression. The twenty members found here when this mission was formed has increased to 101—the three mission churches neglected for years have been repaired and beautified and some new furnishings added at a cost of $900 and all paid for. Dundas St. and Centre Sch. having paid nothing previously are now raising annually $130 each for the minister's support. The duplex envelope system has been introduced at each church and operates with fair success.

This mission has, 115 families about 500 persons in all mostly poor and underprivileged, unemployed and needing relief—it has three Sunday Schools with 180 scholars rolling $200—two Ladies' Aid Societies with 25 members raising $100 —a Young People's for serving and helpful audiences and programs—a Men's Club with a membership of 30 members teaching all manner of stitching and useful needlework.

During the past year the pastor has preached three times each Sunday—conducted 40 prayer meetings—two weeks special meetings—made about 400 visits—dispensed the sacrament—baptized 29 —married the happy pair—officiated —attended numerous other funerals besides acting as chairman of the Unemployment Relief Committee of Thurlow including Stoney Lonesome and Quinte Hill Thanks for the many friends of other churches who assisted this work.

Wardrobe Planning Makes For Smartness

Impulsive buying of hats, frocks and artorial knickknacks is the easiest possible means of getting rid of money and acquiring an unsatisfactory wardrobe. A brunacolored coat seizes the fancy of a shopper, she must have it. There's something about it, maybe just a tuck or a cuff or a line that says: "Take me with you". She gets it home, introduces it to a brown dress that makes the coat look sick, or a red hat that smark at it and fights, or maybe a blue blouse that is downright mean to it. Everything is thrown out of color gear.

What then? After pilgrimages to the fashion marts to seek a frock and a hat that are willing to make friends with the beuna coat. And they are not found without considerable difficulty and much trampling.

When money is a stern, rockbound consideration—and with most of us it is—this business of clothes buying isn't like ordering a soda. You don't do it blindly, it takes a head is working properly. You recall the glaring little mistakes and that put your teeth on edge after you got them, that hung in the clothes closet for months until you decided you couldn't bear to wear them, and gave them away. Expensive mistakes. Just something wrong about bone. Or they would not team up with hats and coats.

There's a good rule about buying a dress, a hat, a coat; when in doubt, run away and leave it. Under a frock reaches up to the sleeves to be taken and held to one's bones beseeching one to adopt it, is the right sort. Pay no attention to the slick talk of a high-pressure saleswoman who says that suit was made for her, not always for the buyer.

Be suspicious of the fussy frock, the over-decorated garment; it may take to hating you. Of the silhouettes of a plain dress of luscious fabric woman doesn't tire. Lines, color and fabric. They are the essentials, to be thought about, considered. Be dubious about that not-so-good buckle on the belt, that cluster of trailing artificial flowers on the shoulders, that two-color bow dangling at the side. Sometimes dress designers don't know when the job is finished. They add the last touch which destroys the composition.

Economy may force the buyer to ask "Will this wear?" but more important is the question "Is this the style and this the color that will make me comfortable and happy?" for some robes carry with them a depressing influence. Th. buyer wakes them and if she were doing penance.

Good taste in dress and good judgment in selecting raiment, are distinctively rare qualities and cultivated by observing, by learning lessons from past experiences, by noting what well-dressed women wear. The shops have marvelous offerings at prices that haven't been known for years on end. No excuses for looking frumpy these days.

HOLLOWAY Y.P.S. ENTERTAINPICTON

Amusing Debate Won By Picton Debaters Last Night

Last evening Holloway Street United Church Young People's Society entertained Picton in the church parlors, eighty young people being present. After a singsong led by Rev. H. B. Neal. Miss K. Anderson, president, welcomed the visitors, hoping all would have a happy time, and asked Miss Wilson of Picton, to take charge of the meeting. The program, which was given by the visitors was as follows: Saxophone solo; Winston Hicks; reading, Hattie Unger; vocal solo, Ed ward Daley; piano solo, C." Blakely; reading, Miss Foster; vocal solo, Margaret Welbanks, stunt by Mr. Mann.

An amusing number on the program was an impromptu debate on the subject. "It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all." The affirmative side was taken by Georgina Minaker, Rose Mann, and defeated their opponents, Gerald Wright and B. Rogers.

After the programme, Miss Dorothy West directed games and card tests after which refreshments were served. The Belleville organization was thanked in a vote of appreciation voiced by the visitors.

ONLY WOMAN MAGISTRATE

Dr. Margaret Patterson Continues Notable Career

TORONTO, Feb. 2.—Dr. Margaret Patterson, of this city, is now the only woman magistrate in Canada, since both Mrs. Alice L. Jamieson, of Calgary, and Mrs. Emily Murphy, of Edmonton, have retired.

Fearless in her work and always ready to withstand criticism Magistrate Paterson has effected numerous reforms in social service in Toronto, and in Canada she has been in the forefront in seeking reforms to aid women criminals and correct the misdemeanors of young women by remunerative rather than by punishment and to afford protection to her sex by amendments to the criminal Code in relation to offences against women.

Her work in police court at Toronto at first met criticism. Even her appointment in 1921 was subject to bitter controversy. Named to the post by . Attorney-General W. E. Raney (now Mr. Justice Raney) at a salary of $3,500 annually, the appointment was opposed by the city council by whom her salary is paid, on the ground she had no legal training. It was argued, and her salary was increased that the needs of many members of the Bench. The principle of training still applies to all on the Bench was contested.

Dr. Patterson came through. With assumption of office, however, her duties as Police Magistrate and she was the centre of many disputed. But at all times the welfare of those who came before her court—patients as she is wont to call them—was her first thought.

"If possible," she said once, "I want to have a quiet room where if I can take every case, and, before forming any opinion, inquire into all the circumstances of the case, the misdemeanor, the home life, the state of physical health. Before any thorough investigation we can never do our best for the case."

Many cases, she thought, could be settled out of court, without publicity and punishment, but I believe when punishment is given it should be so stiff—that every convicted person being imposed indiscriminately—that they will consider the question of all circumstances surrounding the case.

Her work in India was characterized by the zeal which distinguished her whole career. Shortly after her arrival bubonic plague broke out. Dr. Patterson, Canada's resources were marshalled to combat the disease. Flowers on Patterson's part in this work was recognized by King Edward when as Prince of Wales he visited India and awarded her the Kaiser-I-Hind medal for service. Lord Kitchener's interest in dealing with the problem of ridding the army of camp followers—work requiring both medical and judicial skill—was a high one. She was professor of obstetrics at Lodhiana Women's Medical College. Her text book on physiology and hygiene was used in many Indian schools. She was recognized as an expert medical witness in women's cases in the high court of Allahabad.

Say Women Can't Be Brief in Wires

LONDON, Feb. 2. — Twenty-six million telegram forms are wasted every year.

Every year 58,000,000 telegram forms are sent out from the store department to post offices and sub offices in the British Empire. Office returns show that last year approximately 32,000,000 forms were handed across the telegraph office counters.

What did they do with the other 26 000,000 forms?

That is what the General Post Office wants to know. It is a big mystery still.

We stopped the wastage of some millions when we ceased issuing books of forms fastened with string and introduced the box system, which only allows one form to be taken at a time," said an official yesterday.

We have now discovered that the people to blame are those who only occasionally send a telegram and use two or three forms before the message is drafted to their satisfaction.

Women are undoubtedly the worst offenders, and use form after form. Little Dinger Lane, even if he went over the counter. They are incapable of expressing themselves briefly."

A tour of London post offices revealed some strange uses to which the forms are put.

There was the man who used them for betting slips, the woman who collected them for a diary, another who used them for letter writing, and always, in every office dozens of forms which had been partly filled in and then discarded.

A typical one read: "Dear mum. Married Tom in London this morning. Wonderful happy. We are staying. . . ."

But she had said too much. The form was thrown away!

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made At Home

To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice daily until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo Compound is guaranteed to restore faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. While it will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Has No Choice

By Thornton W. Burgess

The time may come for me or you To do the thing we fear to do. —Peter Rabbit.

There was no doubt in Peter Rabbit's mind that Jimmy and Mrs. Jimmy Skunk were under the back porch of Farmer Brown's house. As he sat in the moonlight staring at the hole under the porch into which, Jimmy's tracks led, he knew that he couldn't be mistaken. There were those telltale footprints in the snow. These were proof enough that Jimmy had gone in there, for there were no fresh ones coming out. This being so, of course, he must be there now. As if to make this doubly sure he had heard Jimmy's sleepy, cross voice under there and another sleepy cross voice which could belong to no one but Mrs. Jimmy.

"I wonder if they have been spending the winter together, or if one of them is just paying the other a visit under the porch?" wonder if they have been here all the time. No one but Jimmy Skunk or Mrs. Jimmy would even dream of daring to make their home in such a place. I wonder what Black Pussy thinks of it, and Mr. Sarcwlo of the long nose. She used to go in there a lot—I wonder if she has made a bed on the ground, or if they have dug a home down in the ground. I—I—I will be there, I will!" Peter made a face at the thought.

"Anyway I have found out where he is staying, and that is something." he continued. "If he is sleeping on the ground I should be able to get up on the porch if he is fat. I suppose he and Mrs. Jimmy keep each other warm, and I shouldn't think they would be warm enough to stay weather as we have been having. Yes sir!"

Peter didn't finish his thought. Something was on the end of his head just then and what he saw put thought of everything else out of his head. It was Reddy Fox. Yes, sir, that is just who it was, Reddy Fox. He was just coming around the corner of the barn.

What to do? Peter knew at once that Reddy hadn't seen him yet. He knew, too, that Reddy would see him instantly if he moved, even ever so little. If he took to his heels Reddy would surely catch him, for the nearest place of safety was across that wide dooryard in the old stone wall along the edge of the Old Orchard Anyway that was the nearest that Peter could think of, and he knew that Reddy could run faster than him before he could get there.

Was there any hope? There was so frightened that it seemed to him his heart stopped beating. Of course he didn't look frightened, not to Peter. Had he been carved from stone he could not have been more still than he was. Not so much as a single hair moved. Perhaps Reddy would go over to the Old Orchard without seeing him. Reddy was looking that way. Once he seemed to look straight at Peter, and Peter felt that all he could do to remain still.

Reddy turned the corner of the barn and trotted a few steps toward the Old Orchard. Suddenly he changed his mind, turned and trotted straight toward Peter. It was then that Peter remembered the hole under the porch. Had not Jimmy Skunk and Mrs. Jimmy been in there he would have laughed at Reddy Fox, but they were in there. They might not like it to be shouted come in, and if they didn't—Peter shivered at the thought of what might happen. There was no other choice turn aside.

Reddy didn't turn aside. He knew about that hole under the porch, and often visited it to find out if Jimmy Skunk were home. It was for this purpose that he turned aside now. Peter never waited as long as he dared. Then he made a leap for the hole and into it. He had no choice: there was nothing else he could do.

Madame Lacroix's delicious CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE

½ cup butter
2 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup milk
2½ cups pastry flour (or 2 cups and 3 tablespoons of bread flour)
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream butter; add sugar, a little at a time, beating until light; add beaten yolks and flavoring; add flour, sifted with salt and baking powder, alternately with milk. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in 2 greased 8-in. tins in moderate oven at 375° F. about 20 minutes. Recipe for Chocolate Icing and Filling is in the Magic Cook Book.

Why Magic Baking Powder is used exclusively at this

Montreal School of Domestic Science

"We teach 'our students only the purest methods," says Madame R. Lacroix, Assistant Director of the Provincial School of Domestic Science, Montreal. "That's why I always and recommend Magic Baking Powder. Its high leavening quality is always uniform, so my pupils are successful results every time you use it."

And Magic Baking Powder is the unquestioned choice in the majority of cooking schools throughout the Dominion. Cookery teachers—and housewives, too—prefer Magic because of its consistently better results.

VOLUME LIGHT ON THE MART

Price Changes Confined to Small and Select Group

Toronto, Oct., Feb. 3— Toronto Stock Exchange trading presented a ragged face this morning. The volume, as has been the case practically without interruption this year, was very light, price changes, normally fractional, carried no special significance.

Most of the leaders were slightly higher. Ford at 13 1-2, Nickel at 8 3-4, Loblaw A, at 10 1-4, Distillers at 5 1-2, were each up 1-4 point. Consolidated Smelters at 17 1-2 was up another point.

C.P.R. opened at 17 while Brazilian did not make an appearance the first couple of hours. Canada Cement preferred, dropped back more than a point to 64 and most of the other issues confined to small, though trading in this section of the list was also given by comparison with recent days.

Miss Exchange

Toronto, Oct., Feb. 3—Price changes were confined to an old-fashioned, dull, and unusually dull forenoon session on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today. While movements were confined to establish a definite trend a somewhat easier tendency was noted.

EXCHANGE RATES

Toronto, Feb. 3 (CP)—Exchange rates at noon today were as follows: Demand and cable sterling, 3.96; pound sterling in New York, 3.95; Canadian dollar in New York, .874.

ATTEND MASS IN A BODY

Sub-Division of Catholic Women's League Pray For World Peace

Members of the Catholic Women's League throughout Canada attended Mass in a body yesterday morning and Communion for the intention of World Peace. A special prayer composition of Belleville sub-division attended seven-thirty Mass at St. Michael's Church and Solemn Pontifical Mass was celebrated by Rev. C. B. Maher.

Today was chosen because on the second of February is celebrated the feast of the purification of the Blessed Virgin, for which reason members have special devotion. The ceremony of purification was an ancient custom of the Jewish people, which the Blessed Virgin graciously complied with, though she was without sin, as it had no special significance for her.

The custom of the blessing of candles for church and home use on this day has resulted in the day popularly called "Candlemas Day". The solemnization of the feast, however, have been transferred to Sunday, and in St. Michael's Church that day the special ceremonies will be held.

SERGTS. MAKE PRESENTATION

C. S. M. Charles Monk Recipient of Watch From Comrades

C.S.M. Charlie Monk of "B" Coy. Argyll Light Infantry was last evening, as the close of the regular monthly meeting of the Sergeants' Mess, presented with a handsome pocket watch. The presentation was made by the president of the Mess, C.S.M. George Lapsley, who spoke eulogistically of the recipient, and the regret of all at his severing his connection with the battalion, and his departure from the city, in accordance with his transfer. He alluded to the welcome he had experienced on joining the mess, and the thoroughly enjoyable time he had had while a member of it. He had never, in the civilian as well as army life, had the congenial companionship and happier association of chaps than he had with the Sergeants' Mess of the Argylls. It would always look back to his years in Belleville with fondest recollections and the happiest of those would be the times spent with his fellow sergeants. It ethanked them all sincerely for the remembrance which he will never cherish.

Brief remarks of a happy character were made by R.S.M. Jordan, ex-Sergeant Charles E. Hanna and others.

Sergeant Monks is leaving shortly to again reside in his old home-town, England. He came to Belleville first in 1927 and immediately joined the local battalion, and has since been one of its most active and enthusiastic members. In the Great War he served with the 2nd. 4th Battalion Royal North Lancashire Regiment, and at its close served five years in India with the 1st Battalion Shropshire Regiment.

Aside from the Argylls, interests he has held offices in the Moose Legion and with the Masonic order.

The good wishes of a host of friends in Ontario, as well as Scotland, across the "Pond" will follow Charles Monks on his departure from this community.

Bank of England Repays Big Loan

New York, Feb 3.—Fulfilling its announcement made on Jan. 29, the Bank of England yesterday repaid the $150,000,000 balance of the credit advanced to it last August by the New York Federal Reserve Bank in cooperation with other Federal Reserve banks and the Banx of France.

The bank made the payment without drawing upon its gold reserves, it was announced. The credit originally granted amounted to $250,000,000 and was renewed for $150,000,000 in November largely by drawing upon gold reserves.

Y'S MEN HEAR TALK ON EYES

Dr. J. S. Bigham, Speaker at Weekly Luncheon of Club

Considerable business was completed at the weekly meeting of the local Y's Men's Club held at the Y.M.C.A. last night. On account of the Queen's-Belleville hockey game next Monday evening, it was thought advisable to had no speaker be procured. Instead of taking the members of the Hockey Gang to this game they will substitute the members of the Trap and School boys' classes of the Y.M.C.A. On next Monday night the boys will be left Underwriters Evening at the club when the night's entertainment will be in the hands of the local Life Underwriters and they assured the members that they would have a speaker of note present. Plans are also completed for the annual Y's Men's dance to be held on March 11th, St. Patrick's night, this year. President Mel Blanchard occupied the chair for the evening and after luncheon George Pusley, very efficiently, introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. J. S. Bigham, an optician. Dr. Bigham gave the members a very interesting talk on "The Eyes". Dr. Bigham's talk in describing the doctor illustrated his talk by demonstrating with the black board, which helped to convey more thoroughly, the anatomical ideas and interpretations which the doctor wished to convey to the members. He spoke of the invention of the famous Maxo Clinic, who referred to the eye as a camera and the lens being set in the world. Dr. Sheard then described the various methods of using over the radio not long ago and, Dr. Bigham was of the opinion that this was one of the greatest advertising he had ever heard as it fitted the occasion to point out the benefits of the subject he was talking on, "The Eye".

Explained Formation

Dr. Bigham explained the formation of the eye from his several cases. He pointed out that the eye had to serve more than the line of children hood until old age and it was very essential to give the eye all the attention possible to the needs of a very tender nature.

The three main troubles which cause eye worry are known to the optician as tonsils, the teeth and namely teeth, tonsils and toxaemia. Dr. Bigham also told the members that all cases were not due to the eye if used to access and closed for reading, as the eye was the greatest mechanism known to the human body, as the eye muscles made up of fluids and permitted one to see both far and near and the tension possible in the muscles of a very tender nature.

FAIR BOARD WILL PROCURE BEST MIDWAY

Discussion on Subject is Lengthy at Monday's Meeting

NEW DIRECTORS

Possibility That Expense of Fireworks at Fair Will Be Curtailed

All of last year's directors were again re-elected at the annual meeting of the Belleville Fair Board held last night. Three new directors were added to the list in conjunction with the old directors in the person of Mr. Alf Holley of Belleville, Mr. John Wellwood of Sidney Township and Mr. Robt. Bunnett of Hastings County. These three men have taken considerable interest in the fair in years past and it was deemed advisable by the board of directors last night, to add their names to the present list.

A large number of the board of directors were present, when President Robt. Mitchell called the meeting to order. Secretary R. H. Ketcheson read the minutes and the correspondence all of which was received and adopted. The main issue of the evening was the engagement of a midway for the Belleville Fair in 1932. This question was very thoroughly gone into by the members and all sides of the many and better mid-way must be procured for this fair. The Sim's Amusement Co. was read from various midways desiring to get the Belleville fair and one show was so anxious to play in Belleville, that they had their personal representative at the meeting. This show the Sim's All Canadian Shows presented their contracts but nothing was definitely decided upon as to the booking of the meeting, that the Sim's shows were too small for the Belleville Fair.

After considerable discussion, it was decided not to send a delegation consisting of Messrs. J. Clarke, Robt. Mitchell and R. H. Ketcheson to Toronto to attend the annual meeting of the Provincial Fairs Association, which is being held there on Thursday and Friday of this week. It was the opinion of the members present, that these men could not get a first class mid-way by attending this meeting where they would be unable to come into direct contact with the mid-way owners. One of the shows, which were present at the meeting was the Conklin Shows, which support ten rides, and numerous other concessions or public interest and amusement. The directors are also bound to sign a contract with any particular mid-way but they will go to Toronto to try and get the best mid-way procurable for this year's Belleville Fair. The directors will also look into the question of fireworks and other entertainment for the afternoon and evening performance.

When speaking of the question of tree acts, in front of the grandstand, some thought consideration was read in connection with these acts. Among the acts under consider Webb and Clifford Company of Jackson, Ohio, and the Wallace and Hammett Amusement Company of New York City. Both of these companies guaranteed first class attractions but nothing definite was arrived upon. The fair board directors hope to have the best line of amusements on the Belleville midway for the 1932 fair.

On the subject of fire-works the question was very thoroughly discussed upon as some of the directors were of the opinion that too much money was being spent in this particular line of entertainment and much controversy it was decided to let the matter stand over but, that the cost of them would be cut to be got down to a little, perhaps to the extent of only having the fire-works the first three nights or something along that line. The directors also wanted to go on record, as thanking the city council for its kindness in giving this district as much help as they would have to some departments, and therefore would like to see some in the expenses of fire works cut down. A letter was received from the Ontario Fairs Association asking for a $100 another meeting will be called. This meeting will be held on February 9th, when the delegates will report back with whatever progress they have made in the line of amusements for the 1932 Fair.

OLD CHURCH TORN DOWN

John Wesley Supposed to Have Preached Last Sermon There

London, Feb. 3 (CP)—The house at Leatherhead, in Surrey, where John Wesley is reported to have preached his last sermon on Feb. 28, 1790, before he died, is to be pulled down by the local Council, and new Municipal offices are to be erected on the site. Some controversy has arisen upon this. The Clerk of the Council declares there is no authentic evidence that Wesley did preach his last sermon in the house, such evidence as there is going to show that he preached underneath the old cedar on the lawn.

Doncaster to Receive No Taxes From Track

London, Feb. 3—(CP)— For the first time within memory the Corporation of Doncaster will receive no rates from the Race Course, receipts from the race course. The Doncaster Cup and other famous races are owned by the Corporation, and this ownership has resulted in relieving the rates of Doncaster by thousands of pounds. In 1930, there was such a big profit from the Race Committee's receipts were slightly over £10,000, and in 1931, the Race Committee lost $100,000 of their normal income in two years.

Government-owned South Africa railways now have 12,673 miles of line.

WALKS IN AND SHOOTS THREE

New York, Feb. 3—Two unidentified men walked into an apartment on 11th street and Avenue A, whipped out revolvers, and shot two men and a girl in the street. They also wounded three other persons.

The assailants then fled down the stairs and escaped in an automobile.

Police at first expressed belief the shooting was the outgrowth of a beer war.

Identification also was among the wounded. She was identified as Mrs. Angelina Fiorgiani, and was reported to die, first reports said.

Those shot were Faine Del Grieca, Emily Pannella and Eorie Basile. The three men were wounded in the Bronx.

Police said the victims were members of Vincent Gallo's gang. Del Grieca, they said, was the Bronx gang leader's lieutenant.

JAPAN IN DEEP

Nanking Shelling More Dangerous Than Shanghai's

Washington, Feb. 2—France, Italy, Great Britain and the United States are pledged to preserve a solid front at Shanghai in their effort to defend western interests and prevent the outbreak of a disastrous clash with Japan.

It was admitted here that the situation was growing more dangerous each hour.

The four allied western nations have agreed to act in concert to bring pan over its violation of the neutrality of the International Settlement, and the United States, Britain and the United States have reinforcements on the way to guard their interests.

Newsmen last night that firing had broken out in the Shanghai area and the International Settlement was not surprising or offensive. They seemed to have little hope that Japan would, or even could, halt her drive against the Chinese there.

The view is taken by some authorities that Japan is so deeply involved that a withdrawal from her position now would be a confession of defeat, even though a continuance of her campaign against disorganized China might cripple her financially within a short time.

There was but one encouraging development yesterday. French Ambassador Claudel visited Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson late yesterday afternoon. It was reported France would co-operate fully with other Western nations in the conference of the French concession and the International Settlement at Shanghai.

No France-Japanese Pact

He took occasion to deny also the rumor, circulated for several days, that France and Japan had a secret understanding for armed joint-intervein in the Far East. Speculation was increased when French Ambassador Claudel sought an audience with the secretary of state.

Coming out of Stimson's office yesterday, Claudel announced that France was ready to stand with other nations in defence of foreign rights at Shanghai.

She had joined other nations in protesting against Japanese penetration of the foreign settlement, and her insistence on using it as a base for attacks on Chinese troops, he pointed out that the French concession itself was a difficult area to defend as it is between the Chinese city and the settlement. He also said he had told Stimson that France absolutely approved concert with Britain, Italy and the United States. He declined to comment on a ready that a cruiser was on the way to Shanghai.

Claudel found it desirable to go to the State Department in person after Counsellor Wilbur J. Carr submitted Under-Secretary of State Wm. R. Castle on Italy's similar, but less specific assurances.

BLUE JACKETS LAW

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

NANKING, Feb. 2.—Under the cover of a two-hour bombardment of the Lunghua Aerodrome miles from Nanking proper, the Japanese today landed blue-jackets from their ships in the Yangtze River.

The landing party encountered detachments of some 20,000 veteran Chinese troops shipped into Nanking during the past few days, who had set up strong defensive positions behind sand bag barricades in the water front area.

For half an hour machine guns sputtered, rifles cracked, but no one had in their attempt to replace the attached Japanese had successfully be established, nor was it possible to determine the number of casualties.

SHELLING CHAPEI

Four Japanese eighteen-pound guns, hidden behind the walls of a rifle range in Honkey Park, began to pour a rain of shells on the stricken Chapei sector of Shanghai this afternoon and 2,000 blue-jackets began massing, apparently to follow up the artillery attack.

Weasel Trap Takes Grip of Cat, Prisoner Two Days

Scouts Finally Find Source of Wails Coming From Trap

CAT DISAPPEARS

They called him Thomas, mostly —Percy, sometimes and Reginald less often when they were tempted to sneer and taunt this basic, unchanging name by which our home was no particular place, but who in the city, but if he was angry he began cans by day and who yowled and serenaded the neighborhood from the back fences every night, and who fought with subtlety and guile and a high hate with all manner of missiles whenever he happened to show himself. But he had his revenge, did Thomas, and he smiled darkly to the full the unexpected opportunity which presented itself not very long ago. Five days ago, to be exact.

Last Friday evening, shortly after the folks at the neighborhood in the vicinity of Dunbar street had settled, that is, themselves for the cool night air was disrupted by a screech which seemed to emanate from nowhere in particular, and from nowhere in particular, and was hung in the air until human nerves jangled and it was angled and gyrated at throbbing tenseness while the shocked wailing was repeated at the most unexpected intervals. Windows were thrown open and enquiring heads poked themselves out, but still no trace could be found of the tortured soul who poured its agonies out to the world about. Slowly the night changed to a close and the cold dawn broke, but no break was noticed in the wails which still rose above the town.

The house closet to the source of the noise was looked at suspicion. In vain did the lady of that house emerge therefrom with a few bloodless hands for inspection by the neighbors. Suspicion persisted, only that she was not engaged in the dissection of any still living animal or human being, and that she was she assert most violently that her hands had not been near the cat of vivisectionist laboratory, but still suspicion persisted, and even in her direction by suspicious neighbors.

Slowly Friday drew to a close and the wails which had begun Friday night began to deepen; but the sounds were still there and the cat was still living and vigorous as ever. But from the intermittent wails it had now developed into a steady pulsation of agony that rose in crescendo above the town's normal noises and aroused all neighbors grew more ominous; there was talk of having the police officer come and search the house even when the consideration of the weary family who seemed to be located closet to the source, and as the last resource there was a search party which had been organized and the police officer was being called for.

Organized effort always wins. In union there is strength and co-operation has achieved more than one deep mystery, as has filled any police headquarters will show. The Toy Boy Scout had just displayed their mettle and the tortured soul was found. But it was not a wild Banshee that had inadvertently fallen into the trap and cried its woe at not seeking help; it was not a human being who had been impaled on hook and left to die—it was Thomas with his paw in a trap. For nearly two days he had lain there with one foot securely imprisoned in a steel spring trap that had been baited and placed under the barn to catch a weasel that had been raiding a neighboring hen roost. The weasel had been sighted a few days before to that and the trap had been set of the Senate.

immediately after. Thomas was extricated from the trap—a snarling, clawing, spitting fury—Imprisonment might have had some effect on his vile temper which had begun to weaken perceptibly at the last, but it had not dampened his spirit, and he was still as courageous, still as ready to fight as ever. However, with the aid of a strong pair of mittens the struggling cat was at once, liberated and immediately set upon with no more has Thomas been seen in that neighborhood; no more has his silvery voice resounded through the still air and once more quietness has descended upon the district. Thomas may have taken up abode some other place in the city, but if he has done so he must be a changed feline. And maybe after this although he did have his revenge—by a round-about way—he still feels a fear of cat things with oils, a raw meat in them to trap the unwary.

TRADITIONAL COURSE WILL BE FOLLOWED

Opening of Parliament to Attract Large Attendance on Thursday

TICKET DEMANDS

Effort Made to Pass Around Privilege of Attending

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—The opening of Parliament will be attended tomorrow if demands for tickets to the dress gallery are any indication. Inquiries again, according to officials of the Senate, the requests for tickets are such as to tax the accommodation of the Upper Chamber to the utmost. The capacity of the gallery is limited, but not particularly large, and it is a problem, at times, to find accommodation for those who wish to see the colorful opening ceremony.

This year an effort is being made to keep a record of those who attend, so that they may be given the same persons shall not be provided with invitations for the next year or so. Officials say that year after year a number of the same people have been securing tickets and attending the opening. These particulars, it is said, are supplied to Ottawa and are in a position to obtain tickets with little trouble to the visitors. The view of Senate officials is that the Opening ceremony is regarded as a national one, and that arrangements should provide for the maximum number of people witnessing it year after year.

The opening ceremonies next Thursday will follow along the lines which have been laid down through the passing of the years. Representatives of the Church, the Judiciary, the Army and Navy, the diplomatic Corps will join in the observation of ceremonial which is followed by centuries. Flashing uniforms, beautiful dresses, the scarlet robes of the Commoners, with the Senate Chamber, for a beautiful background, will make the picture.

One change in procedure is noted. Reverting to the custom observed, upon the opening of the Parliament, that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were here. Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Bessborough will arrive together at the main entrance to the Parliament buildings and will lead one procession to the Senate Chamber. For some years it has been the custom for His Excellency the Governor-General to proceed to the main entrance, where his wife went to the Senate entrance and led her own procession to the Senate Chamber. On Thursday Lady Bessborough will sit in a chair which was formerly owned by the Princess Louise. It is similar to the chair which is ordinarily occupied by the Speaker

CLAIMS CREDIT FOR EXPOSING OLD BAIT ACT

M. H. Nickerson Tells About Tempest Stirred

¼ CENTURY OLD

Irate Fisherman Knocks Premier Into The Dock

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 2. — (By The Canadian Press)—The manner in which an act of the Newfoundland legislature with respect to restrictions on fish purchases led to what might have become an international "affair" a quarter century ago, and now a premier of the Old Colony was knock from a wharf into the dock by an irate fisherman, is described by M. H. Nickerson, veteran student of the Maritime Provinces' history, in an article in the odd "Nova Scotia Fishermen's Union" and former member of the Nova Scotia House of Assembly, in a statement to The Canadian Press.

Writing of his experiences as editor of the Chronicle, a weekly devoted to fishery matters, Mr. Nickerson takes credit for exposing the intent of the Newfoundland Bait Act, passed over the veto by Sir Robert Bond's government. The act forbade native netters to sell herring to, Canadian vessels in port. The fish, the writer claims, were intended for the United States, and the term "bait act" he says, "was a subterfuge, pure and simple." New York interest allied with certain Canadian firms, had invested a half million dollars in a clear field for their own operations, in Mr. Nickerson's opinion.

At any rate, he writes, "the netters rose with a revolt against the bait act enforcement, which compelled them to forego the Yankee cash and buy... local coastguard denounced the bait trick in the strongest manner, and the people of Newfoundland were aroused to a high pitch, though he did have his revenge—by a round-about way—he still feels a fear of cat things with oils, a raw meat in them to trap the unwary.

Mr. Nickerson, a newspaperman, May netters went across to North Sydney to ship on the Gloucester herring craft, which called in there on their way home. These netters would stay by the herring fleet and fish for them while in Newfoundland ports. A law was passed in Ottawa forbidding any Canadian vessel to attend to the fishing of the Maritime ports to the Gloucester fishermen was wasting warmer. Then the magnates were busy as I kept tabs on the movements of Montreal auxiliaries attempted to pull provincial wires for the closing of the Maritime ports to the Gloucester fishers, as the latter refused to take a hand in the game. The approach was checkmated.

"Then an Imperial Conference was held in London, and the Dominion Government sent Minister Sir Robert Bond among them. The Bait Act was the first thing up, and Commander Anstruther's report was read, and the whole embroglio thoroughly ventilated. Canada declined to the side of the netters, and Commander Anstruthers received the thanks of the conference for faithfully riding over a rather peculiar crisis; whereupon Sir Robert Bond returned to the conclave in high dudgeon, only to return home in high dudgeon, only to return home in a huff—and to be knocked off a wharf into the dock by an irate netter, one of the captives on board the Gloucester fleet.

"The British ministry of the day handled the delicate situation very adroitly, and the tempest was laid for the time being."

Opposed to Canada

Mr. Nickerson stated opposed to the building of Nova Scotia ports to United States fishermen in 1923. The New England Haddockers, he writes, were in the habit of leaving about $350,000 yearly in those ports in the form of supplies, fuel, bait, gear and stores, and license fees while the Canadian Haddocker in the west had and still have Prince Rupert as his base of operations in Alaskan waters, landing their fares in that port, and thus keeping in the neighborhood of their fishing grounds, bringing in four-fifths of British Columbia's million dollar catch, subject to no license fee, and making no purchases in their free Canadian landing slage."

G. F. HEPBURN DIES SUDDENLY

Picton (Special)—G. Frederick Hepburn, who died unexpectedly while motoring to Belleville on Penetanguishene last night will be buried from his late home in Picton on Saturday afternoon. Rev. Canon Beamish, rector of St. Mary's Anglican Church, will officiate at the funeral. For some years he managed the Bank of Montreal here, and for a time was manager of the town. A year ago he was appointed an inspector of the Liquor Control Board. For many years he was a partner in the Port Hope, Hepburn & Co. flour mills. He was an Anglican and in politics a Liberal.

Surviving are his wife; three sons Frederick Hepburn, Montreal and Hamilton, Bernard of Detroit and George of Picton. Surviving sisters are Mrs. Gordon Peterson and Mrs. Lee ver, Mrs. Maxwell Lepper and Miss Hepburn, Picton.

Mr. Hepburns death came as a great shock to his family and friends in the district.

County League

Thursday night's hockey games resulted in a win for Wellington by 4-3 over Bloomfield, a tie game between Picton Collegiate and Bloomfield, and games were fast and packed with excitement.

The Bloomfield—Collegiate game opened with a fast pace for either goalie were largely responsible in keeping their nets down, both turning in stellar performances. Coach Bedborough was referee.

The Wellington—Bloomfield game was very fast and kept the five hundred fans guessing as to outcome right to the time. The game was handled by Bert VanDusen's shot. With but five minutes to play Bloomfield tied Herrington shot in the rebound and Earl Cyrs, the Collegiate goalie, after a brilliant performance, was beaten by Harry Ferguson right after the opening whistle. Without Protection

Jack Lyon scowled at the finished eight-eyed girl across the table from him. "Br-r-r," he all but growled; but instead: "Oh, he did, eh?" he challenged, in a stifled, angry voice.

"Yes, Jack, he did," she carolled. "He appointed me secretary to Mr. Mosby. And oh, I'm so happy! She caressed his hand impulsively. "Well, I don't like it. You know don't like it."

She glanced at him fleetingly. "I'm sorry, Jack," she said in a low troubled voice, "but you know how I feel about my work."

"And about me!" he retorted, and his mouth deepened.

Jack and Lelia were employed by a large firm of architects. They had become together for a year, and he was urging a speedy marriage. But Lelia was modern—and ambitious. She insisted that she preferred business to babies, and that husbands had been an old-fashioned necessity, but were a modern luxury. Jack had said that when he was made head clerk, which would be soon, she would change her mind. But her promotion had come first, and now there was necessary to defer their plans.

"Another thing," he interrupted his unhappy musings, "I don't like your being alone in the office with Mosby. His reputation is none too good."

Her eyes flashed, her lips curled. "How, isn't that just too bad?" she observed; and the quarrel was on.

Jack saw little of Lelia during the next month, and his unhappiness deepened as his desire for her filled all his horizon. She occasionally left him take her out somewhere, but there were no more of those homey evenings in the apartment that he loved. She was working hard, staying overtime and on Saturday afternoons, and her grey eyes were shadowed with fatigue. But she was stimulated by her work, and declared Ed Mosby a prince among men.

On the first of the year, Jack's hopes promised promotion materialized. He chuckled as he rode home in a taxi, eagerly planning to take Lelia out to dinner and tell his big news. He just might. He stiffened to attention as he heard her name. A couple of girls from the office were sitting behind him, gossiping in low meaningful tones.

"She's got her own cut for the main chance," one said.

"And he's got his eye on her," the other answered. "You may not believe it, but—" Jack strained his head to hear, and his face darkened with anger.

The little red-headed girl, whom he recognized as a switch-board operator, was saying that Mosby was out at Locust Lodge, his country place, and had hurt his foot or badly that he couldn't walk. He had phoned and asked Miss Harmon to come out after lunch and bring his mail and take important letters and Lelia had left the office at two, and had not returned.

Jack's heart was pounding with fear and rage; but what, he asked himself, could he do? Lelia wouldn't listen to his advice; indeed, it inclined her to further opposition. His common sense told him that she wasn't in danger of bodily harm, but this afternoon and every girl can't go traipsing off alone into the country to a man's home, and he had said about.

Jack paced the streets restlessly, forgetting dinner, then waited in her apartment—the girl she shared with was home—until Lelia came in, flushed and breathless.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, none too cordially. "Waiting to take you to dinner," he answered resignedly to smile.

"I'm sorry, but I'm so tired I'm going right to bed."

"Won't you listen to her a minute first?" he urged, humbly.

She nodded, relenting, and dropped exhaustedly into a wide-cushioned chair. He stood hungrily at the curve of her cheek, her firm young mouth. Her eyes were purple-shadowed with fatigue, and pathetically. Jack's smouldering anger flamed.

"Mosby wouldn't have dared send for you if you had a man protector," he cried, furiously.

She sat up angrily. "How absolutely old-fashioned," she cried. "Anyhow, it's a good exit line."

Jack didn't exit, however; not until their quarrel had waxed and waned and left them both shaken.

"I'm going out there tomorrow if he sends for me! We'll be alone, but definitely. I am perfectly able to take care of myself."

"At least let me bring you home," he compromised, humbly.

"Mr. Mosby's chauffeur will bring me back to town," she replied. "Why should I ride like two with you?"

The night passed, the new day came—and before Jack's eyes Lelia with a portfolio of papers, entered Mosby's car and was driven away.

Three o'clock; four o'clock; five o'clock; six. Jack could bear inactivity no longer. He had borrowed a car; now he set out in the direction of Locust Lodge. Mr. Mosby would say he had come for her. Mr. Mosby might fire him tomorrow, but tonight—he gritted his teeth and stepped on the gas.

He knew the place and how to get there. Now he parked in front, and, attracted by lights shining from the low French windows at the side, walked up on the veranda. Boldly he glanced in the nearest thinly-curtained window, then gave an exclamation. On a wide table papers were spread out, and a notebook lay open. Lelia stood by the table, and beside her, his hand on her arm, was Mosby.

Her lips distinctly formed the word "no", and she picked up the notebook, snapped it shut, and began piling the papers with an air of hurried finality. She started across the room to where her coat lay across a chair, and Mosby, limping, followed her. His arm went around her, he stooped to kiss her. She jerked loose and faced him angrily.

Jack was tempted to leap through the window, but shame with rage though he was, he realized that this was no time for melodrama. Lelia's pride and vanity had suffered enough; she would never quite forgive him for finding out that she had been mistaken He hurried around to the front door, and held his finger on the bell. Seconds stretched tortuously into a minute. The door opened.

"Who is it?" Ed Mosby growled. "Oh, it's you."

"Good evening, Mr. Mosby. I'm calling for Miss Harmon.

Lelia appeared in the hall, "Hello Jack," she cried, cheerfully, "You're just in time." Then she turned to the older man. "I'll leave the papers, Mr. Mosby," she said, serially. "Your chauffeur can bring them in in the morning."

She was in the car, they were headed back to town. Jack was afraid to speak; he was satisfied to have her there, safe beside him.

"Was little car there'd you get it?" she asked, gently.

"Tommy loaned it to me. It's only a Packford."

"I like Packfords. Do you suppose, Jack, now that you have been promoted, that we could afford a car—if I stopped work?"

He reckless threw an arm around her. "A car and all modern conveniences," he promised, "including an old-fashioned husband."

REGULAR BEATS NOT NOW USED

New System Inaugurated By Lord Byng of London Police

London, Feb. 2 (CP)— The most revolutionary change for a century in the patrolling of London's streets by policemen is that evolved by Viscount Byng, former Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, and a former Governor-General of Canada, which will do away with all chance of surprising the crooks at their nefarious work and end all virtually notifying them of his approach by the old drone.

Hitherto each policeman has had a stipulated beat to cover. He worked his beat to a time-table, and had to meet his superior officer at regular intervals to report upon his movements that wrong-doers knew this and that a man could circular spot he would not return for some time. The policeman now is likely to come round the corner at unexpected moments and his beat reports for duty he will be directed how to work his area during his time on duty. Also, motor-cycle combinations will be employed to send out other "surprise" patrols during the night and to translate men on duty to other districts at a minute's notice. An added feature of this is the Criminal Investigation Department, the extension of the Scotland Yard Wireless net and wider scope for the Metropolis Police are other steps shortly to be taken in this great scheme of reorganization.

TRAVELING MAN ENDORSES ALL-BRAN

Says It Brought Relief From Constipation

"I want to take this unsolicited means to tell you what ALL-BRAN has done for me.

"I am on the road all the time, and this has a tendency to constipate me, or any one who travels all the time. I used to suffer a great deal from constipation, until some one told me about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since I have been eating it regularly, I have been cured of constipation. I certainly advise it to any one suffering as I did."—Mr. F. Pollard. (Address on request.)

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in our diet: vitamin B and exercise the intestines. Vitamin B to tone the intestinal muscles and help nerves show ALL-BRAN provides both. At the same time, it supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of vegetables. Your body, it forms a soft mass, which gently exercises the intestines to assist. Being a natural corrective ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming.

How much better than risking pills and drugs — so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of constipation—serious cases, with every meal. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

TILLIE THE TOILER

BRINGING UP FATHER —By George McManus.

MR. AND MRS. — WHAT A WIFE HAS TO PUT UP WITH

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 28. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service)— By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

What the panther heard was no sound by the standards of human ears, yet to highly attuned and delicate organs of the beast a message seemed to be borne to the savage brain. As if it had been poised upon sound springs, every muscle of his body and identity of the top of the palisade, disappearing, stealthily and catlike into the dark space behind a native hut.

Around the stake the Dance of Death was commencing. Two warriors dragged Tarzan roughly from the hut. A score of howling blacks bound him to the stake in the centre of the circle of fires and boiling pots. At last he was made fast and seemed quite helpless beyond the faintest hope of human aid. Rokoff now stepped close to the ape-man and was the first to prod him with a spear.

Though a little stream of blood trickled down the giant's smooth skin from the wound in his side, no murmur of pain passed his lips. The smile of contempt on his face seemed to infuriate his assailant. He leaped at the helpless captive, beating him upon the face with clenched fists and kicking him mercilessly. Then he raised a spear to drive it through Tarzan's brave heart.

Before Rokoff could drive the weapon home, the chief sprang upon him and dragged him away from his intended victim. "Stop, white man!" he cried, "both are of his prisoner and our death-dance, and you yourself may have to take his place!" The threat was effective. On went the dance! Yelling, leaping warriors circled about Tarzan, the flickering firelight playing up the hideous scene.

Belleville Band Requests Grant of $2000 from Council

Deputation Headed By Ex-Mayor Greenleaf and Members

OTHER BUSINESS

Deputations from the Belleville Citizen's Band, headed by Ex-Mayor Harry W. Greenleaf and from the unemployment association headed by Mr. Sheppard and E. J. Baldree met the council last night at their regular session and dealt with matters before that body. Mr. Baldree addressed the council on the latter matter concerning the employment of what was alleged by the Unemployment Association of a man not a resident of Belleville to put up ice in the King George School, which Mr. Greenleaf addressed the council on the matter of a grant of $2,000 to the band to carry on its operations in the future.

Mr. Baldree speaking to the council stated that the Chairman of Labor in such duties as these should be a busy office, not only in trying to help labor conditions but also with to it that local labor is given the preference over outsiders. "We had a complaint last week" said Mr. Baldree "of an outsider doing carpentry work in the city. Two officials of the Trade and Labor Council asked Aldermanic privilege to investigate the report with them but Alderman Morgan had no time for this, to the men that returned him to the City council. If the work proposed gets no more support than this at council meetings from the Chairman of Labor then that office is in a name only, and is open for severe criticism from the public."

Praises Officials

"Alderman MacMillan" continued the speaker and Alderman Sprackett gave the labor men a very good deal last night when on one of the few councillors that was not afraid to speak his mind. I wish to say these Aldermen to know the labor men appreciate this and wish to tender them sincere appreciation. Although there is no labor on the side hill this year the chairmanship of labor is apparently in the hands of the chairman who is negligent in their behalf." Alderman Morgan asked the privilege of the chair to speak in his own behalf and the request was granted.

He stated that two men called at his home and explained their difficulty but at the time did not ask him to accompany them for the purpose of investigation. "Although I did not go because I was not asked to," said Mr. Morgan, "I approached the Board of Education and found that the job was the one the men complained lodged. I also phoned Arthur McGee and he told me there was no outsider working at the Public and George School and as I knew the contractor had no connection ever any work ordered by the Board of Education, I was satisfied with that. Before taking his seat however Ald. Morgan made it quite clear that at no time was he prepared to accompany the men, who visited his home for the matter of investigation.

Ald. Donahue Replies

Alderman Donahue spoke next and he remarked that one half of the unemployed were the other half would. It would take a regiment to trace the dozens of complaints that are registered with the police. Ald. Donahue there were a certain number who could be worked for the Public Works Department and the men knew the men who they were. There are a few, who think they can come into Belleville and after establishing a residence for a few months dictate to those who have lived here a lifetime.

Alderman Substantiated

Alderman Bennett substantiated the statement made by Aldermen Morgan and Mr. Sheppard spoke up to say that the deputation met to ask him about the matter returned and stated that they would see the Chairman of Labor to accompany them. Again Ald. Morgan repeated the statement, Mr. Sheppard added that Ald. Morgan had been invited to a meeting of the unemployed and had not shown up and Ald. Morgan speaking to the council stated he informed Mr. Hanna he was unable to get at the time due to a previous engagement. Mr. Sheppard extended a personal invitation to the Chairman of Labor to be present on Wednesday night at their meeting.

Alderman R. P. White took the floor to explain his position. There have been rumors on the street about the man in question, but he know personally that the man referred to is a resident of Belleville and that he has worked for me and other contractors in the city for some years. "I want to say to labor in this city, in a friendly way" said Ald. White, that the 1932 council has been generous to labor and that the council's business of 1932 is to carry out the programme mapped out last year. It is no trouble to get the figures and a little curious looked them up, and last year the council laid out nearly $150,000.00 for labor in a city of slightly over 14,000 people, a most generous amount. The council is not perfect and neither is labor and we must give and take and try to get through these troublesome times. Mr. Sheppard spoke again and said that all was wanted was a square deal.

Ex Mayor Harry W. Greenleaf laid a proposition for a grant to the Belleville Band. He stated that at the conclusion, Mayor Tice told the deputation that the matter would be taken up at the next committee meeting and any other information that was required would be asked for before the council meeting for a decision on the matter in the near future. The text of the letter read by the latter is as follows:—

Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Belleville.

Gentlemen:—

The desirability and necessity of maintaining a good band was forcibly brought to my attention during my term of office as Mayor of this City. Their attendance and service as band concerts, community dancing, public functions, fairs and celebrations is highly appreciated.

During the fall of 1929 a petition was circulated to be presented to the Council petitioning that body for an annual grant to the band of $2,000.00. Nine hundred signatures of ratepayers were secured by band members and the petition was eventually presented to the council in office the following year.

May I refer briefly to band history. My earliest recollections go back to the old O.D.F. band affiliated with the Oddfellows and under the leadership of W. R. Riggs. Its organization as I remember, was under capable management and was a popular institution. Exhibition and many other Ontario cities, including the City of Belleville in each case. I do not know just when the organization affiliated with the Argyll Light Infantry as part of that organization, probably about the year 1913. This does not signify. Their absorption assured them of a good membership and annual appropriation from that source.

Following the return of members of the band desired that the regiment provide them with brighter uniforms for the band, preferably that of a tartan or highland uniform of the Argyll Light Infantry, appropriate for the common use of the battalion and for the general public. Five hundred dollars towards the expense of buying such an outfit was donated by private individuals. A request was made to the Department of Militia for grant or the lease of uniforms along this style, but apparently they was a lack of agreement on their part with the request and nothing further was done. Quite a number of the band agement in 1930 had been loyal members of the O.D.F. band for a great many years, but made up their minds that this would be prohibited prompted the yellow streak for purpose of buying such an outfit was do- ing, as private individuals. Quakes Rock Old Port of Santiago, Five Distinct Tremors Cause Havoc

Loss of Life May Be Small or Heavy Reports Vary

THRIVING CITY

Cuban Port Has Been Shown Remarkable Growth Recently

Santiago, Cuba., Feb. 3.— The Mayor of Santiago reported today that eight persons had been killed and three hundred injured in the earthquake which struck this city in the night.

Santiago, Cuba., Feb. 3 (AP)—A fifth earthquake shock struck Santiago at 6 a.m. (E.S.T.) today. Many children, were among those killed and the number of injured was placed at 2,000.

The roof of the maternity ward of the Civil Hospital fell, killing many women and children.

Nightmare Scenes

Santiago, Cuba., Feb. 3 (AP)—Recurring earthquakes brought sudden devastation and misery to this city, second in its historic Caribbean aspect today as the 70,000 inhabitants slept in the quiet hours before dawn.

Estimates of dead and injured ranged from a few hundred to 3,000 and approximately one-third of the entire city was laid waste.

There were nightmare scenes of horror as the first great shock brought buildings crashing down upon their occupants and clouds of blinding dust enveloped the city and harbor.

Thousands of men, women and children, spared from death or serious injury in the first shocks, poured into the dark and narrow streets in night clothing, and added to the confusion safety of the beautiful city's parks and open squares.

The quake experienced at 4:30 o'clock this morning was less severe than the one preceding it but was believed to have been felt over a much larger area.

Ring of Hills

As dawn brought realization of the extent of the ruin spread throughout the bustling city which nestles by the Sea in a ring of hills, planes were already heading eastward with medical supplies for the stricken inhabitants of the town which had not known quiet or terror since it was bombarded by United States warships in 1898.

First they started from Havana, at the opposite end of the island, and later two more large flying boats took off from Miami.

Pending the arrival rescue work went forward swiftly, ambulance and morgue wagons hurrying continuously through the littered streets and doctors and nurses worked unusual time to save the more seriously injured and ease the pain of those less critically hurt. Accurate estimates of the dead and injured was impossible in the early hours of the day but all reports agreed that

GORDON COOK STRUCK BY CAR

Boy Sustains Broken Shoulder in Unavoidable Accident

While on the way to school Wednesday morning shortly before 9 o'clock Gordon Cook, eleven years old, of 23 St. Paul street, was struck by a car at Bridge street, which was travelling east, was being driven by Mr. Edward Arthur Corbyville and when near the corner of Dundas and William street, young Cook came immediately in the path of the approaching car. It is said that several companions called a warning to him, but too late to avoid the accident.

Mr. Bradshaw it is understood had applied for brakes on his car, but it swerved and hit the boy.

The police were at once advised of the accident by Mr. Bradshaw and the police ambulance came to the scene of the accident and took the boy to the hospital, where he received attention from Dr. R. A. Flynn. An X-Ray revealed that the left arm was broken near the shoulder.

Mr. Flynn says that the boy will be confined to the hospital for some days.

BISHOP PRESIDES

Clergy and Laity Gather at St. George's Cathedral

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 3— Faced with the problem of choosing a new Bishop for the Diocese of Ontario, Anglican clergy and Lay Delegates are gathered here. Rt. Rev. James P. Sweezy, Bishop of Toronto, and senior Bishop of Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario, is presiding at the special Synod whose sole object is the selection of a successor to Rt. Rev. C. A. Seager, newly appointed Bishop of Moosonee.

Many names have been mentioned in connection with the vacant Bishopric. Prominent among them are Dean Craig of St. George's Cathedral here; Dean L. W. E. Brongall of All Saints' Church Cathedral, Hamilton; Canon H. F. D. Woodcock of Christ Church, Toronto; Archdeacon J. H. Cooper of St. Paul's Church here, and Dr. T. S. Boyle of Cobourg, Ont.

Climate on Coast is Greatly Upset

From time to time, reports emanating from California indicate that all is not well in that land of sunshine and flowers—all that is as far as the weather is concerned. And this year particularly a great upheaval such as the oldest residents has never witnessed has taken place in the former ever-pleasant season of sunshine and soft winds. Now there is nothing but cold rain, sharp frosts and snow. Not deep and universal. Residents are becoming accustomed to heavy underwear, heavier outer garments and footgear that is more in accord with the climate around. Early supposed to be worn by the far north Eskimo. Sporting goods, outdoor events and coal men are about the only ones who have been reaping the benefit of the freak spell.

A day or so ago a letter was received in this city from one of the residents—a former Canadian, who has been living there for some time. Describing the difficulties through that state of California has been under. The letter reads in part:—

"... the winter this year has been the coldest it has ever been within the memory of the oldest resident. Records for the past sixty years have been searched and gone into but no like weather has been recorded. The orange crop in the district of Los Angeles, where I am living, has also the whole south part of the state; the north have been spared that to date. Rainfall which has been abundant has been nearly twice the amount of other years, the when snow did fall we have had nearly two feet of it. Truly it was a strange sight to see so much of it and of such depth. Occasionally there has been reported a slight frost, and at times there has been a little sprinkle of it, but a real fall is something else again. The rest of the Canadians who are in this city are also disappointed when they woke up and saw all the snow."

China Strive to Bring Air Fleet Into Present Action

Shanghai, Feb. 3 (AP)—Chinese soldiers and engineers worked feverishly tonight attempting to assemble the Chinese air force equipment which was still in the packing cases in which it was delivered from Great Britian twelve years ago.

In the government ordered 120 aeroplanes fitted with powerful motors. The planes were shipped to be assembled in China but because of extraordinary expenses the project was never unpacked.

The planes are considerably out of date now but may still be made useful for disorganization of the government no one would airworthy and the planes are capable of high speed.

Landing Upon Ice Near Barrie, Planes Break Thru, Pilots Get Ashore

PILOTS SAVE PUPILS

Fifty Children Wander on Ice and Are in Grave Danger

BARRIE, Ont., Feb 3.—Two north bound planes from Belleville, Ont., crashed through the ice of Kempenfeldt Bay here shortly after noon today in an attempted landing. Both pilots were able to wade to the sun-weakened ice and reach shore.

The first plane, piloted by W. Leavens of Belleville, attempted to land about 300 yards from shore, but the ice would not bear the airplane's weight. The second plane, piloted by A. J. Ranny of Belleville, came down a few minutes later and was thrown.

Scholary on Ice In Danger

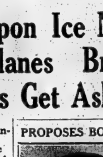
About 50 school-children on their way home for lunch rushed out onto the ice and for some time remained in a precarious position. Police, under the direction of Chief Sinclair Stewart of Barrie and aided by the two pilots, managed to get them safely back to shore.

Both planes belonged to Leavens Brothers of Belleville. Details as to whether the planes were beyond salvage were not immediately available.

Barrie, Ont., Feb. 3.—Jumping from their planes as the machines broke through the rotten ice of Kempenfeld Bay shortly after noon today in an attempted landing, two Belleville aviators escaped injury and were scrambled ashore. The machines were owned by Leavens Brothers, also of Belleville, and were piloted by W. Leavens and A. J. Ranney.

In attempting to land on the snow covered ice on the bay the skis on the machines piloted by Ranney and by Leavens went through and in a few seconds the planes were beneath the ice after the pilot had walked out on the ice and Ranney had jumped to the solid ice.

The second machine, piloted by Ranney, attempted to land about three hundred yards away, but the skis broke through the ice with the surface. Racing his motor in an effort to bring the machine up again, Ranney sent the craft engine first into the water. Only its tail-end held it up.



The mishap occurred just as hundreds of local school children were enroute home for lunch, and several of them ran out on the ice where the first plane went through, thus hindering considerably the landing of the second machine. However, with the quick arrival of Chief Stewart and police his men, the bay was quickly cleared of spectators and the pilots walked ashore.

Neither pilot was injured or chilled and they lunched at a local restaurant prior to attempting salvage work. They refused to announce their destination and at first were reluctant to identify themselves. Finally they produced the correspondent they were "north bound pilots."

Kempenfeldt set an all-time freezing record when it was discovered pletely for the first time this year on February 1st. The latest previous date was January 15, 1886. Though covered with snow the ice appeared to be quite solid and for several days children have been skating on it. It was felt certain the second machine would meet the same fate as the other if an attempt was made to land. Hundreds of spectators lined the shore to the railway labor unions in Ontario.

out of sight, while that piloted by Ranney has only its nose buried, the wings holding it up. Rescue attempts are believed dangerous owing to the fact that the ice had become weakened due to a thaw last night and today, and added to that the weight of the machines and the people who walked out on the ice.

Camp Borden's salvage crew arrived here at 2.15 p.m. and at once proceeded to launch a boat. They planned to make their way through the ice to the first plane, a task made more if necessary to reach the halfsubmerged plane by means of the boat.

The other machine they thought was almost beyond salvaging though an attempt may be made later. A plane from Camp Borden was also flying over the scene. It was not equipped with skis, but will not attempt a landing on the bay.

Arthur and Walter Leavens and Ranney, the pilots, left their camp in Thurlow last week on a hunting expedition, during which would take them for a "jaunt" of the Great Lakes. They were staying in Toronto for some days and it was thought they were still there until they learned that the two planes they took from Belleville had landed in the soil ice near Barrie They were flying a Waco, an Eaglerock and a Travelair monoplane from Toronto they were to go south and take in passengers on their trip.

So far this season the Leavens Brothers had not done much commercial flying and this trip was practically their first. Leavens are the first commercial fliers of this section and are experienced pilots.

Thomas at Parley House is Robbed

London, Feb. 2 (AP)—While Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, is away at Geneva attending disarmament conferences, burglars broke into his temporarily unoccupied house in Dulwich village early today, and several of his valuables were captured by the police.

A police patrol heard strange sounds coming from the house of Mr. Thomas and went to investigate. They caught two men who had broken into the house which is one that was presented to Mr. Thomas by the National Railwaymen's Union some years ago for his long service to the railway labor unions in Britain.

Presides at Meeting Before Operation

London, Feb. 3.—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald presided over a meeting of the cabinet today before leaving nursing home for an operation on one of his eyes.

A specialist examined the eye today but his findings were withheld and said the condition was not serious. The prime minister went without his lunch in preparation for the anaesthetic. He planned to be away from Downing Street for ten days but arranged to be kept closely informed on the developments of the Far Eastern situation.

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council and Conservative leader, will preside at cabinet meetings in the meantime.

When Mr. MacDonald is fully recovered he expected to take a short holiday and go to Geneva to attend the disarmament conference.

FIRE ON FORTS

Japanese Object to Neutrals Deciding Upon Manchuria

Shanghai, Feb. 3 (AP)—Chinese guns from the fort of Woosung sent a Japanese destroyer to the bottom of the Whangpo River, the Chinese headquarters here announced tonight.

Further than that, the announcement said, the Chinese artillery held the fort despite a raking fire from Japanese warships in the river.

The Japanese opened fire, apparently without warning and announced after a brief bombardment that the fort had been destroyed and that they saw no signs of life there.

British soldiers on a troopship passing up the river said, however, that the fort had returned the fire and that it was doing good work that the troopship was not struck by one side or the other.

Tokyo, Feb. 3.—A despatch to the Rengo News Agency from Shanghai today said Japanese aeroplanes from the aircraft Carrier Kaga bombed and completely destroyed the Woosung fort sixteen miles below the Whangpo River from the city.

Dead Shells

Two "dud" shells fell on the property of the British-owned Asiatic Petroleum Company on Nough Island in the Whangpo, halfway between Shanghai and Woosung.

They fell just clear of the oil tanks but it could not be determined immediately whether they were Chinese or Japanese.

Toward evening foreign residents were continually endangered by the shells which landed in the water in front of Asiatic Company plant and near the Texaco Company properties.

The navy department said this afternoon that the bombardment was not started until the fort fired on Japanese warships in the Whangpo.

"The Fort at Woosung," said the official statement, "opened fire on the 26th Japanese Destroyer Squadron which was on the way out. The squadron replied to the fire. Seaplanes and another destroyer participated in the counter-attack."

"Unless Provoked"

Nanking, Feb. 3.—Chinese and Japanese officials agreed today that hostilities would cease if further hostilities at Nanking, "unless provoked."

The agreement was reached at a conference of Chinese foreign office and military authorities and Japanese consular and naval officials.

The conference at the Shanghai garrison ordered troops and police to make a special effort to protect foreigners.

Every virtual truce alleviated public nervousness growing out of fears that a general war in Shanghai was impending.

Disarmament Parley Settles Down to Business

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

Progress of Parley Waits on Japanese Reply

Geneva, Feb. 3 (AP). — The wheels of the machinery intended to slice world armaments turned again today with the organization of procedure committee of the conference at which representatives of three score nations are attempting to bring the world nearer permanent peace.

The procedure committee was appointed yesterday by Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, former foreign secretary of Great Britain and president of the conference. Its task will be to chart the road which the parley will follow and to keep the negotiations in that pathway for the many months the conference will last.

The first and most important task before the procedure committee is to decide just how far the eight disarmament convention of 1930, the schedule outlined by the preparatory commission but completing a skeleton framework with actual limitation figures to be inserted, is to be followed. One group of nations, headed by Great Britain, is pledged to support this convention as it exists at present, while practically every individual nation power or other has made reservations.

France, chief supporter of that draft, insists the document must form the basis of discussion but Mr. Henderson has declared the conference is free to consider any other texts or proposals that may be submitted to it.

LARGE VAN MAKES TEMPORARY STOP

An enormous moving van, described as "the largest van in Canada" and with lettering on the side to that effect, made a temporary stop in this city this morning while the driver partook of breakfast in a nearby restaurant.

Several early morning workers who were hurrying along on their way to their stride to observe the gigantic van and the name attracted a large number. The tires were not unusually large for the size of the vehicle, but were several times larger than any other machine observed in this city for some time. The outfit was headed west and was empty.

PRESENTED PLAY AT BETHEL CHURCH

The young people of Bethel presented a three-act play entitled "The Early Bird" at the Presbyterian church, Foxboro on Thursday evening, January 28th. An appreciative audience saw the performance and roundly applauded those taking part. Mr. Will Woods introduced the various characters; the Misses Elliott and Rathbone rendered two vivid excellent music; Miss Ketchenson sang a solo and duet and Miss Wannamaker also gave a duet, during the evening. The play was greatly enjoyed by all present and at its close a dainty lunch was served.

One solid year's free admission to the Capitol theatre looms up pleasantly before Miss Jessie Bing of 19 William street, as the result of the drawing for the prizes of tickets given by Mr. Ira Wallace, of the Capitol last evening, and nine months or uninterrupted entertainment was presented Mr. Arthur Babcock, 78 Bridge street, when were Mr. Williams, manager of the Metropolitan store, who won a six months ticket, and Mr. Walter Willis, who was fortunate in getting another pair of free passes. The winners were all greatly pleased at their good fortune and considerable interest, which was aroused, created a packed house.

His Honor Mayor Tice drew the lucky number out of a box, which had been well shaken and presented to him on the stage of the theatre, and as the winners were announced one after the other they were greeted with great applause. Those who did not look it all in all good part as those who did.

3AND CHANGES ITS HEADQUARTERS

Changing their practising quarters to the auditorium of the Y.M.C.A. the Belleville Municipal Band held a fine practice under the direction of Bandmaster Fenwick last evening. The local municipal band is growing in numbers each and every practice as new faces are to be seen each week at the weekly gatherings. The band has offered their services, gratis, to play at all B.A.A.A. hockey matches and their offer was received with much favor by the hockey moguls. The local band is always ready and willing to assist any enterprise of local interest.

REBEKHAS HOLD ENJOYABLE EUCHRE

Prizes won by ladies: first, Mrs. Price, second Mrs. Andrews and in order, Mrs. Croft and Miss Tweddy. Gentlemen: first, Mr. Price, Mr. Spafford, Mr. Delisle. Door prize was won by Mrs. Price.

JAN. RAINFALL 3.67 INCHES

Not as Great as in January of Year 1919

If all the precipitation that descended on this city and surrounding territory during the month of January had taken in the form of snow, there would have been a full forty inches to shovel off the streets and byways. But when that precipitation was worked out into the actual amount of rainfall that fell, the amount has reached the total of 3.67 inches.

However this year's record, though the last month did appear to be an exceptional one as far as the weather was concerned, did not beat any previous records for the rain fall. And January 1919 had it beaten all hollow as far as establishing records went there was that 5.66 inches recorded.

While this winter has been the mildest one so far for all time, with only one or two days of near zero weather, the soft weather gives good indication of still continuing, and the first few days of the new month opened auspiciously as far as mild weather is concerned. Again the little ice that had formed in the bay is again melting fast under the slight drizzle and the soft wind apparent today. Ice as such seems have given up hope.

BRITISH VESSEL IS SEIZED OFF CAPE

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 3. — The British vessel Dundee was seized during the night off Cape Cod by customs guard first boat Jackson, allegedly within the 13-mile limit.

The Dundee was brought to Boston for examination by Customs officers who declined to say prior to the inspection why the seizure was made.

DRIVER SAVES CONFUSED MAN

Pedestrian Tired and Dazed Steps in Front of Truck

An unknown man miraculously escaped serious injury and possible death early this morning on No. 2 highway, near the railway crossing just east of the County House of Refuge when he became confused by the warning horn on a large transport truck which was approaching from the east, and ducked almost in front of the heavy vehicle.

A heavy swing on the wheel of the machine swerved the truck away from the direction of the man, and almost landed the truck and trailer into the ditch owing to the slippery road, but the man at the same instant had collected his scattered wits and had backed away from the danger. The man was described as acting in a manner suggesting the possibility that he had been going to his death. He appeared very tired, and dazed, shortly before the near accident, but the danger woke him up sufficiently to cure heartily at the driver as the machine swung clear and left him. Whether the compliments were returned was not learned.

The newly elected officers were installed by Jun. D.G.M. J. M. Carl.

WHAT WILL BE THE OUTCOME?

Baseball Fans and Interested Citizens Asked to Attend Meeting

Baseball fans are asked to attend a public meeting of the Belleville Baseball club, which will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night of this week. It is most important that all those interested in fostering a senior baseball team in Belleville should attend and be present at this meeting as the question of the advisability of organizing a ball team in Belleville, will be thoroughly discussed and the vote of the meeting will decide the fate of senior baseball, locally, for the coming season.

Now that the O.B. League is assured of one of the teams, it is very important, that all interested baseball fans be present at this meeting tomorrow night. If it is thought advisable by the local baseball team in Belleville during the ensuing year the annual election of officers will be held. It is hoped, that as large a number of business men and interested citizens will put forth an extra effort to be present at this meeting for the purpose of keeping senior baseball in Belleville this year. The meeting will be called at the Y.M.C.A. at 8 p.m. and all sport fans are urged to be present.

Three More Deaths From Poison Alcohol

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 3—Three more deaths today from drinking poison alcohol brought the totals here for three days to nine. Seven of the victims were members of a single drinking party. The other two have not been definitely connected with the group but their deaths are ascribed to the same cause. One more victim is not expected to live. Still another is apparently recovering.

He never reaped comfort in his adversity that sowed not in his prosperity.

Obituary

LATE MARY ANN LYNCH

The funeral of Mary Ann Lynch took place this morning at 8.45 o'clock from her late family residence, 362 George street to St. Michael's church were Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., who also officiated at the graveside in St. James' Cemetery.

The funeral notice will appear later.

Police Court

Interesting evidence was heard in the only case before the police court this morning. Alfred Cook, of this city, appeared before his Worship on a charge of vagrancy and incommoding a peaceful pedestrian. It was brought out in the evidence of the accused had, upon different occasions, accosted a young lady resident of this city on the streets, the case arose out of an alleged attempt of molesting the young lady on the evening of January 26th on the Footbridge.

Several female witnesses gave evidence as to the actions of Cook. Mr. A. Steed also gave evidence to the effect that he had seen Cook accost the young lady on three different occasions.

On his own behalf Cook gave evidence and stated that he had been in the company of the young lady on two different occasions and as a matter of fact her mother had told him he could get his breakfast at her home as he (Cook) was out of work. He stated that he had never met the young lady except by previous arrangements, known as "dates." Other evidence was brought to light before the Crown brought forth that Cook was, at present, on suspended sentence on a similar charge laid by the plaintiff last April.

After viewing the evidence his Worship said the young man a severe reprimand and thoroughly made him to understand that he was not to molest this young lady again or "dates." Cook was also suggested a lenient sentence when was given a fine of $10 and costs. Cook a sentence of one month in the common gaol at hard labor.

DR. G. S. CRONK GUEST SPEAKER

Addresses Moira Chapter on The "Progress of Medicine

"Progressive Medicine" was the subject upon which Dr. G. S. Cronk M.O.H., of this city, spoke to the members of Moira Chapter R.A.M. No. 77, last evening at the Masonic Temple. The doctor opened his address by stating, that there had been more progress in medicine in the past 100 years than in the previous history of medicine. "Medicine has been recorded since long before the birth of Christ," stated the speaker. He pointed out, that in the earlier stages of medicine, there was much charm and had its mystic powers, so to speak. Dr. Cronk pointed out, that medicine was not an exact art like science or mathematics, but a progressive reason, that these arts are true and could be proven, but the art of medicine worked different on separate individuals. Therefore each individual is a science in the practice of medicine because each individual is different. Although medicine has come to the fore by leaps and bounds, the speaker was of the opinion that medicine had a long and hard road to travel before it became perfection. He spoke of the earlier pioneers of medicine as Prof. Pasteur and Lord Lister, the real originators of the science of medicine.

Came Into Own

"Especially after the 18th century did the art of medicine come into its own," said the doctor. He delated upon the many plagues of the earlier centuries such as the 'black plague' and other well known plagues which came to the early 16th and 17th century. He pointed out that the main reason for these plagues was the fact, that there was so much filth, poverty and ignorance in the world at that particular time. Of course these conditions do not find in the Far East, where these plagues are still quite prevalent. The doctor pointed out that these diseases such as plagues, fevers and other such dread infections are usually carried by lice, mosquitoes or flies.

Pasteur Treatment

"It was about in 1856 that Professor Pasteur discovered that most diseases were caused by germs", stated the doctor, when he went on to point out that not until after they had been able to come in close contact our diseases, could they combat them successfully. He gave many illustrations of his personal experiences during the late war, when the doctors' work was the formation of the idea of sanitation, although so prevalent in most countries today," said the doctor, was not thought of in Germany in their great research work in the matter of medicine as he was of the opinion that the Germans had done more in this line of work than any other particular people in the modern age. He also dilated fully upon the subject of modern operations, which he stated were hardly safe and one of the greatest advances in modern science.

Preventative Medicine

"Preventative medicine of today is one of the greatest advances in medicine," stated the doctor, the speaker. He then illustrated the many advantages of preventative medicine and its benefit to the medical science of today as it was the means of fighting diseases, which here-to-fore had caused the greatest mortality rates than ever before.

In conclusion the doctor pointed out, that it was due to the discovery of modern preventative medicine, the present sanitary conditions, which therefore had caused the countries. Before finishing his address that although medicine was far from perfection that they were in fast progressing and stressed the idea of thanking the Creator always for the safeguard of homes and families.

The speaker was introduced by Comp. Bruce McGinnis and Comp. Stephen Lloyd, who thanked the doctor on behalf of the Chapter for his educational and instructive talk. The usual Chapter work was accomplished in the Lodge room.

Labor Executives Entertain Friends

Executives of the Belleville Labor Association played host last evening at the Imperial Hall to a capacity crowd that taxed to the limit the hall and other rooms in the building that were opened for the purpose of the entertainment provided. Out-of-town visitors, and many from this city and surrounding district helped swell the gathering and resulted in a great success for the dance, both financially and in amount of enjoyment dispensed, as the second dance held by the association.

Prizes which were donated by a number of local merchants as well as articles that had been made by the ladies' auxiliary were given to the patrons later on who were the lucky holders of the tickets. Ladies' first prize was won by Mrs. W. MacKenzie, second, Mrs. Hall and third by Mrs. H. Simpson. Gentlemen, first, Mr. Chas. Keegan; second, Mr. R. Simpson and third, Mr. B. Clare.

Dance prize winners were Mrs. Edison, and for the men, Mr. Archer. Mrs. Hall was the door prize and the large comforter which was drawn for was won by Mr. Fisher.

PREDCTIONS AS TO SENATORS

Appointments Will Be Made in Near Future

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—Reports in the Capital last night, were that Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Toronto, Conservative Prime Minister; Hon. W. H. Dennis, Halifax Newspaper proprietor; Dr. J. A. MacDonald, former Conservative member for Richmond-Cape Breton West; and Hon. J. C. Ballantyne, Montreal, former Conservative minister of Marine and Fisheries in the Borden administration, will be appointed members of the Senate.

Four vacancies have been created by the deaths of Sir George Foster (Conservative-Ottawa); Hon. George G. Foster (Conservative-Montreal); Hon. E. M. Farrell (Liberal-Liverpool, N.S.); and Hon. Nathaniel Curry (Conservative Amherst).

Filling of these vacancies will give the Conservative forces a majority of two in the Senate. The party standing will then be Conservative 49, Liberal 47.

Monday, July 18th Date for Parley

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—Monday, July 18, is the date for the opening of the World Economic Conference at Ottawa, it was intimated by the highest authority last night.

Great Britain, Irish Free State Canada, New Zealand, South Africa, Newfoundland and India will send delegates to the conference in the Canadian Capital. For some time the question of the date has been the subject of communication by cable with the various parts of the Empire.

JURY ATTACH NO BLAME IN MAN'S DEATH

Verdict Rendered By Coroner's Jury on Tuesday

MANY WITNESSES

No Evidence of Gathering Before Fatal Injuries

We find that the deceased, Jack Shortt came to his death on the twenty fifth day of January, in the city of Belleville, county of Hastings, as the result of injuries received when he fell between the ties and the bridge wall of the Canadian National Railway bridge, at the south end of the city," was the verdict handed down by the coroner's jury in the inquest held in the police station last evening. Coroner Dr. G. H. Cronk occupied the chair and crown attorney B. C. Donnan conducted the examination.

The verdict was arrived at very soon after the last witness had been heard and the advancement of the jury to arrive at the verdict occupied little time. One of the largest crowds any recent inquest has had was in attendance, and the corridors were filled with standing room.

Mr. H. C. Shortt, son of the deceased, who was among the first called witnesses stated that his father had not been home that evening and a search had been instituted for him. Receiving information that his father had been taking Mr. Babcock who resided in a small shack on the south side of the tracks he had gone there but could find no trace of him. Mr. Babcock who was in bed when last his father had been there early in the evening had left a message that visit about three thirty in the morning had met with the same result. Although witness told the strange that his father should have been installed no baby about the face and head when found, he conceded the fact that there was no known motive, that his father had no enemies at all as far as he was aware, and when found there was only a few cents in the pockets.

Mr. W. Babcock, whose home Mr. Shortt had visited the evening before the accident, was next witness called, but before questioning began the attorney, Mr. R. D. Pousten asked for protection of the court. This was granted and questioning was proceeded with.

Mr. Babcock stated that deceased had visited their home evening shortly after seven o'clock and when he had seen him, Mr. Shortt had not been under the influence of liquor. He denied that there was any drinking in the house and claimed that Mr. Shortt had only made a friendly visit as he had made numerous times before. When Mr. Shortt left the house he proceeded on the railway tracks in the direction of the bridge, but he did not see him enter the bridge as a boat house obscured his vision.

Mr. Donnan: "Did you receive any calls that evening about the late Mr. Shortt?"

Babcock: "Yes, two. The first time it was not dressed, but the second time I was dressed and sitting up.

Mr. Donnan: "Why were you sitting up the second time?"

Babcock: "Because I knew Shortt had been missed and I thought there might be more calls."

"Was there any wine in the house or empty bottles on the floor?"

"No. Neither of us had any."

When Mr. Shortt left at seven o'clock he was sober."

Found Body

Mr. Harvey Dougherty, trackman on the Canadian National Railways, was the next witness called as being the first one to find the body that morning. He had been patrolling the track and when the west end of the bridge had been reached he noticed the body lying partly submerged in the water. He immediately informed the coal yard and Sergeant Harman was communicated with by Ken Gribble. The body was found at 8:30, and was in a position to suggest the man had fallen off the bridge.

Fire Chief Lynch who was called stated that he had helped to recover the body and that when found the head was lying in the water with feet and arms extending outwards.

Mr. Donnan: "Could you from such superficial examination determine the cause of death?"

"No, but I thought the whole thing looked strange. The man was not in a position ordinarily assumed by a man who had suffered a fall —and such injuries he received were quite severe. The car was missing and there was a profusion of cuts about the face and head."

"Could the man have fallen between the ties and the iron wall of the bridge?"

"Yes. There is a space of about a foot and a half between the ties and the iron work, and the ties are about twenty inches above the projecting flange of the side wall."

"Mr. Jack Smith, You-made an examination of the ties and iron work of the bridge, did you note—"

"Yes, and I found a piece of skin —two pieces, in fact, on the iron work of the bridge, or the projection which extends below the ties. The first piece was about one half inch long; the other was a bit smaller. I gave them to the coroner"

"Any flesh?"

"No flesh—just the pieces of skin."

"What position was the body in when found?"

"The head was lying between two stones, two medium sized ones, and there was still blood on them. The ear was missing but could not be found. Death, he admitted could have caused the injuries received, and the body was in a position to suggest that the man had fallen through the space on the bridge. The body was immediately underneath the spot where the skin had been found on the iron."

Coroner's constable sergeant Harman who was the last witness called stated that he had received the call on the telephone at about 8:40 and had immediately notified the coroner. The bridge was examined, together with Smith, and it appeared to him that death had been caused by the fall. Later he went to the shack occupied by Babcock and questioned him, but there were no indications of wine bottles to be found. Babcock was sober.

"Have you ever had any complaints about the man Babcock?"

"Well, there have been a few on different occasions."

"In what nature, mostly—drinking?"

"Yes".

The jury at this point adjourned to the room below to arrive at their verdict, and after an hour's session some few moments reappeared again to state their findings had resulted in the above. Court was then adjourned.

Jurors were: Foreman Mr. W. Panter, and Messrs J. Barlow, S. Weddup, W. R. Vallance, H. H. Ketcheson, R. Black, Alderman W. Woodley, E. George, W. J. Thomson.

FAMILY SLAYER TOOL OF GHOSTS

Manitoba Man Admits Killing Man, Wife and Five Children

Winnipeg, Feb. 3.—(CP)—Acting on the command of "ghosts" from Hrechkonie killed Martin Sitar, his wife and five children at Elma last Friday, according to a confession provincial police said he made here last night.

Arrested yesterday at Contour, 13 miles from the scene of the crime Hrechkonie was brought to Winnipeg and made his statement in response to questioning at provincial police headquarters.

Sitar was a farmer at Elma and Hrechkonie, his 28-year-old nephew worked for him as a handyman. In the early morning of Friday, January 29, neighboring farmers noticed Sitar's house on fire, and on arrival found the door barred from the outside. Forcing an entrance they found all members of the family of seven either dead or dying from wounds inflicted with an axe or a large knife.

Hrechkonie was missing and suspicion at once attached to him.

Yesterday when picked up at Contour he appeared none the worse for exposure except that he seemed dazed. He asked for food and was given a loaf of bread which he devoured greedily.

He told police he had taken several loaves of bread with him from the Sitar home and had taken shelter in the woods, staving off the pangs of hunger as long as he could by eating the bread.

SPRING AROUND CORNER MAYBE

Cold Snap Temporarily Broken and Kids Pine

A spirit of gloom that cannot be dispelled has settled over young Belleville and the world of younger folks all over the district. Sadly their skates have been carefully smeared with vaseline and tucked by in some dark corner until once again old Winter—a regular one—the next time they hope—rolls around again. Bright, shiny new sleds with the paint still unmarred on the surfaces, which were pulled out of their hiding places hopefully some days ago, when the thermometer started to creep up have once again been put back sadly and regretfully, and skis and other cold weather accessories are in their corner unused and new. Winter has come and gone—the bear woke up and took a tentative glance at the world, rolled out and went for a walk. But he didn't see his shadow and now, if he does wake up in the spring he is officially over, and as if conscious of his failure the bear has decided, a soft thaw has settled over the district, spring is just around the corner— maybe.

M-2 MYSTERY BAFFLES NAVY

Commons Told Cap and Collar Only Clues Found

London, Feb. 3 (AP).—An official question mark was written today over the grave of three score British seamen who vanished in the submarine M-2 beneath the choppy waves of the English Channel on Jan. 26.

After days and nights of anxious search the only results of the intensive search are a battered sea bag and a seaman's cap and collar.

The disaster to the M-2, which occurred off Portland Bill when she dived in manoeuvres and failed to reappear, thus became the most unusual of its kind in the annals of undersea navigation. The most amazing factor in the disappearance is absence of any sign of actual wreckage or air bubbles. Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today that search for the craft has been continued without success.

A powerful navy fleet operating with divers and searchlights found numerous objects on the floor of the English Channel but in each case they proved to be old and forgotten hulks of former tragedies.

In fact the only definite evidence from the M-2 had been the cap of the submarine's coxswain which floated to the surface, and a collar of the chief petty officer of the craft. A canvas bag found by searchers and containing signal flags, may have belonged to the M-2.

A Little Skid, A Slight Rub, Everybody Happy

A slippery road at the intersection of Coleman street and West Moira resulted in a slight collision between a large sedan and a small coupe shortly after seven o'clock last evening. The accident was a minor one however, and no damage resulted.

Turning left on the intersection to proceed down Coleman street the sedan which had been travelling along West Moira skidded on the smooth road and swerved into the coupe which had just driven up, and collided with some force was made by the rear fender of the sedan against the bumper of the coupe. The fender was crumpled slightly, and the smaller car was whirled around sideways, but no other damage was done and the driver of the smaller car waved away apologies of the former. The identity of the drivers could not be learned as both machines immediately proceeded on their journey.

CESSATION OF WAR ACTIVITY NOW IMMINENT

Strongest Bid For Peace Yet Made By Four Great Powers

ALL ANXIOUS

Reorganization of Japanese Staff Encouraging Development

Washington, Feb. 3—Strong in faith that peaceful words, rather than force, can best moderate the war-like temper of events in the Orient, four world powers today awaited anxiously the result of the message set bid for an end of hostilities on the Chinese coast.

It was made in effect, that Japan and China stop fighting and discuss the merits of their case afterwards.

The peace proposal, backed by Great Britain, the United States, France and Italy, and presented at Tokio and Nanking, carried a note of protest. It carried no slightest threat of war to preserve peace.

The first reports of its reception in Washington were that the situation remained admidedly grave and disconcerting. Amidst the din of the hostilities, particularly in Shanghai, bright sparks appeared from time to time.

The protection of these foreigners is the chief concern of the governments, but it is realized on occasion that the naval and military reinforcements have near Chinese shores must necessarily be drawn from those charged with protection.

Encouraging Development

Word of a reorganization of the Japanese staff in China was received here as a distinctly encouraging development. Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, who will succeed Admiral Koichi Kato, has been lauded by morality officers last night. Their arrest and subsequent seizure of 10,000 lottery tickets, mailing lists and other documentary matter is said to be the most important task of its type on record here.

The so-called English Grand National Charity swept, sponsored by the Quebec unit of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, is operated legally at St. Johns, Newfoundland, as a charity subscription fund. The benefits which are known to have resulted from sweeps, conducted under cover in the past, have been the subject of much controversy among veterans and politicians. While the sweep has been legalized in St. Johns, it is illegal in Canada.

After shadowing their suspect all day yesterday, Plainclothesmen Hugh Jackson and Joseph Sunderland, of the morality office, working under the direction of Inspector Thomas Sock and Sergeant Patterson, last night arrested Dunbar Croplay, 45, at St. Clair Avenue and Keele street. Later they raided his apartment on Greenwood Avenue and confiscated tickets, lists of thousands of addresses to which books of tickets were to be mailed, and accounts, police state, which showed that more than $2,000 worth of subscriptions had been sold.

RELIEF WORK FOR FEBRUARY

Federal Appropriation For Work Has Been Extended

Information affecting a number of Belleville people in this city, who have been employed on the transCanada highways in Northern Ontario was received from Toronto yesterday when the Hon. William Finlayson was advised that the federal appropriation for that work was being extended.

Work will proceed as formerly stated without any layoffs until the end of February at least, due to the guarantee of funds; and by the end of February the Province of Ontario and federal governments will have prepared further plans for construction for this year, and a definite policy in connection with the work will be laid down. Whether then there will be an extension of the work is not known but there has been no statement yet.

Crazed Trapper, Who Killed Constable Millen, Elusive

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—(By the Canadian Press)—The matter of despatching an airplane to Aklavik to cooperate with the Royal Mounted Police Department in the Rat River in their operations against the crazed trapper, Albert Johnson, is under consideration today. Major-General J. H. MacBrien, Commissioner of the Royal Mounted, will see Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice this morning and will discuss the question with him.

Fiercest Battle in the War Breaks out as Chinese Force Furiously Attacks Japanese

Fighting Takes Place Near Settlement—Forces Employ Artillery

FLY OVER CITY

Japanese Airmen Scout But Do Not Drop Bombs

Shanghai, Feb. 3.—(CP)—At 10:45 a.m. today headquarters of the Japanese marines announced that the Chinese had resumed hostilities in the area of the north railroad station near the north gate of the International Settlement using field pieces and machine guns.

The Japanese were returning the fire and both sides were holding their positions.

The sounds of gunfire were heard throughout the city.

The Japanese indicated they intend to hammer away at the Chinese positions in the native city area until the issue has been decided decisively.

At 11.15 a.m. the fighting was described as the most severe since the Japanese first threw their marines against the Chinese defence forces in the Chapei district.

Shells were falling at this time within the borders of the international settlement, together with an occasional dangerous burst of machine gun fire.

At 11.20 a.m. nine Japanese airplanes were flying over the city, apparently in an attempt to demoralize the stubborn Chinese forces, as no bombs were dropped.

At the same time the Japanese moved their biggest guns up to the Hongkew Rifle Range and began battering away at the Chinese from two angles.

The fire broke out behind the central postoffice in the settlement as a result of the shelling.

There are two new conflagrations in the fighting sector.

At 11.45 there were 12 Japanese planes over the city and the rumble of artillery fire increased.

The Argyll Battalion of the British army had landed from H.M.S. Berwick to help in the outbreak and proceeded through the city to their barracks in the British defence zone.

The Chinese were offering the stiffest opposition to the Japanese.

At noon the Chinese had not been budged from their positions and apparently the Japanese positions were seriously endangered.

The Chinese, after a few shots, found the Japanese range and laid down a heavy bombardment. Judging from the sound, Chinese guns outnumbered those of the Japanese.

R. R. WATCHMAN KILLED

SARNIA, Feb. 3.—William Riddell, Canadian National Railway Switchman, died early today from injuries received when he was crushed between a freight train and the side of the railway freight shed.

Riddell was riding a freight car onto a siding when the car left the rails and crashed into the side of the building. He was badly crushed. An inquest will be held.

RAE WANTS TO FACE MUSIC

Willing to Make Restitution and Pay Penalty

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 3.—Everett Rae, 35, former inspector for Belleville and district, Ont., was arrested in a rooming house here today on a charge of $4,500 bail for a further hearing February 4, charged with embezzling $1900 entrusted to his care.

At a hearing before Magistrate Joseph Coward the prisoner said he was anxious to go back to Canada to face the charges.

"I want to get this over with," he said. "I am willing to pay all the money back. It is tough to know that people think I was recognized while walking on the street here by two detectives.

Canadian authorities who were notified of Rae's arrest said they would send a man here to get him immediately. They said the money was taken from a fund made up of liquor violation fines. Rae disappeared from Canada last May.

GROWTH DESPITE DEPRESSION

Despite dullness of times which goes by the tabooed word "slump", some places are growing. Belleville for instance has shown an increase in population which is as real as anything in life. The figure of the assessor indicates growth.

Dull times are not mere dullness. They may be a mere cessation of boom conditions and in the case of boom towns they may indicate retrenchment and retirement of interests, amounting really to a drawback. But places such as Belleville, do not have booms and do not want them, so that when dullness appears in the business world the reaction is not so great. That part of the population which would like boom is the part that would try to take the cream off progress and leave the home folk to bear the slump when it comes. Belleville naturally takes no cognizance of the boom crowd, and hence does not lose control of itself in fat or leaner years.

Talking of comparisons of slump days with those of the piping thrilling times of boom, one has but to remark that the present slump is not nearly so great as the fall in prices would lead one to believe. Commodity prices and the prices of shares have fallen off very sharply but these are not the true indicators. Taking into account the entire physical assets of a nation is the only true way. Under such a scale of measurement, the wealth of the United States was but nine per cent lower at the end of 1930 than it was at the end of 1929 though in the year's interim fell the greatest shock socially and in many times had been experienced. All this goes to show that there is a stability even in most trying times which is not generally recognized and this it is which brings the ultimate change in trend.

Boom days added to the false belief that wealth is piling up rapidly, but this is an untrustworthy guide. In the sixteen years from 1914 to 1930 the wealth of the United States grew from 186 billions to 323 billions but this does not take into account the much smaller purchasing power of the dollar in 1930 as compared with 1914. If the same dollar were used the growth would only be 35 per cent as against the apparently increase in wealth of 71 per cent. The thirty-five per cent figure is the true measure of growth.

This growth in wealth and what it means should be recognized. Belleville for instance sees a slow but steady rise of physical assets. At the end of a period this may not look as large as it really is. Belleville's growth has fortunately not been so big as to create urban problems which condition is fatal to any municipality as it is to any individual.

CATS, MICE, RATS

Cats and the mice and rat creations are not diametrically opposed and are not hereditary foes. Neither are they of the dog. This has been claimed by a Chinese psychologist, Dr. Zing Yang Kuo in his studies of the feline animal. When cat and mice and rats have been playmates the cats never forgets them, though they may sometimes go for mice and rats of a different kind from their childhood friends.

But to stir up race hatred, all that is necessary to do is to show a kitten an adult cat in full pursuit of a mouse or rat. According to the New York Times one such demonstration was enough to have all kittens upon their former companions. Dr. Kuo claims that mousing like "pointing" dog is a matter of training.

A New York writer does not agree for he recalls seeing cats full grown which had never seen a mouse suddenly developing into mousers.

Evidently the animal psychologists do not agree.

NO MEDICAL RACKET

The world of medical research is one that has not developed racket proportions. Governments and departments of health far from making money usually lose money by new discoveries and research by their public-spirited efforts to help all people.

Of course it would be a misfortune if a serum which would cure serious maladies fell into the hands of those who were only to 'cash in' on their discovery. To the glory of invention and medicine it must be said that there is little room for any profit made out of discoveries which have a decided bearing on health and life.

Gandhi news has been virtually wiped off front pages by the affair in the far east. But even with that Gandhi is more than a match for wonder. It is a question whether his presence in England did not lessen the appeal of the mysterious personality of the eastern leader.

Science has made great progress, even the number of atoms in the centre of the solar system being known to man. Yet he does not know what next his neighbor will do. Such is the appeal in human beings and man is accordingly more interested in what his neighbor does than in all the particles which make up the sun.

OF JOYS MOST SWEET

By Aline Michaelis.

How futile life would be
Had it not brought to me
Your hand, your smile;
Had it not given me this
One taste of perfect bliss
A little while.

Joy's self is ever fleet
And this, of joys most sweet,
Can not remain.
Like rose that blooms to die,
Like dawning in the sky,
We see it wane.

Yet this rare gift alone
Will for all griefs atone
That years may bring.
Nor can life futile be
Since, it has brought to me
This perfect thing!

J. HOMER BLACK, new President of Toronto Board of Trade, is one of those forceful, vital business executives who give the needed touch of romance to Big Business. His Homer Ghost was one of the big men who emerged from the mad rush of early Cobalt and Porcupine days with what the welfare and trade of the hectic period broke many, made a few, and left a vivid picture of real up-and-doing life every minute with all who passed through the tumult and the elusive glitter of get-rich-quickism which gilded the rainbow in the days of silver sidewalks and glory holes. John Homer Black was superintendent of the government railway station here at North Bay, cut into the silver deposits at Cobalt, then continued through the northern Claybelt from New Liskeard, made side trips to Elk Lake, Larder Lake and Kirkland Lake, before striding on to Porcupine and Cochrane. John Homer was one of the few who did not join in the mad rush of these hectic times, coming out with quite a bunch of real silver from the Nipissing Mine and gold from some of the best of them farther north. Leaving the railway he became head of the great electrical power development in the north country, and later took over the chiefship of a Canadian Life Insurance Society. Next he was the active head in a big power development of the Transcontinental Railway for the manufacture of newsprint paper for a great United States newspaper. Wherever there is big construction and power development going on there will be found John Homer Black, who in his younger days was a country school teacher back of Smiths Falls somewhere. Now, as ever, he may be found at the head of a large construction company which is helping to build up Canada by engaging in tremendous development works. J. Homer Black is the personification of executive power on a large scale, full of driving force, vitality and the determination which will not accept defeat.

This is some instance of the ceaseless warfare waged against insects which menace mankind, as told to Belleville Rotary Club by one of the Dominion Government's big bug hunters, L. S. McLaine.

TIME WILL COME, according to a great scientist when there will not be enough food raised in the world to feed the population. That prediction is based on the present rate of population increase being continued and no decisive victories being won over insect pests which feed on growing crops and fruit. Being as the date of this interesting event is fixed beyond the hundredth year mark there is nothing for immediate worry among those present.

MODERN QUIETUS

By Roberta Lee

Q. Are guests at a house wedding seated for the ceremony?

A. A few seats are provided for the elderly guests, but others stand about as they would at a reception.

Q. What is the proper way to cat oranges at the table?

A. Oranges are peeled and then pulled apart, or at breakfast they may be cut into halves and eaten with the aid of the sharp-toothed orange spoon.

Q. What should a woman do if a letter of introduction is presented by a man?

A. She will ask him to an informal dinner.

MILDER WINTERS

Are our winters getting milder? This question has been asked time and again but never before has it been added more frequently than even before.

The answer is No and Yes. Let us explain. The official weather observers repeatedly assert that our winters are not getting milder. They produce figures to prove this, and such figures don't lie. They add that the past winter is not coming milder, the change would be so gradual as to be imperceptible even after a couple of centuries of close checking up. No, winters are not getting milder.

Yes, they are getting milder, in this way. Four years ago we drove of us lived in the country. When the snow came people stayed indoors or never went farther than the barn, and waited for May spring. It was colder then because there were not so many comforts, conveniences and aspects of artificial heat.

Today, thousands of people who were born on farms are living in cities. Furnaces, accompanied by warm street cars and motor cars. Ploughs clear streets and roads of snow and ice almost as fast. Then step into modern homes and stores and they do not notice the cold so much. So winters are getting milder, relatively speaking, but the people reason that we are not so exposed to cold as before, and therefore do not notice it less.

As for the winter, well, it is just the same and on the whole we are against it.

COAL PRICES

With the prices of all other commodities tumbling, the price of domestic anthracite coal stands up in striking contrast to the general downtown. The cost per ton remains as high today as it was during the war and the year immediately after the war period.

This situation, of course, can not continue indefinitely, but it would seem to be time that the anthracite companies were evincing some interest in the prices and wherewithal of the prolongation of the unwelcome stay. If artificial means are being employed to maintain the unwarranted price level, the props that are being used in the present situation be pulled away, either by those responsible for their use or by outside influences.

It may be said that the discount of the Canadian dollar is what the present time is against the possibility of any immediate reduction. But the price of anthracite was maintained at approximately an artificial level even when Canadian funds were at a slight discount. Under the present general conditions it is urgent that the public should be relieved of the burden of no exploitation in the coal business.—Toronto Telegram.

WORRY ABOUT WHAT OTHERS THINK, HARMS

Obsession of Doubt of Our Abilities is Product of Child Fear

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D. (Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

The numbers of men and women who are continually being bothered by what people think of them and their abilities are legion. Indeed, self - consciousness usually goes hand in glove with this obsession, the two making a combination that is most devastating to the peace of mind.

It is because such individuals are continually obsessed by this doubt of their own abilities that they become awkward, restrained and incapable of showing their best side.

What starts this obsession is usually fear in childhood. Father and mother, grandparents, have told them they could punish. They had to be respected. Just that type of discipline was the big world outside. And it became the individual's fear, to be transferred his fear of parents to all other persons.

Mothers and fathers, particularly mothers, make a great mistake when they keep on telling a child what "what will people think", when criticizing or correcting the child's boy or girl in the teens. Such teaching makes the child timid. It likewise has other serious and dangerous consequences.

In the emotional life, other causes may be found for shyness, doubt and fear. Psychoanalysis has proven conclusively that fear is the basis of all fear. Even the most forgotten, yet continue to exercise a powerful and unsuspected influence on the adult's behavior.

Fear is the most difficult emotion to overcome this "what-will-people-think" fear. Reason is of little avail, however, at every turn and for a long time.

The method, for instance, try and stop wondering whether one's clothes are appropriate, or in good taste on occasion, whether one is talking or behaving correctly, whether one is using the best standards of etiquette, whether or not people are liking you.

This, I know well, is not at all easy to do. In fact, the self-consciousness is so great that one has to exercise his will power in such a situation. In the case of shyness may be, has probably fought the obsession daily and for years. Then what, you ask?

If all such conscious methods fail, the next thing to do is to go in search one's past, one's deep inner self, especially the unconscious field.

Think back, and you may be surprised to find that some relatively-speaking absurd experience when you were a child, has been caught in some crank which made you feel ashamed, for instance, or some other such a triviality—may have become the basis for the sprouting of all your difficulties.

Bring such experiences to the surface, look at them objectively, and immediately you will see how silly they are. In the case of fear, cause, and often this hyper-sensitive fear leaves as by magic.

In more stubborn cases there is still hope, however. Here, though, psychoanalysis, psychotherapy, or analytic character, are required. Scientific understanding of mind brings to light most unsuspected worries and repressions, and sooner or later the source of self-consciousness, or whatever it is, will be found and eliminated.

The point to emphasize is that such disturbances need not be. There are ways of getting rid of them. And never should one give up the fight.

Police Closing in on Demented Trapper in North

Aklavik, N.W.T., Feb. 3.—Today may end the career of Albert Johnson, demented trapper, alleged murderer, doughty two-gun fighter of the ice floes and arctic snows now hunted by Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Eight men who left here yesterday to join the chase and others are left to guard the improvised fortress from which Johnson shot and killed Constable E. Millen Saturday were due on the scene early this morning.

On their arrival they will begin the search for the lone figure of the reclusive, sharp-shooting hermit. Confidence is felt here this time that Johnson will not escape, though it is doubtful if he will be taken alive.

Heard On The Street

For the camera enthusiast, who is always searching for some new spot, some new place to set up his camera and take pot shots of the public gaze, Belleville has the place in the city that possibly has been overlooked. Yet in the tower of the town hall where the old bell hangs, the musical visitor who takes the trouble to climb those narrow, crooked, wooden stairs to the windy balcony, Belleville stretches out before him in a great panorama that appears vastly different when viewed from the tower. Points of interest that merge themselves into surrounding scenes when viewed from the street, stand out with startling suddenness, other points that appear prominent have receded into the background almost to complete extinction. The new pump house, for example, stands out prominently, the numbers of the boys, the new bridges, both of them, however, are the most prominent of all new projects constructed recently, and they are the ones that are missed. When taken as a snap-shot by the camera they make a beautiful print.

x x x x

Far off to the left hangs a pall of whitish smoke in a dense cloud as the cement manufacturing plant threatened the town of its origin, but it is only dust from the works of one of the largest cement plants in Canada. Further still to the right can be seen the blackish smoke of the railway shops, floating lazily in clouds and long streamers; and to the south lies the county of Prince Edward, brown and bare under the winter blasts. Albert College, also in its new stone construction shines whitely in the great field where it is situated and many specks of students show that school is out for recess of the day.

If after viewing the city from that point of the tower one wishes to go further upwards where the fear gets stronger, then there is another ladder of steps, even more shaky stairs, to emerge on a little platform that seems very, very insecure, and if there is something akin to fear that the whole building might just possibly collapse while you are on it. Even the men who work at the tower as the wind blows it, feel it, and one walker is very gingerly around it; there may be his formed on the tiny platform, if he does fall. Below is the city that feels a little safer, and one might just start the body rolling to the sidewalk a million miles below. Here the view of the surrounding country is greatly improved: Corbyville, Cannifton, Trenton—all roll out under the eye, and even the base of Toronto can be observed on a clear day. Pigeons, disturbed by the visitor, circle around in a more flutter around and coo apprehensively at us from the ledges. Above, the swerving flight of the swallows, darting in the air, creaks meaningly and adds a greater feeling of peril to the situation. So it is with a sort of thankfulness that one accept the invitation to descend once more, and down the dusty trap door we climb. A stiff wind has arisen and through the long cracks in the floor of the tower—what a place to be cooped up in over night and have to listen to that.

Down past the works of the old clock we again go. Here the great pendulum swings and the long rod that connects the train engine with the bell through room 11 is in. Por the size of the clock the works are surprisingly small, but they work with a well greased and smooth precision that has kept the time of the city correct for over fifty years. The large hands which are far above the works of the clock are driven by a set of small cogs below them, connected with the long rod that connects with the bell. We learned was that the bell is not operated from the police station by the electric wire that is used to ring the fire alarm bells in the rooms from the station. Strike one and somebody is "out." Power transmitted by this cable is obtained from a hand lever in the engine room of the clock. Below the engine room at the light of stairs more and the executive offices in the city hall are reached. The little trip above is over.

Just recently a motorist of the city who had been returning from a hurried trip to Trenton just as dusk began to fall over the countryside, overtook one of the great fraternity of wanderers on the road. Pulling to the side, which was rapidly getting dark, he asked the man to get in, accepted. "Why", began the motorist, "why do you walk around the country-side this time of year? Why don't you get a job—do something that'll take you somewhere?" "Well" replied the transient, "I did have a job but I got tired of it, so I quit, and what happened? I got tired of all the other fellows wandering around the country and I got the urge, too. I am a meat butcher by trade. I could get a job at it, I suppose, but I'm tired of it, so I'm on the road—and somehow I like this kind of life. In fact I'd rather walk than work now." "But how long will you keep it up?" asked the motorist. "Just how long road ahead of you?" Well, I and he commenced to slow down the car by a hasty application of the brakes, "I suppose you're going to walk all the way to Toronto?" "Sure, that road until you get to where you were going. If you like walking that much don't let me stop you." "Stop me, you couldn't get me to stop me—Scram buddy, outta this car! The whole road is yours from now on."

Something will have to be done about that red block signal light down at the railway crossing on the Foxtrace road. Its distance from the city limits is only a few hundred yards, but one night last week a car driver approaching the crossing but the red light was against him. He waited for it to turn to green, but it did not do so. Time and time again he didn't get help to the idea until he had waited about five minutes waiting for it to change. Last night the same thing was repeated. Point Street is agree was dropped by a lady and gentleman who recovered a short time afterwards by her fiancee. They had not been long on the road friends, so it was said, for some time, but the last purse broke the ice and again the sun shines bright for two of them. A well known citizen staged a rat hunt in the basement of his city dwelling last week and after two o'clock or so and finally caught the rodent. Then he placed a heavy foot on the creature, just back of its neck, and gave it the works.

Further reports on the activities of fortune tellers inform this column that one certain lady can give definite information about the future, and that for the sum of a cup of tea and a cup of tea in particular is desired, where one client was told some weeks before band of sudden misfortune that would befall her and her family. Some days afterwards the client's parents would happen in a the period of a few weeks at least. One week afterwards the lady had a fine little daughter taken away by sudden illness, a day or two afterwards she dropped a large mantel clock out of her hands onto the floor when she was handling it, to find, and some days afterwards she found a valuable piece of jewelry that she had lost. Now she goes around in fear of her life that something else is going to happen. The jinx is still after her, and people still go to her.

It seems that astrologists some and go and phrenologists occasionally have their brief innings but they soon wane and die and have never the loved the old fashioned popularity of the lady of the tea leaves, the palm-playing cards, which continues on unabated. For years they have retained supreme and have brought joy into the lives of thousands of the gullible public who have listened with rapt attention while their tale was being unfolded. For more years they will continue to do so and as long as there are darkened parlors and kindly old ladies to listen or gray headed old men to advise these people who bring their woes and troubles to the shrine of mysticism they will be patronized. It is still a good way to spend an afternoon.

SEA CADETS LUNCHEONED BY KIWANIS CLUB

Good Ship "Arethusa" Brings Cadets Into Port

CLEVER ADDRESS

Mr. Richens, Ship's Mate, Tells of Experience in China

The good ship "Arethusa" loaded with a full complement of Sea Cadets docked at the Kiwanis Club wharf on Tuesday and for a brief spell were the guests of the club at their weekly luncheon. The Cadets were in command of Lieutenant Geoffrey Richens, R.C.N.R., Master Mate, Jack Carter sub Lieutenant and end officer, Kenneth Clark as say the boys enjoyed their stay and will be ready to go aboard the Arethusa next time it is extended. The Cadets looked quite natty in their blue uniforms and they put up a fine exhibition by reversing perfect about turns and marching.

Lieut. Griffin gave a brief synopsis of the work of the Sea Cadets under the Navy League of Canada and sponsored by the Kiwanis Club since the inception here in February of last year. J. A. Richens the Master Mariner was the most interesting and instructive talk on the Navy, describing his trip up the Yangtze River in China, a country very much in the public eye at the present time.

P. C. MacLaurin, chairman of the Sea Cadets committee and a past president of the club presided at the chair with Russell Wolfen as secretary at which position he performed as song leader. The community singing was led by Jack Bea, the numbers being especially chosen for the Cadets. Some good voices were noted among the boys and they sang two or three numbers alone, which were much appreciated by guests.

The directors are reaching for a 100 per cent attendance during the month of February and every member present will be fined $1 and fine every meeting. Next week "Bonnie" Bonnell will read a treatise on fish for which he is agent in the city. Bonnie has been a keen fisherman. Rubber Company are supplying the awards for the Cadets and the expenses should turn out. Great. Griffith speaking for the Cadets stated they were pressed as per cent strong, a remarkable showing. He also stated that the work had justified itself and the boys were showing a marked change in his life at the same time giving them a chance to enter the navy if they found that to be their calling in life later. Jack Carter who was most interesting spoke briefly at any kind. The pealing officer told of the recent visit to the ship and stated that the Cadets had attained an average of 80 per cent at a range of 25 yards, which was considered a possible 93 out of 100 which was considered excellent. Mr. Master Kerr, one of the Cadets gave a reading, much appreciated by the members.

Mr. Richens gave an interesting talk on his life at sea, paying particular attention to his trip up the Yangtze River in China. His early training and his great love of the sea. He spoke of his son in the Great War and the wounds received at the present time. He has a fine silver plate in his stomach but in his own words, he is just as good a man as ever. He spoke in a most unaquilo fleet, which were flat bottomed boats used in China mostly by Mr. Richens and his description of the insects in the Yangtze River. Navy men counteract their poisonous effects. It is seldom that the members are given the privilege of listening to such interesting addresses and Mr. Richens received hearty applause at the close. Before closing Mr. Richens thanked the club on behalf of the Cadets for the splendid luncheon and also for the interest in their work.

Poet's Corner

TOWERS OF SILENCE

If men could still be holy workers,
If men could still be holy workers,
Then the coasts with lamps
And warm the ships—
The holy towers of silence.

Out where voice and shout
Are lost in the sea
Than seagulls leave on waves,
A man might learn
To be alone with safety in the dark.

And when a man is master of a light
That he can send out like a silver
Between a life and death, he ought
Something of the joy of being God.

Dispatch Aeroplane To Conduct Search

Ottawa, Ont., Feb 3 (CP)— Immediate dispatch of an airplane, carrying Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers was ordered today by the far north Rae River area, where Albert Johnson, trapper-trapper and slayer, has evaded all attempts at capture. Chartering of the plane, its equipment, and personnel to be used in the search was left to the discretion of the district commander of the R.C.M.P. at Edmonton.

RANGERS FIND GOING HARD

Will Have to Snap Out of Slump or Finish Down

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 3 (CP)—The world pace of the National Hockey League during the early weeks of the campaign is having telling effects on the Patrick puster these days for last night the New York entry dropped a 4-2 decision to the world champion Canadiens and met their fifth reverse in seven starts.

Although it is generally conceded Rangers have not burnt themselves out, they have failed to show the winning form in their last half dozen starts that they displayed in the first half of the schedule and unless they snap out of their slump shortly they may find trouble finishing in front of Toronto Maple Leafs who are heading the Canadian division.

Canadiens triumph was not the only victory for the Canadian division clubs last night in a trio of games, for Maroons and Americans both added two points to their standings by defeating Detroit and Boston, respectively, 4-2.

Standing

Games played last night resulted as follows:

National League
Canadiens 4; N. Y. Rangers 2.
Maroons 4; Detroit 2.
Americans 4; Boston 3.

International Series
Windsor 5; Pittsburgh 1.
London 1; Buffalo 0.
O.H.A. Senior
Marlboros 7; Oshawa 2.
Hamilton 1; Port Colborne 0.
O.H.A. Intermediate
Dunlop 10; Owen Sound 1.
Elora 8; Simco 0.
London East 6; Chatham 2.
O.H.A. Junior
Preston 7; Galt 6.
Oshawa 2; Aurora 1.
Georgetown 4; Brampton 2.
Port Colborne 3; Niagara Falls 2.
Parry Sound 7; Orillia 4.
North Toronto 1; Native Sons 0.

More Precautions When Blasting

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 3—Precautions should be taken when blasting operations are proceeding, a coroner's jury at Sharbot Lake investigating the death of H. Walker of Lakeview found yesterday. Walker was struck by a stone following the explosion.

The jury found his death was unavoidable but recommended that a whistle be sounded at least fifteen minutes before each explosion.

"HURRAH" KANE A PROSPECT

Frank Selke, one of the presiding geniuses of the famed Marlboro hockey teams, producers of many stars of the game, declares that Jack Kane is the second best right winger he ever had. Charlie Conacher is Selke's first choice, of course, but still he has had many others whose names are something to conjure with. All of which seems to make Kane right now a pretty good prospect for big-time employment. As a matter of fact, he has been clicking with the Toronto Maple Leafs though why the recently reported deal fell through is something of a mystery. "Jerry" is this year with Charlottetown Abegweit, last year he was with Hamilton Tigers, who lost out to the Winnipegs for the Canadian title and the right to represent Canada at the Olympics. At 18 he played for Montreal C.N.R. He is now 24. Though he is a little under weight he is fast and what is more has that indefinable something called "color."

NEW SKI JUMP MAY BE MADE

Nels Nelson, Canadian Tries For New Mark on Saturday

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 3— When Nels Nelson, of Revelstoke, B.C., attempts to better the existing world ski jump record at Mt. Seymour Saturday, as announced yesterday, he will have to add considerably to his former world's record of 240 feet. Alf Engen of Salt Lake City, Utah, made a leap of 257 to his credit, made more than a year ago, is recognized by the United States Ski Association as world's professional champion.

A few weeks ago at Ogden, Utah, Engen was credited with an unofficial jump of 307 feet.

Wielders of the "Besan and Scone" gathered at the curling club last night for the inaugural contest. Two sheets of ice were utilized and although the ice was hardly a real game was enjoyed. These spoon competitions are popular in Toronto clubs and the enthusiasm shown here will go to make for still better spirit in the club. The rinks are drawn out of a hat and after handicapping have a battle royal. The 18 rink with largest score wins the spoons. Curler: "Dat was fine, J. TECS, BULLDOGS MAKE ADVANCE

London Now in Safe Possession of Third Place

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 3 (CP)— London and Windsor, the only Canadian clubs playing in the International Hockey League, improved their position in the standing last night, when they marched to victories over Buffalo Bisons and Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, respectively, on their home ice.

Tecumseahs' 1-0 triumph over the pace-setting Bisons gave the London entry sole possession of third place with Windsor's 5-1 victory left the Bulldogs on the fourth rung two points in front of Syracuse and one behind Tecumseahs.

In one of the wildest games of the season, held up several times by lengthy arguments between players of both clubs and Referee Johnny Jones, Tecumseahs managed to gain a lucky tally in the second period and held their margin until the final gong despite a five-man Buffalo attack during the last five minutes of the game. The one score, which indicates the closeness of the play, was credited to Eric Pettinger when he scooped Benson's pass back of the Buffalo net and shot the rubber across the goal mouth. The puck bounded into the cage off the skate of Murray, Buffalo defence man, and Taugher had no chance to save.

Things to worry about: Tonight's game of Belleville at Gananoque, another worry for tonight is the Kingston-Belleville basketball game at the Y. M. C. A. Don't forget again there is the junior game at Trenton on Thursday night and for good measure the junior play-offs which will start on Saturday night at the Belleville Arena. (Sat then, why worry?)

We have been telling the local junior management that they needed to get busy or the O.H. A. would be through with the fiasco and now the parent body tells them that they must win their whincer declared by Monday. The result is that Trenton day, Saturday and meet Hockey Monday. But we are of the opinion that if the local Cubs play the kind of hockey that they are capable of they will have little or no trouble in winning from the Trentonians.

Kingston Frontenacs defeated Campbellford by the score of 5 to 4 on Monday night. The Frontenacs can go into a tie with the local Intermediates if they beat them here on Friday night. The only difficulty which remains for the local intermediates now is for either R.M.C. or Gananoque to beat the league leading Queen's students, but then don't be surprised if the locals get into the playoffs. How? We don't know, yet.

Our old friend, Walter Jackson of Peterboro, has been named as referee for tonight's tilt at Gananoque. We wonder who will get the call for the Queens at Belleville game?

It is with a slight bit of amazement that we notice the fact that the Kingston press are "tooting up" the Queen's hockey team this year. In years gone by the Kingston papers seemed to give the Queen's hockey teams the so called "run around," but now that their favorite Frontenacs and R.M.C. boys are "out in the cold" the Kingston sport writers are backing the Queen's team to the limit. Well there is an old saying: "Any old port in a storm."

Henry McLemore, New York sport writer, comes to the front and boldly asserts that the present play-off system of the National Hockey League is nothing short of a money making idea. He says: "You can search the sport world in vain for anything to pillow-fighting without finding anything quite so ridiculous as the play-off system now in vogue in the National Hockey League." When an American sports writer gets on his high horse enough to openly criticize the present money making, money grabbing, commercial idea now being used in the N.H.L. play-offs, well, it is time that Canadian interests try and put hockey back in its original place in the sport world.

The management of the Brooklyn Robins seem to be quite satisfied with their recent acquisition of Hack Wilson to the extent that they have rendered him a contract calling for $15,000 for the season of 1933. Manager Max Carey must be of the opinion that the versatile "Hack" still has some good baseball left in his trusty bat. We draw this conclusion from the enormous salary being paid the out of the outfielder. He may be one of the means of bringing a pennant to the Dodgers this year. (?).

Thursday sees the opening of the Olympic games at Lake Placid and the eyes of the sporting world will be centred on the activities in the little New York State town up in the Adirondacks. This is the Third Winter Olympic games to be played, the first winter games were competed at Chamonix, France while the second competition of winter games took place at St. Moritz, Switzerland, in 1928. Today's Olympic games call for many new faces and the future world's champions will be crowned during the next two weeks.

Dominion Status Should Come Slowly

Toronto, Feb. 3—Not until India has become fully prepared to accept her responsibility and the privileges accorded with Dominion status should her ideal of self-government be realized, said Abdullah Yusuf Ali, Indian scholar, addressing the Women's Canadian Club here yesterday.

Self-government should come to India as a gradual, natural development, he said. Anything premature means disaster, he continued, in his opinion, prove disastrous to the lasting peace of that country.

TONIC FOOD BEVERAGE

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Footnotes on Shoes and Stockings

Seven miles a day the average housewife walks as she goes from one room to another, from kitchen to pantry, from front door to back, answering the telephone, setting the table, clearing the food and one dishes that make up her routine. In a day when she sits comfortably before the radio. She is a walker, and she should be properly shod.

For the sake of her backbone, the support of her feet and legs, and the welfare of her nervous system, to say nothing of her tired little dogs, it would seem economy to her to provide herself with comfortable shoes. Some sturdy footwear for the kitchen when she will stand half a day before the kitchen table, and her poor feet encased in high heeled slippers that have lost shape. They feel grouchy, take their jobs, get snarly. A pair of proper shoes often changes them to a different face on life.

Many manufacturers have given attention to this matter. They provide at reasonable prices, shoes that are adapted to housework wear. They are light weight, as house shoes should be. Toes are wide and rounded. The heel, one and one four inches high, is straight, broad, furnished with a rubber pad. There is a strap. There should always be a strap, buttoned snugly, to provide support. The design is not clumsy. While it is comfortable and practical, it is also good looking in the latest style. The fit of the old house cotton stockings are to be preferred to silk. They more readily absorb moisture, the skin surface of the body. It is smart and barn. As stockings are woven to a point, it is preferable to get them one inch longer than the foot. Stockings shrink from a little. A tight garter cuts and causes so much foot damage as a tight shoe, forcing toes into a height they should spread. The foot of an infant is widest at the ball of the foot, while the toes pointing outward sway from this line and destroy the natural contour. And the whole world goes limping in chiropodist's office.

After putting on a stocking, pull its toe and sway from the foot. Then walk briskly. Stockings in four or five waists. Sedimonis from health keep left in the fabric may set up a skin irritation.

By giving the feet a decent break, wearing low heels in the house and walking about on the street, one can indulge in the beloved high heels for the evening festivity, with no damage to the bones and fibers of the little pedals. Continual devotion to spiked heels ruins posture, throws the shoulders forward, relaxes the abdominal muscles, weakens the ankles, and aborions the back muscles of the legs.

Any fashion that is not fit is reflected in the face and has a depressing effect upon the nervous system and the disposition. No telling by how many hundreds of dollars up into peaches 'if one four of an inch were added to the length of the little shoe. The fit of the shoe is much more important than the fit of the frock.

Surest Hold on a Child Lies in Being its "Pal"

The sixteen-year-old daughter had come home from a party at exactly one-thirty the previous night.

"Mina," observed her father, "don't you think you've been up pretty late hours for a kid of your age?"

Mina pounced into his lap and ruffled back his hair. "Oh, it's only once in a while we keep it up so late, old thing."

"But you need more rest," the father objected.

"So do you," flashed back the girl, with a smile. "How about your prowling all over the town at all hours, and then getting down to the office at nine as usual."

"That's my job," retorted the father. "I have to go when I'm called. But you don't. I can control."

"You wouldn't if you could." Then from lips kissed him swiftly. "Don't tell you don't enjoy it. You've been at it yourself, you know, in the morning that I would dance all night."

The father grinned. "Touché!" he replied.

Then in a swift softening "I'll be good, Dad. No more late parties till June's, and that's on Saturday night." Another swift kill, laughingly "tonight" and Mina sang her way up to bed.

The father sighed. "I'm licked," he said. "You can't out-think or out-talk the kids of today." There was a pause.

"I wonder," he went on, "if we modern parents haven't lost something by making pals of our children? I never would have dared talk to my father like that.

"Yet it isn't Nina's fault. Ever since she was a little thing I've treated her like a pal. She has a right to think of me as one of her playmates. And I'll be darned if I hope I haven't adopted a wrong procedure.

"Do you think he has?" I don't. There is bound to be a truthiness from a child brought up as a "pal" which never would have cropped out had he been reared with the Jehovah type parent. The child, however, would have thought the same thoughts. Why not let him SAY them?

And as for respect—do we respect any less the friend to whom we can talk freely, a friend who has always been truthful and fair with us. The obvious answer is "no".

It is only that we aren't yet used to having a child openly voice her opinions; but it is a good thing to get used to. It is healthy and open and clean, and in it is as much less to fear that in the days when to speak his inner mind was instantly classified as a child's "talking back".

Fashion Fancies

BEST WELL in a charming nightie. A new and smart model is of fine crepe de Chine and has a deep flounce and fichu of white georgette that is accented by handmade Vallace. The short sleeves have frills of the same.

Right in line for the Spring is the black coat trimmed with white fur. An advance model is one in black crepy woollen and has a fabric medallion that ties in a scarf. The three-quarter sleeve has its wide cuff bordered with it deep band of white fox fur.

The SCARF WINDS its way onto the mode. A lovely evening frock of pink satin has one and has a rounding neckline with long scarf ends that wind about each arm. Jewelled clips at each shoulder and a jewelled belt buckle provide the only trimming. The skirt has seasonal detail.

YOUR CHILD AND STRANGERS

Last night we made a brief call on a family that has a three-year-old boy. The mother was all a-twitter trying to make him act like a little gentleman, mostly like a little gentleman of twenty-one at least, but she grew flushed and perturbed when he declined to come up to bat. When we entered it was fifteen minutes before his bedtime, a bad moment to meet any child. He was on the floor, engrossed in his favorite toy.

"Sonny," suggested his mother, "get up and say 'how-do-you-do' to our guests."

Sonny wiggled a foot and became more intent upon his truck.

"Get up and shake hands," pleaded the mother. No word or look was given her for an answer.

"He's just awful," the mother told us. "He's getting so he won't do anything."

That was not a very good psychology in that, but apart from that I feel that she, like many other mothers, was made to suffer unexpect from a three-year-old—to go through the motions of welcoming guests with the savoir faire of an old lady.

The child, I believed, wasn't shoddborn—or unsociable. He was just shy. He thinks a little. A child must be forced and asked where his bus went. His eye is lighted up: "Chicago" he announced proudly. So he was told to take a little breaking-in trip to that mid-west city.

Then we did an about-face and rolled it on the floor. He shook, he laughed and forgot the stiff, woodenish adult who had been inclined to watch us at first, but who were by now murmuring nothings at all to each other.

We speeded up the bus and sad to Chicago, and the child was there. That ended the transportion idea, and it was time for bed.

Sonny had forgotten himself by that time and shook hands without embarrassment, and when he came to me I was rewarded for my patience with a kiss. He let me put his four or five waists. Sedimonis from health sweet left in the fabric may set up a skin irritation.

By giving the feet a decent break, wearing low heels in the house and walking about on the street, one can indulge in the beloved high heels for the evening festivity, with no damage to the bones and fibers of the little pedals. Continual devotion to spiked heels ruins posture, throws the shoulders forward, relaxes the abdominal muscles, weakens the ankles, and aborions the back muscles of the legs.

Friends Honor Mr. And Mrs. Spencer

On Monday evening, Jan. 11th, a miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Spencer at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCreary, at Latta. About 65 friends and neighbours were present. The early part of the evening was spent in games, music and social discourse. Helen and Harold were asked to come and many dainty gifts were placed on a table loaded with presents. Mrs. Russell Glass read the following address:

Dear Helen and Harold:

Having learned that your recent marriage, we, a few of your many friends and neighbors have gathered here tonight to show our appreciation and esteem for you. We assure you that we all miss you from the social interests as you have always taken an active part in all the affairs in this community, but our loss will be others' gain and we know you will endear yourselves in the hearts of all with whom you come in contact.

We sincerely wish you and your fortunes bound in a long and happy married life together and trust you will soon make think of your future neighborhood to which you both will always receive a hearty welcome. As a proof of our love and respect for you we ask you to accept these gifts and tokens in the spirit in which they are given.

Signed on behalf of friends and neighbors, Mrs. Russell Glass, Emma Rose Hicks.

The young couple both made fitting replies and expressed their thanks for the many beautiful and useful gifts and invited those present to call at their home. All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows". A bountiful lunch was served.

It may be thought that to vindicate the permanency of truth is to dispute without an adversary.—Beattie.

SEX EQUALITY THEORETICAL IN RUSSIA

Moscow, Feb. 3.—Woman's plane in the new Russia theoretically is the man's—in voting and all other rights of citizenship. With regard to wages, women generally get the same as men of equivalent capacity in industry, business and office administrations, although there are individual complaints, especially in teaching profession, that women sometimes receive a lower scale. Generally, come to management of affairs there is a startling difference between the sexes. The "proletarian" elected last night for the party conference—the president rep resents 40,000 members—is authority in the Soviet Union —has forty men members and only one woman, Mme. Kalegina.

It is interesting to note that among those elected in the Far Eastern Commander Blucher-Galen and Gen. Dyborenko reports that he was demoted for participating in "Trotskyist opposition led by M. Sirtsov and M. Lominadze in early 1930, when he was chief secretariat of fifteen members there are no women. The fact is that the country regards itself as almost in a state of war and though it has women in fight in the navy or even to act as officers there is still a stigma for those who go to the General Staff.

Perhaps what this more serious is that the American relief in Russia which employed more than 100,000 persons and fed millions of starving sufferers have generally—found Russian women inferior in technical training, more competent and generally more reliable than men.

But the Asiatic traditions that have prevailed here for many centuries have left in their wake—even though at that one may suppose it will be eliminated in a few years. The Russian woman from eminence in politics down to the humblest peasant, one or two writers and painters there are in the Communist party, no executive in any branch of Soviet life save the theatre. One other exception is Madame Kollontai, Kropskay, Lenin's widow, is Ambassadress abroad, the world's first woman Ambassador, who though a healthy looking person, has no political influence on account of her oppositionist tendencies.

Much Interest Being Shown in Drawing-Room

Each new regime brings certain changes in connection with state functions, and people who have been in the habit of following procedure in connection with openings of parliament in Ottawa are looking forward with rather special interest to that of next Thursday. For one reason, His Excellency, the Earl of Bessborough, will officiate for the first time since assuming office of governor-general. The beautiful Countess of Bessborough will arrive with her husband and enter the parliament buildings with him through the main entrance under the Peace Tower, as the great guns boom out 19 times, at 3 o'clock. She will proceed with him to the senate chamber in the historic procession and take her place ordinarily reserved for the wife of the governor-general since his royal highness, the Duke of Connaught was in Canada.

Lady Byng regime, Lady Byng entered through the senate door to the left of the throne, the Willingdon regime, Lady Willingdon arrived by the same door where her procession was formed. She was escorted through the Senate Chamber, the order of she last opening at which she was present, the short session in the fall of 1930, when the bill for the unemployment situation, Hon. Senator Robertson, minister of labour, in her hour, had the honour of escorting her, Hon. Senator R. B. Bennett proceeded to meet His Excellency in Confederation Hall.

The procession will be the first of the Bennett administration to have close to the left at the throne.

Lady Tilley and Miss Tilley will be among the guests on behalf of the Bennett administration to have all the time-honoured associations of a social nature. For the first time in two years a levee will be held, when many debutantes from all parts of Canada will be included in the list of presentations to their Excellencies.

Peter is Most Uncomfortable

By Thornton W. Burgess

Most troubles that beset your way
For your mistakes are what you pay.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter was realizing this now. Never in his life had he felt more uncomfortable. All on account of idle curiosity, for which there was no real excuse. He was simply paying by a feeling of helpless uncertainty that was really quite dreadful. He was afraid to stay where he was, and he didn't dare leave. Now, can you imagine a much worse state of mind? And he knew that the fault was wholly his own.

He was under the back porch of Farmer Brown's house. There were others under there too, Jimmy Skunk and Mrs. Jimmy. Just outside was Reddy Fox. It had come about simply because Peter was filled with a great curiosity. Reddy Fox had been seen to enter Jimmy was spending the winter, which really was no business of his at all. He had followed Jimmy's footprints in the snow, over the back door step, and there he had made the exciting discovery that the only way Jimmy was sitting as close to that entrance as he dared. Peter, you see, just outside sat Reddy Fox in the deepest snow. There was too small for Reddy to get through, which was one thing to be thankful for.

Peter had been very good friends with Jimmy, being independent and afraid of no one, is as a rule exceedingly good-natured. But would he be if he should discover an intruder in his home, one who had no business to be there?

ARKETS DOWN ITH PRESSURE

Stocks Down Slightly From Yesterday's Finals

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 3—Afternoon stock and mining markets on the Toronto Exchange Market was weighed by light selling pressure, especially all price changes taking place on a fractional basis from last night's finals.

Interest in domestic and export copper issues remained in action with the Metal shares, Noranda dipping to $16.62, Nickel 20 to $6.25, Hudson Bay 9 to $2.45. Hiding also slipped a couple to $1.18 to the only change among oil-financial issues, Canadian Dominion $1.80 but Peninsular Pete was actually lower in a dull oil session.

Another mixed golds displayed 10 gains, 10 losses and 7 unchanged. Wright-Hargreaves was the bright spot of the list and at midday, in the changes that were reflected in action. Dividends and Kirkland Lake Gold sent each.

Toronto Stock Exchange

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 3—Dominion stock and mining markets underwent changes this morning like a single factor on a line and level prints. There were more transactions in stock than in the previous hour and more than in several of them combined. A comparatively long list of stocks gravitated to new positions in other sections of the market, but the net change at this point at its best, today, and held about the point and a fraction mark, application accounted for the rise but there was nothing to account for the accumulation. The street and buying came from those who are connected with the company but officials had no knowledge of a change in the stock movement this week, the high mark the morning was 1-2 which compares with a low for the past week of 2.

There was no interest elsewhere the market. Most of the leaders with the Metals were fractions to 1. Nickel, Ford, Walkers, Loblaw "A" all dropped fractions, Imperials at 5 also was lower.

There was scarcely a movement the Oils.

Quotations showed no material change.

OCKS SINK TO LOW LEVEL

Japan Situation is Not Affecting Markets to Any Degree

New York, N.Y., Feb. 3 — The stock Market again drifted gradually lower today, as renewed pressure of steel industry were rather severe. Sales of Chrysler and General Motors dividend announcements also added to the weakness except as it continued to add element of uncertainty, the Shanghai conflict appeared to have little influence. The Orient gulf-war had now been fought for market remaining extremely dull, issues were irregularly lower at the end or so, but Auburn slumped more than 3 points. Standard Brands was also a soft spot, presumably reflecting dividend uncertainty. Some more than 3 points, some 2 points or so included Chrysler, Telephone, Liggett and Myers "B", Lowes, Macy, Dupont, Johns Manville and Southern Pacific. The market had a brief upturn in the afternoon, but it was rising more than a point, maintaining the major part of the loss into the afternoon. Although other advances were mostly fractional. Standard oil of Indiana was a fraction, on reduction of the annual dividend basis to $2.80.

U. S. Steel's offer of stock to employees at $40 a share was construed bullish in some quarters, although it was pointed out that it is well informed quarters that corporation officials are being guided by the market outlook in the stock in making such offers.

LEACHMAN and MORRIS ARE OUT

Belleville Intermediates Make Trip Without Two Players

Minus two of their regular players the Belleville intermediates left for Gananoque this afternoon. Merlie Morris and Leo Leachman will not be able to play with the team.

Leachman is unable to get away on account of business. Jack may leave at a later time and join the locals at the Gananoque rink. Coach "Bouncer" Holway will step in and take the necessary left by Morris, while Rene St. Denis or one of the local players will try to fill Leachman's shoes if he does not get to the "Thousand Islands" in time for the game.

The locals are still hoping for the best and as there are developments afoot we still contend that the locals have a rather good chance to get into a tie with Queens if they can win tonight's game and also the game against Kingston Frontenacs on Friday night. The locals will face a tough team tonight as the Gananoque Club have given all their opposition plenty to worry about in all of their games to-date. The "Glassmen" will be best of Holway-Wing, their fast skating junior, who was declared ineligible to play here because he had participated in two intermediate games.

Santiago, Cuba, Feb. 3 (AP) — A severe earthquake which shook Santiago in the dark hours of early morning has left many dead and a part of this ancient city and brought death or injury to hundreds of persons.

The quake rocked the entire city, torn up of Cuba, and sended westward through Oriente province to the frontier of Haiti but there its damage suffered the most terrific loss. Hundreds were killed and many hundreds as solid masonry houses crumbled, crushing hundreds of persons in them before they were fully awake.

Horror seized the area as lights in many sections went out and terror-stricken men, women and children stumbled through narrow, graphic-strewn streets seeking comparative safety in the public parks.

Hundreds Crushed

Great blocks of stone crashed down upon the fleeing hundreds, bringing death to many. Others were trapped in the lower parts of their homes and in doorways, unable to extricate their bodies to safety.

Within an hour the devastated area was under military control and strica forces of soldiery barracked in the streets to prevent looting and to prevent pillage and assist in rescue work.

Hundreds of persons were quickly exhausted. The emergency hospital with ample accommodations for 200, was quickly filled with the more serious injured and their care to safety.

Pitallsation was provided in other buildings for convalescents.

Practically every home in the city suffered damage, many persons remaining fleeing to the open in their night clothing. Hundreds of families formed tent-like groups in the small parks which are scattered throughout the city.

Holds Emptied

The Venus and Cuba Grande' hotels facing the Central Square were emptied of guests soon after safety in the square. Huge blocks of stone crashed down from the roof of the ancient cathedral facing the third side of the terrace paved square and into the midst of the huddled masses.

Scores of the injured and dying added to the confusion. The water plant was one of the public buildings partially razed by the shock, thereby cutting off the city's water supply.

Ambulance and morgue cars moved with difficulty through the littered streets, picking up the dead and injured.

Frantic efforts to communicate with Havana were fruitless as all lines between the eastern and western sections of the island were shut down.

Despatches from the yacht Kenilworth finally brought the news to Havana and government officials ordered every available rush aid to the stricken Oriente city.

Earthquake Hits Old City

Word was received here that planes loaded with medical supplies, physicians, army and government officials and staff members took off at dawn from Havana aircraft and expected to reach here shortly after mid-day.

Fire broke out in several parts of the city during the shock but because of the water failure could not be controlled.

A number of those killed and injured were also reported in the small cells in the municipal prison, unable to escape when the massive stone walls characteristic of the city crumbled about them.

Passengers arriving to some parts of the prison were blocked by debris making immediate attempts to transfer the trapped men impossible.

Fear of the approaching severe earthquake may have been destructive, said only minor damage had been reported in the region but serious property damage.

Communication had not been established early today with Osimani, Miami, Fla., Feb. 3—Matinas says, an unidentified newspaper correspondent. told the Associated Press that the earthquake at Santiago there took a toll of 100 lives.

Havana, Feb. 3—(AP)—Reports from Guantanamo, where it had been felt at 4.30 this morning, severe earthquake may have been destructive, said only minor damage had been reported in the region but serious property damage.

Picturesquely nestled in an amphitheatre of hills in the east part of Santiago is the second most important city of the republic of Cuba. It is situated on the southern coast of the eastern end of the island. Its population in 1929 numbered about 70,000.

Many Quakes

The city has suffered greatly from earthquakes in the past. Records show severe tremors in 1678, 1766 and 1852. Large fires have promptly undertook rehabilitation after each of the previous earthshocks and the city had been extensively rebuilt. Most of the homes are one-story dwellings.

Streets, the water supply and other public utilities in the city have also been greatly improved since the end of colonial rule. One of the outstanding structures in the city is a modern hotel, the Imperial, recently built by the American military gov-outside interference.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 3.—An earthquake of moderate intensity was registered at the Dominion Observatory here this morning. The first preliminary record indicated at 1.31.30 a.m. E. S. T. The distance to the centre of the disturbance was 1,700 miles. The time at the origin was 1.15.57 a.m. E. S. T. The record continued for three and a half hours.

Foreign Minister Yoshizawa's visit to the aged Prince Saionji was to discuss with the latter the gravity with which the government views the situation, and to obtain the latter's aid and is consulted only on matters vitally affecting the welfare of the empire.

Japanese Stand

Unofficially the Japanese attitude toward the proposals was summed up thus:

1. Cessation of acts of violence is acceptable provided the Chinese also agree.

2. A pledge to refrain from preparation for further hostilities may be made if the Chinese government of China's sincerity in making a similar pledge.

3. Withdrawal of Japanese Bluejackets from points where there is a Japanese position is not acceptable unless the Chinese withdraw to a safe distance.

4. Establishment of a neutral zone is acceptable but perhaps Japan may accept a permanent agreement by which Chinese troops be allowed in the Chinese section and police of Shanghai's International Settlement. The agreement would be similar to the Tientsin Boxer Protocol.

5. It is impossible for Japan to agree to any proposal providing for participation of any third power in the negotiations with China due to the fact the Manchurian controversy is concerned.

Encouraging China?

Today's newspapers, reflecting a feeling prevalent among the people of the great powers, asserted that Japan's position was "encouraging China and discouraging Japan, but expressed hope it would be resolved."

The newspaper Hochi said the foreign proposals are based on "leisure room theories" and referred to the "secret agreement between Great Britain and the United States." Other newspapers warned the powers that it was a mistake to treat Japan "as a child" and that an orderly, responsible nation."

Japan Rejects Wilbur Peace

Tokyo, Fri., 3 (AP)—Japan is unofficially opposed to any proposal for neutral observers in negotiations regarding Manchuria, Kenkichi Oshima, foreign minister, said tonight after consulting Prince Kimmochi Saionji, elder statesman.

Tomorrow, he said, he will present to the diplomatic and consular envoys of the powers participating in proposals for a truce in Sino-Japanese conflict a reply which will be in the form of a series of counter-proposals, including a proposal of certain points which Japan finds unacceptable.

The foreign minister talked for two hours with the 84-year-old Prince whose advice always is sought when the Empire's vital interests are involved, and as soon as he got back he went into conference with Premier Inukai. Later he announced he could not say whether a special cabinet meeting would be necessary to draft a reply to the powers' proposals.

Conference Adjourns

Berlin, Feb. 3 (AP)—Foreign office circles intimated today that the German government has instructed Foreign Minister Curtius to visit premier at Nanking to make verbal representations in the name of Germany and Chinese governments in the interests of a peaceful solution of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

The instructions, it was sent, it was indicated, after the government received a report of the views from the German delegation at the Disarmament Conference at Geneva.

The instructions, it was understood, call for careful avoidance of anything interpretable as pressure, but asked the diplomats to convey Germany's sincere wish that hostilities cease in the Far East, that Japanese forces withdraw from Shanghai and that the two nations agree to meet for peaceful negotiations to settle their disputes. These suggestions compare closely with the wishes expressed by the other league powers.

German Veteran Tells of Humorous Scene in Gun-Pit

Guest at Hostelry Relates Story of Heroic Machine-Gunner

HIS "MAD" ACT

Ernie Bartells fought the Canadian army at Ypres, at Poperinghe, on the Somme and all the rest of the fronts the Canadians battered.

Everywhere the Canadians went Ernie was sure to go. But out of all the armies he had fought against while he was in the crack 8th Bavarian Landsturm regiment as a buck private he had only one kick to make. The Canadians were fine —they fought like gentlemen, but Lord deliver him from any future war contract with any battalion of Canadian infantry with the 22nd numerals on their shoulder badges. They were the greatest fighters of the lot. They didn't give a darn for the devil or high water—and they let "Fritzie" know that every time they fought him.

Writes Home To Germany

Ernie laid aside the pencil he had been using last night to write a letter home to his mother back in Germany. He was telling her about the late war which still keeps popping up every year in secret-service get together. He sat in the dugout on Front street and gave some sidelights on that war that were illuminating, coming from a man who took pride in his Excellency's track regiment, and he spoke in the best of English, considering the fact that he had been over here only ten years and was a stranger to the language when he landed here. But life in the lumber camps up in the northern parts of Oregon have strengthened his vocabulary and added some of the choicest slang that roll freely from his lips. Now he's out of work and boiling his own way. Just another one of the "zany war heroes" with a first class love across he doesn't know what to do with—urge to travel and a sense of humor. But to the story-teller he was supreme.

What is War

According to Ernie the war wasn't what a lot of people thought it to be, but a lot of funny little incidents still stand out firmly in his mind. "They were the things that took the sting out of the mud and the cooties and the frightening shelling that nearly drove the men insane at times," he explained. "I would be sprawled on bench and grinned at from out of the mud by the head and some of the high lights. "Even the "Twenty Second" gave us a big kick now and then when we had the time to be amused by them. You know? be relaxed, you could hear those fellows coming for miles back of their lines and while I couldn't speak English at the time, we always had some one in the outfit who could understand everything that you fellows said. One night in particular I can still remember as clearly as if it were yesterday—we were having a real good time one place near the old Sugar Refinery—that was down on the Somme, I think—we never tired down there when we knew who it was coming in because we knew we were in for trouble and wrangle with each other all we had the moment. That night it seemed that the nation party had come to visit. It was customary for them to do it that way I guess because some of the men were collected in the same spot and their voices for the men ahead of them, the ration party, to wait. There was a fog of rum in that air, incidents of raisins. And the rations party behind were pretty thirsty. They had been out on leave, and if your men ever seemed in the nature of our men, they needed a shot at about that time to get straightened away with. Anyhow there was a lot of yelling about it even in the trenches at this point were only about fifty yards apart. Some of the more cautious ones were less noisy and entreating the others to quiet-en down, but the most of them gave their opinions of "Fritzie" in very strong terms—and they were not very complimentary at that", Ernie stopped and grinned over what was coming and then proceeded to man-ufacture a cigaret out of some tobacco the reporter handed him.

Tells Story

"Well," he continued after he had lit the cigaret and got it going, "there just happened to be one of the mounds (he was an officer) on an inspection of the line that night and the mound we had to "protect" and rip off a few rounds in their general direction just to keep the officer going. Do you know what happened then that typewriter looked off like a bell? The man carrying the rum jar ducked for cover, fell over his rifle, I guess, and smashed the jar. And boy, what a racket the men behind him made when they came up to him and found out what had happened. They had figured on having a little drink the next morning with that, but there wasn't any drink for them. Whether or not they killed the man who carried it never found out. But there was such a roaring in that trench they occupied that could be heard for miles and they kept it up at night. The next morning they gave us a raid; the next night we got another one, and from then on we had a raid almost every night; it was so that we became sick and tired of seeing those "Frenchies" come on us and just jump in the trench before we knew it. Then there would be a big row—what do you call it—wire cleaning, in our trench and they would be back and we could get collected. It was great fun."

Then there was another time we staged a raid. It was more of an attack than a raid, and our orders were to get a few prisoners if we could. You fellows were up to something and headquarters wanted to know what it was—about in the enemy's way.

"Well, that morning at dawn we went over, after a preliminary barrage from our lines that lasted though we faced a pretty heavy fire from machine guns and rifle guns, we managed to get almost to the first line trench with great interest throughout the country. Dr. Elmo of Budapest, Hungary, Minor of New York and Dr. Bowers of Paris have his him. Marking the place where it had been we ran towards it and poised on the parapet, of the trench and then jumped into it. I was first, and I landed on the fire step ready to ready to give it to him if he happened to be still alive. But when I looked into the pit, there he was with parts of the machine gun in his hands, trying to put them thing together—it had jammed, you know how machine guns do sometimes. Like something I had never heard before or since, he was making a whistling noise through the teeth, I could almost hear the whistling myself and when I ordered him to throw up his hands he merely looked at me and kept on. I had to order him again and went on fixing the gun. Then he began to curse me and swing around on him, and even though I was within hange was breaking around us he paid no more attention to us than he would if he were in a peace time barber shop. Something had to be done so I grabbed the machine gun out of him and tickled him a little with the butt of my rifle. He then began a counter attack and we wanted to get away again as soon as we could. We managed to get a point of the blade against him he straightened up, threw the parts of the gun down and sideways, threw the parts of the machine gun in the mud, picked up the rest of the machine gun after them, and then he picked up his own rifle which he unbuckled and also hurled it sideways into the mud. I began to make double sure that the Lewis gun was in working order and he wouldn't bother him any more, he jumped on them with his feet, still swearing and cursing at me and us. Then he whipped out a package of cigarets, passed them around and told us all to go to—once more. Something came over me and I spoke with us he went peaceably enough and gave us no more trouble. It reached the point where we had to call the headquarters staff wouldn't find much out from it. I think that was about the funniest thing I ever had to do and while it was not bound out of dry as I tell it to you now it made the whole regiment laugh when we got back and told them about it."

"Towards the end of the war the German army were pretty well worn out, Ernie stated, and there was a great scarcity of food. What bread they had was at least half saw-dust, and other supplies enjoyed about the same proportion of substitute. When the great attack made by the Allies finally started they knew then that the Fatherland had seen its day, communism was as rampant in those days immediately following that the whole country was in a turmoil, and even the soldiers who had fought so many weary years for the country were not allowed to talk about it. The German army still owns one plane months pay than I never got on my discharge, but I never will now, I had three other brothers killed, and my father was seriously crippled by machine gun fire in Argonne Woods, but he has to work just the same as any other man. This is a wonderful country you have here compared with the Old Land in Germany, and even this travelling about I have to do is not as bad as it would be over there. Yes, that war was an awful thing but now it seems that there is another one coming which will be worse yet. And I can tell you right now that there will be lots of material for the army if they started tomorrow. Maybe I'd be strong enough to join up again myself."

AUTOS SLIDE OFF HIGHWAY

Slippery Conditions Are Sequel to Snowfall

Heavy snow, packed and polished by the busy wheels of numerous motor cars turned the highways of the county, the highways and all connecting roads, into a glassy surface last evening that made traffic perilous in some spots, risky in more and almost impossible in other places.

On the intersections in the city a great deal of skidding was observed and several near accidents almost resulted. Cars not equipped with chains or other anti skid devices were nearly helpless as the wheels spun and rolled in all directions.

On the highways caution was absolutely necessary for safe driving and normal speed were greatly reduced owing to the fact that the shoulders of the road, as well as the centre were slippery and wet. On No. 2 highway especially a few cars did slide off the road entirely but no damage has been reported and passing motorists, rendered aid to the unfortunate ones by means of a tow rope. One truck found itself in difficulties near the Belleville Cemetery, having slid into the ditch but a call into a Belleville garage brought a tow car and the machine was soon back on the road.

Difficulties also in the city walked warily and while sand had been distributed freely on the more level walks, it was soon ground into snow and the logs were as slippery as ever.

Duck Starts to Lay Eggs Early

Chickens may occasionally get flighty and start laying before all of lasting records in the matter of size but the eggs are pretty small as a rule. Columns have been devoted to their extraordinary size and there is often graced the front pages of many a metropolitan newspapers, but the fact is that the hen is the hen's humble way—quiet, unobtrusive and home-stick-laying creature that these layers They were a negligible quantity. As a rule the Sunday dinner they were supreme, and such personal mention as they might get was done by the cook who served up that effect.

However, there is one duck who evidently believes that ducks, on the whole, have been overlooked long enough. This fluck has set out for a little-step-laying career that threatens to knock all records formerly held by the highflying hen into the well known cocked hat. For the past days in succession now she has presented Harry Payne, 15 Hanna street, with a nice fresh white egg and his guess was correct when he waddled away from the nest. With a little encouragement this duck will probably be able to get her duck on the ducks' part to emulate a machine and has that it is a good natured duck and has a disposition to end this depres'on. Perhaps the duck is the exception that proves the proverb: "The early bird gets the worm".

REDUCE MEMBERS

Toronto, Feb. 3—An amendment to the Ontario Medical Act whereby the number of representatives on the Council of Physicians would be reduced from 35 to 15 will be asked of the Provincial Government by the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons at the forthcoming session of the Legislature, it was learned yesterday.

Five Points of Peace Plan

The Anglo-American peace plan, submitted to Japan and China, offers a basis for solution of the entire Far Eastern dispute.

It would be made to include negotiation of the Manchurian problem.

The plan contains five points, as follows:

1—Cessation of all acts of violence by both sides forthwith.

2—No further mobilization or preparation whatever for further hostilities between the two nations.

3—Withdrawal of both Japanese and Chinese combatants from all points of mutual contact in the Shanghai area.

4—Protection of the international settlement by the establishment of neutral zones to divide the combatants; these zones to be policed by neutrals; the arrangements to be set up by the consular authorities.

5—Upon acceptance of these conditions prompt advance to be made by conciliatory steps in the controversies between the two nations in the spirit of the Pact of Paris and the resolution of the League of Nations of December 9, providing an investigating commission without prior demand or reservation and with the aid of neutral observers or participants.

Injects Poison Instead of Vaccine Family Wiped Out

Highbridge, N.J., Feb. 3—Dr. Frederick C. Low made his great decision on Saturday night. He gave his family into the ring-room of their house on the outskirts of Highbridge.

"We must all have an injection of typhoid vaccine," he said.

The doctor's son, Fred Jr., whom he had summoned from the Newark Seminary for the "treatment," was present, with his wife and their five year old daughter. Dr. Low had them bare their arms. Then, one by one, he injected the hypodermic needle into their veins. Finally he administered to himself.

Throughout Sunday there was no sign of life at the Low home. Tuesday the telephone operator heard the babbling of an unintelligible voice, and gave the alarm.

Two men forced their way thru' the door. The latter found Fred, Jr., groping blindly at a window. In the couch in the sitting room lay the body of the 64 year old physician. Mrs. Low and the hypodermic needle containing a few drops of typhoid vaccine. Upstairs in bed were the bodies of mother and daughter. Young Fred was taken to the hospital where, regaining his senses, he told of his aging father's explosive act, and of the injections. He has a good chance for recovery.

MAYOR WELCH IS RE-ELECTED

Heads Horticultural Society For The Coming Year

PICTON, Ont. Feb. 3.—(Special)—The annual meeting of the Picton Horticultural Society was held last night in the office of the Representative to the County Council, Mr. W. H. Culture with a fair attendance. Plans for 1932 were discussed and it was decided to continue the flower boxes and flower beds in different parts of the town. These boxes of plants and flowers and the flower beds add much to the appearance of the town and are greatly appreciated by townspeople.

Mayor Gordon Welch was re-elected as President, Mr. S. G. Lockey as Secretary-Treasurer and Mr. W. B. Blakely as second vice-president. Mr. J. L. Grayden is also a member and Mr. Fred Newman will be Honorary Auditor.

TRAWLER BELIEVED LOST

Boston, Mass., Feb. 2.—The coast guard cutter Mojave today continued a search of the waters off Georges Banks for the fishing trawler Patrick J. O'Hara which reported rudder trouble Sunday. No trace of the trawler was found at the position, 250 miles off Boston, from which the call for assistance was sent.

The per capita income of Czechoslovakia during 1931 did not exceed $125.

FIVE BUSINESS PLACES BURN

Village of Summertown Near Cornwall, Nearly Wiped Out

Cornwall, Ont., Feb. 3 (CP) Loss estimated at $30,000 was caused by fire which razed the village of Summertown Station, 12 miles south of here, in the township of Finch. A general store, a blacksmith shop and a garage were all destroyed and a fourth dwelling was badly damaged.

Wind Change Helped

A change of wind coming at a crucial moment saved a large section of the village from destruction. Only the villagers would have been helpless to combat a further spread of the flames. Volunteers forming a bucket brigade, had quickly emptied wells and cisterns during the early stages of the conflagration and were at the limit of their resources when the wind veered to west and carried burning embers away from the village.

The fire was first noticed breaking through the roof of a small frame house occupied by W. Porter. The village blacksmith, before a sufficient number of volunteers had gathered, the flames had spread to buildings off each side of the Porter dwelling. At the time, a veritable blizzard was raging, with a strong wind blowing from the north west. Within an hour, three buildings were burning fiercely and a fourth had caught fire.

A call was sent in to the Cornwall fire department but Chief Geo J. Hunter decided that it would be useless to send the motor truck to the stage, as there was no water supply in the vicinity.

Cook, also owner of one of the largest general stores in Glengarry County and the heaviest loser. His stock, conservatively estimated at $20,000, consisted of groceries, hardware, drygoods, grain and small-ware. Mrs. Charles Cerneau was the owner of the three other buildings destroyed. Her loss is placed at about $5,000 with partial insurance.

At The Belle

A BIG LAUGH IN "PRIVATE LIVES"

Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery, co-starring in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's glamorously amusing adaptation of Noel Coward's celebrated New York stage success, "Private Lives," at the Belle Today and Thursday, unstree daily.

"Private Lives" you find two ingratiating players excellently cast as an ex-married couple who, on their second respective honeymoons with a new husband and a new wife, come face to face with each other at the same hotel. Unfortunately, Bob and Norma are thrown into open park. Each tries to prevent the bird and her new partner their escape to Paris in the only way can. But Norma's husband refuses to budge, and Bob's wife insists on remaining with him where she is.

So Norma and Bob get together to talk it over and discover during their talk that they are still very much in love with each other. Later their first moment of surprise these two, very solemnly, decide to run away with each other in the second honeymoon. And they do, leaving the brand new husband and a brand new wife in the lurch.

There's a fascinating romance developed with keen humor in "Private Lives"; a situation which is handled delightfully by the fact that Norma and Bob love each other but cannot seem to can't keep from quarreling. Needless to say here is a comedy-romance seldomly handled, so deliciously enacted that "Private Lives" emerges as the screen's outstanding entertainment event of the new year.

Miss Shearer's performance reveals her first husband on her second honeymoon. Miss Shearer steps out with the best performance of her career to date and with full recognition of Miss Shearer's splendid work, Robert Montgomery as her husband-lover-partner is disarmingly gay in a role made to order for his debonair talents. Reginald Denny as the ultra-British second husband and Una Merkel as the deserted bride, also do very fine work in the interpreted roles.

Fred Sterling in a highly amusing comedy, "It ought to be a Crime," Metro Sound News, and a Silver Vaudeville filled, Fitch Cuddle, are announced for presentation on the same program.

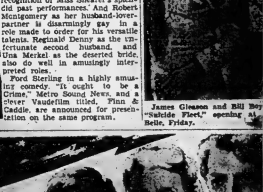
SETH PARKER NOW AT THE CAPITOL

Seth Parker and the Jones' neighbours arrive in Belleville today, congregated in the most humorous picture of the year at the Capitol. The title "Way Back Home" suggests simplicity and simplicity is appealing.



The story of "Way Back Home" exploits the creed of "forgive and sinner" in a most interesting and amusing way; a way we all associate with the radio personality of Seth Parker.

Owing to the magnetic power of this picture, persons are advised to attend the daily matinees when possible. These matinees commence daily at 1:45 p.m. and the last programme is preceded by Pathe news' reels.

Seth Parker remains at the Capitol for three days only, so those who have not decided to do so, now to it.

Comedy, carton and interest are included in the programme.

The lightship Savannah, Charleston, S.C., uses a gallon of water for every blast of its horn.

James Gleason and Bill Boyd in "Blessed Event," opening at Belle, Friday.

Seth Parker and his Jonesport folks, 'Lije', 'Cephus,' 'Ma' and 'Cap' as they appear on the Capitol theatre in 'Way Back Home.'

Sauce for the Gander

by Charles Sloan Reid

All arrangements has been made for the gander-pulling at Tarver Mill. This was an annual event for the folks of the Scratchmountain section. The day had been set for the fourth Saturday in October; and the excitement of the day was looked forward to with keen interest. The mountaineers, as a rule, were not expert bare-back riders; but some of them were sufficiently skilled in clinging to their mounts, to make the contest very close in many instances. In the meantime the process which enlisted the efforts of the men was the part on the gander.

Ike Moore was a young giant of the mountains. He stood six-feet-two in his bare feet, and tipped the scale beam at one hundred and eighty. His broad shoulders were set squarely with the world. A fine face appears under the thick of red cloth hair which adorned his head. His appearance was a veritable young god in the rough. He seemed at once when was safely beyond the say; encounter; and there were few who might hopefully contend with him in any event, and none would willingly oppose him in a physical encounter.

He was in love. The object of his fervid affections was one Molly Thatcher, brown-eyed school teacher who was in charge of the settlement school over on Chestnut Ridge. Molly Thatcher had come from somewhere down State, and a short while ago had ambered upon her second year as teacher for the community. She had come to this section for pure love of the mountains, preferring life in the backwoods school to more lucrative employment in some small-town high school. There was a threesomeness about Molly which had captivated Ike Moore wholeheartedly, and there was nothing less than murder he would not have done for her. He was a dull fellow as far as books go; but he had mastered school as a pupil in reading writing and arithmetic, a mere juvenile in his studies, although already he had counted off his twenty-five summers.

He was one of the few young fellows of the mountains who owned a horse. Generously he had promised the use of his mare to several of the men who were going to take part in the gander-pulling; so it was understood there would be enough critters to make the event satisfactory for miles around. The gander had been secured, a large, fat bird; and everything was in order for the day's contest.

Ike was on his way to Bart Simpson's early in the morning to invite Molly Thatcher to the pulling. Molly boarded at Simpson's place across the ridge from Tarver's Mill. "Ike," he muttered to himself, "reckon yuh'm a plum' fool to be a thinkin' about that gal the way yuh do; but I don't see as how yuh could help it, of yuh hear me? Purty as a picter of a pink angel, by heck! that's what she is—an' sweet as a pot o' molasses come off I know anything about plum' saggy sweetness."

The squirrels were cracking nuts in the tall chestnut trees, and there was a constant little chatter going on amongst them, as they chased one another about the limbs and trunks. Occasionally the remnants of a nut would drop upon the trail as Ike's mare, the young mountaineer looked up through the thick branches.

"Ort to it, yuh feelin' romantic," he shouted; "I reckon yuh mus' be plum' fond hardy. Wish I could be that way—an' I reckon I could, effen" Suddenly he closed his lips with a snap, holding them firmly together, while he shook his head. He was a little wide of possibly ten minutes over the ridge to Simpson's, and the soon had reached the vicinity of the house. Coming into view of the little yard, a pretty scene presented itself to his gaze.

Thatcher was sitting under the branches of a tree in the front yard of the little clearing surrounding the cabin, with her head held back in her hand, but evidently had not been reading a book as attention seemed directed toward the deep woods beyond. She stopped to enjoy the tableau for a brief moment.

"Smart," he soliloquized—"smart as an ol' bug full o' lawyers."

On down the trail he presently strode, until he had come within a three feet of the young school teacher. So much absorbed was she in her thought that she failed to hear Ike's approach. When he spoke, she started to her feet with a little startled exclamation, but with that pleasant greeting with which she always had welcomed Ike so graciously, and which seemed to tell him that in spite of his doubts and fears she really was glad to see him.

"I am so glad you came, Ike," she said. "And now I will have to make a little confession—I had been thinking about you, about that day last fall, when we all went hunting; and you gathered an many for me."

He was embarrassed by a moment. Then he declared: "I reckon I'm proud to know that you was thinkin' o' me, Miss Molly—I shore am." He came over. Miss Molly" he went on a moment later, "to—to invite yuh to the gander-pulling over at Tarver's Mill to-day?"

"Gander-pulling, Ike? What is a gander-pulling?"

"Lord, ain't yuh ever heard of a gander-pullin'?"

Molly shook her head.

Suddenly, in the presence of Molly Thatcher, Ike Moore experienced a strange inward illumination. He could not understand altogether why; but gander-pulling seemed to be a part of the tinsel-world. He never had thought of it in that way before; and he fell overpowering shame. "I—I—maybe yuh wouldn't like it, Miss Molly," he stammered. "But—I—I jest wanted to in yile yuh."

"Oh, yes, Ike; I should really like to go," she exclaimed quickly. "But tell me about it first?"

Ike hesitated. He would rather have taken a beating. "Why—er—it's like this. The gander is tied to a pole, an' hits neck is greased. The fellers ride by an grab at his head, an'—an'—an' try to pull it off, you know?"

"A live gander, Ike?" Molly Thatcher advanced a step toward the big mountaineer. Then she looked up into his eyes, searchingly.

"Yeah. Yuh see—"

"Oh, Ike!" Molly's exclamation was almost a wail, and tears came to her eyes. She staggered backward and sat down upon the log, the tears burying her face in her hands. "Oh, Ike—Ike," she moaned; "I never heard of anything so cruel!"

It was sometime before Ike found his voice again. Then he blurted out: "Lord, Miss Molly; hits common to wring a gander's neck to kill him when yuh're going to eat him. But I reckon yuh're right about hit bein' awful cruel to be wringing hit jest for fun, I— I never thought about it that way."

The mountain youth suddenly whacked about, and strode off up the mountain. Presently he came out upon a little plateau at Tarver's Mill. A crowd had gathered. A large gander had been tied at the edge of a racing circle. Several horses were tethered about the circle. Evidently the event had been awaiting a leader. Ike Moore looked neither to the right nor the left, but strode across the little clearing and directly to the pole. With the sweep of an open knife which he held in his hand, he cut the cord which bound the goose, releasing it from its leash.

"Ike, what in—" I someone shouted.

"Fer ain't goin't to be no gander pullin' here today," he cried; "not no other day, as long as there 'ere mountains a-stall, an' Ike Moore's a livin'!"

With a powerful wrench he dragged the pole out of the ground. Then, turning about, he was about to retrace his steps to the head of the trail, when his gaze encountered Molly Thatcher, only a few feet away, coming up into the clearing breathlessly.

"Oh, Ike!" she exclaimed; and then were both laughter and tears in her voice.

Running forward she laid her hand upon his shoulder, burying her tear-stained face against his breast.

"Lord, fellers," whispered Dave Monument, "what d'yuh know about that, hee?"

CORP. BURSTALL BURNED TO DEATH

Shack at Stoney Rapids Catches Fire By Unknown Origin

EDMONTON, Feb. 2.—Corporal E. B. Burstall, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was burned to death on Jan. 22, when his living quarters at Stoney Rapids, Sask., were destroyed by fire. Word of the tragedy reached Edmonton yesterday.

The official police message, which travelled by wires from Stoney Rapids to McMurray, Alta., was brief. It stated only that in some manner the Corporal's living quarters took fire and that he was burned to death in the blaze.

Corporal Burstall was in charge at the post. His next-of-kin resides at Ottawa.

MR. AND MRS. — ANOTHER OF BOYWOOD'S ILLUSIONS IS SHATTERED—

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN, No. 29.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)—By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Over the mad din, Rokoff continued to hurl taunts at his enemy. "You think your wits safe in that head?" he cried. "Even now she is in the very jungle." Then he enlarged upon the horrors of the future life of Tarzan's son and intimated what was to be the fate of the latter's wife. His taunts stung the helpless ape-man. Suppose, after all, Rokoff's words were true! The frenzied dancers leaped closer to their victim.

Then to Tarzan's memory came a similar scene in which he had rescued d'Arnot from a like predicament at the last moment before the final sword thrust was to end his suffering. Who was there now to rescue him? Not one in all the world could save him from his torturers save those human fiends, the ape-man longed for the last savage lunge that would finish his misery.

It would not be long now, he thought. And then, perhaps in the mazes of the weird jungle, rose a thrill scream. For an instant the dancers paused, and in that silence there rose from the lips of the fast-bound white man an answering scream of fearsome and more terrible than that of the jungle beast that had roused it. For several minutes the black hesitated.

Then urged on by their chief and Rokoff, they leaped to finish the dance and their victim. But ere ever another spear touched Tarzan, a tawny streak of green-eyed hate and ferocity bound from the darkness, and Sheeta, the panther, stood searching beside his master. The blacks and the whites stood transfixed with terror, and only Tarzan of the Apes saw what else there was emerging from the shadows.

TWEED LIBRARY HAS GOOD YEAR

Mrs. T. E. Moffat is Named President of Board For 1932

On Saturday evening, January 30, the annual meeting of Tweed Public Library was held in the Library Room.

After the records of the last annual meeting and the last regular meeting were read and approved, the Chairman called for the report of the Treasurer. The receipts for 1931 included a municipal grant of $150 a legislative grant of $60.60 and membership fees amounting to $135.70. These amounts, together with a balance carried over from 1930, gave a total of $400.80 received during 1931.

During the year one hundred and two volumes were added to the library. Of this number, seventy-six volumes were purchased, and eleven-six volumes were donated. The value of books donated was $131.34. Total expenditures for 1931 were $262.79 leaving a balance on hand of $22.07.

On reading the Treasurer's report was approved.

The Librarian, Mrs. E. Paterson reported a considerable increase in the number of books borrowed by subscribers during the year. This was evidently due to the increase in the number of juvenile readers, as the number of adult readers had decreased lightly from the previous year.

The total patronage of the Library was 8134 volumes borrowed, made up of 1820 magazines 1530 juvenile fiction, 1430 adult class books and 5794 adult fiction. The large number of books of fiction borrowed in comparison with the number of books of a more instructive nature; such as, general literature, science, biography and other classes, is to be regretted, but in this respect the year 1931 shows an improvement over some previous years.

The Librarian also makes it possible for its patrons to read the best of the current magazines. Among the magazines purchased are The National Geographic, Saturday Evening Post, Good Housekeeping (2 copies), Chatelaine, Canadian Mclleans (2 copies), Friends of the Library have donated The Ladies Home Journal, The Woman's Home Companion and Forest and Outdoors (4 copies).

With this splendid list of magazines and a library of 3629 volumes, the reading public is kept well supplied with good reading matter.

Following the receiving of these reports the annual election of officers was proceeded with.

The personnel of the Library Board for 1932 is as follows:

President—Mrs. T. E. Moffat.

Vice President—Mrs. P. T. Bawly.

Treasurer—Mr. W. E. Bruckman.

Secretary—Mr. S. H. Connor.

Executive—Mrs. A. C. Locke, Mrs. J. A. Sager, Mrs. T. E. Moffat, Mr. D. H. Moorison, Mr. A. W. McGuire, Mr. W. S. Gordan, Mr. J. D. Corcoran, Mr. F. Hindle.

Librarian—Mrs. E. Paterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Redner were at home to several of their friends on Tuesday night.

Mr. Keith Redner and Miss Winifred Fox were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hefner, Sunday evening.

Mrs. Willie Fox spent the week end with her aunt, Mrs. Alsina Fox of Wellington.

MAY TAKE OVER BEAUHARNOIS

Vesting of Canal in The Crown Predicted at Ottawa

Ottawa, Feb. 3—The Speech from the Throne, it is understood, was under consideration in the Cabinet Council late last night. Drafting of the speech, it is learned, was one of the chief matters occupying the attention of members of the government.

The Beauharnois project was discussed at yesterday's sitting. It is understood, little doubt exists that the Dominion intends to take over the canal and vest it in the Crown. The contract, it is intimated, will be given the right to its power house, provided the latter is necessary to its operation as a hydro-electric enterprise under the lease which it has with the Province of Quebec.

This subject was also before cabinet yesterday, and there is every reason to believe that an announcement will be made shortly of the personnel of the new directorate, the change in the financial structure of the company by reason of the return of stock by certain parties who had been connected with the enterprise and the conditions attached to the new sanction for proceeding with the enterprise. Work on the project has been continuing.

The opening of negotiations between Canada and the United States for the carrying out of the St. Lawrence waterways project will probably be mentioned in the Throne Speech. These negotiations appear to be progressing at a very good pace and the signs portend that a treaty will be completed for submission to the Canadian Parliament at the Congress in about two months time.

ST. LAWRENCE NEGOTIATIONS CARRIED ON

Cost of Towels, Grant to Basketball, Chief Items at Bd. Meeting

Inaugural Meeting of Board of Education Lively Affair

GRANT CUT

Girls Given $100 to Carry on Basketball Schedule

With the report of the Principal, P. C. MacIntosh, regarding the scarcity of paper towels which were used by the students and the difficulty in having some steady supply in amounts needed, Mr. Geo. Cox from immediately took exception especially to the statement that there had been a hold-up in the supply, or that the towels were being ordered by the students.

Standing Order

"Some are always bought in quantities of five or six," he declared. "I find a standing order is held in the offices of the National Grocers Company; when a requisition is sent in by the janitor immediately telephone the company and the towels are delivered at once. I believe that these paper towels are being used as combustibles in the machine shops and vocational department. I don't believe that paper towels are needed. No other machine shop or factory has any. I don't like it if the men's hands are dirty they use a rag." I believe we should start that cheap paper towels, as you all know, cost money somewhere in the neighborhood of six or seven hundred dollars a year. That is a big expense, gentlemen, and I think something should be done about the matter," he declared.

Cost Enormous Says Allin

Mr. Allin:—"I had a citizen stop me on the street the other day and tell me that he heard it cost the Board something like fifty dollars per month for those towels, also that he had heard they were towels that had been made in America. Does Mr. Ostrom know anything about that?"

Mr. Allin must have got that information from some paper manufacturing company. Certainly they are not made in the United States," said Mr. Ostrom.

William Harvey:—"I am also of the opinion that if the towels are used in the chemistry room and the rate they should be discontinued."

Principal MacIntosh asked to address the Board at this point, and explained that the towels were not used so largely by the vocational department, if they happened to share you ladies and gentlemen, that if each student of the school could only use towel per day then the number to be counted would be considerable astonishment. The letter I wrote this Board was not meant as any reflection on the chairman or any supplies committee. I would welcome suggestions or criticisms on this matter as the pupils do become disappointed if they have their wet hands and then cannot find any thing to dry on this subject."

Dr. MacTavish told the Board of one young student who must suddenly have had wet hands

NAVAL CHIEF ENDS HIS LIFE

Japan Denies Report But General Belief at Shanghai

London, Feb. 4—A Reuters News Agency despatch from Shanghai today said an unconfirmed report there said Admiral Shiosawa, Japanese naval commander, had committed suicide.

The report was officially denied, but it was widely believed at Shanghai, the despatch said, because of numerous notable precedents in Japanese history.

Students of Japanese psychology said the admiral would be forced to consider himself a failure because of what he needed I imitate, and one of the two planes owned by that company that went through the ice the local bay front yesterday when attempting to land. The first plane to go through the ice yesterday has gone to the bottom in nearly 100 feet of water and it is not likely any attempt will be made to salvage it.

Bus Sideswipes Truck Killing One

Bradford, Ont., Feb. 4. — One man was killed, a girl was sent to a hospital and eight others suffered lesser injuries early today when a bus sideswiped a truck and plunged from the highway.

Sergt. Victor McDonald, 40, of Port H. G. Wright, was killed. Miss Virginia Lee, 21, of Boston, was taken to a hospital suffering from an injury to the back. Eight others were treated at the scene and continued their trip in another bus.

CANADA WINS OPENING GAME

Vic Lindquist Scores Winning Goal in Overtime

Olympic Stadium, Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Canada defeated the United States two goals to one today in the first game of the Olympic hockey series, in an overtime engagement.

Vic Lindquist, Winnipeg forward, slipped a fast shot past Frank Parker, in the third minute of the extra stanza, as you all know, cost the Board something in the neighborhood of six or seven hundred dollars a year. That is a big expense, gentlemen, and I think something should be done about the matter," he declared.

For all but two minutes of the regulation period, which the United States threatened to stage the first major upset of the competition, leading 1 to 0 through Doug Everett's single-handed scoring dash in the second period.

Sleepers Talked Every

But with only a minute and fifty seconds to go Hack Simpson, crack Winnipeg defenseman, brought in on a fine angle shot to tie the score.

The game was hard and fast, the ice of a fine quality and the two twelve contests bringing together Canada, United States, Poland and Germany.

The line-up:

Officials—Lou Marsh, Toronto, referee; Ferdinand Sands, United States.

First Period

No scoring.
No penalties.

Second Period

U. S.—Everett 4:41

One Plane Will Not Be Salvaged at Barrie

Barrie, Feb. 4.—Royal Canadian Air Force salvagers from Camp Borden have been partially successful today in raising the moth "plane owned by Ferguson Bros., of Belleville, and one of the two planes owned by that company that went through the ice on the local bay front yesterday when attempting to land. The first plane to go through the ice yesterday has gone to the bottom in nearly 100 feet of water and it is not likely any attempt will be made to salvage it.

A. R. SCHRYVER IS ELECTED TO CHAIRMANSHIP

Board Choose Trustee to Occupy Chair For 1932

NAME COMMITTEES

Mr. John Elliott is Finance Chairman of Bd. of Education

In the inaugural meeting held by the Board of Education last evening Mr. Allan Schryver, who for so long has been prominently connected with the various Boards of Education, was unanimously elected chairman of the Board of Education for the coming year, the nomination was made by Mr. J. W. Barlow, seconded by Mr. Geo. Cresswell and concurred with unanimously by the members present. After being escorted to the chair by Mrs. Mallon and Mr. D. Rowe, M. Schryver gave a short address to the members present thanking them for the signal honor conferred upon him, and expressing the wish that he might be able to carry out to some satisfaction that his predecessors had shown.

"When I think of the men who have gone before me in this position," he said, "I realize that I have a more humble opinion of myself, but will endeavor to fulfil and discharge my duties as capably as they did the office to a large time I do happen to make mistakes, as the best of us do at times, then I trust that there will be charity shown myself as we have shown others when they have gone before. Sometimes we have our little arguments as here we are all very much at home had his viewpoint on various subjects that have come up and we after all, are striving to do our best for the good of the office to which And even with them the business men who are in charge of the Board wars been well and capably handled.

Bishop-Designate Lyons is Popular in Local Parishes

Four Year Incumbency in Belleville Closed Last Year

HIS CAREER

It was a feeling of very much pleasure and satisfaction that the news was received by the people on Wednesday evening, of the election by the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario, on John Lyons, M.A., to be Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, to succeed the late Dr. Mills. Those who left the Ontario diocese a short time ago to become rectors of parishes of Huron Diocese with residence at London, Ont.

The news was heard with pleasure in the city of Belleville, the home of Huron Diocese with residence at London, Ont.

The news was heard with pleasure in the city of Belleville, the home of Bishop-elect and his family, and in Thomas' Church, of which Ven. Archdeacon Lyons was rector for four years, and by many citizens in general.

Telegrams of congratulation were sent to Archdeacon Lyons last Wednesday morning by many friends in Belleville. His election was also received with pleasure by his former parish of St. Thomas and by the city in general. His time during his residence he was most highly thought of as a man and as Archdeacon.

Archdeacon Lyons came to Belleville on February 1st, 1927, for duties, when he had been Rector of St. Mary Magdalene, Toronto, for several years and he assumed his office as Rector of St. Thomas' Church at that time and on Sunday February 6th he preached his farewell services here at Ven for the first time.

At Evensong on that day the Archdeacon took his sermon on the text: Philippians, the third chapter and parts of the thirteenth and fourteenth verses: "Forgetting these things within are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

It was on Sunday, April the 27th last that the congregation of St. Thomas' Church heard with deep regret from Archdeacon Lyons that he had given into the hands of the church wardens his resignation as Vicar of the parish, to take effect on the close of the parish at Pentecost, Ont. The resignation to take effect on June 1st.

Early in July Archdeacon Lyons and his family left for their residence in Prescott. Prior to departing the congregation at a largely attended gathering of parishioners in the Parish Hall, presented Archdeacon Lyons with handsome gifts and an address of appreciation.

When Ven. Archdeacon Lyons visited Belleville in his official capacity as Lord Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, of which diocese two of the most important parishes are now, St. Thomas' and St. Paul's, will come from many friends.

While consecrated and installed on Sunday as diocese Archdeacon Lyons and family will reside at Kingston where he will occupy the official office of the diocese, St. Thomas' Church rectory as his future residence.

He has enjoyed the good-will of his brothers of the clergy and is highly regarded in the community at large. He was for some time Rural Dean of Leeds and Grenville in 1921-24 a member of the Corporation of Trinity College. He has for several years been elected with the highest vote—to the executive of the Synod of Ontario, and of the Synod of the Women's Auxiliary. She was Miss Helena Bolton of Portland, the bishop-elect and Mrs. Lyons have two daughters.

With the exception of Archbishop Lewis, the first Bishop of Ontario, who was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, and St. Rev. C. Bidwell, third bishop—a graduate of Wadham College, Oxford—the bishops of Ontario have all been graduates of Trinity College, Toronto.

Amid Snow and Ice Olympic Games Open

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt Takes Salute

ALL PARADE

National Anthem of Each Country Played in Turn

(By Edward J. Neil)

Olympic Stadium, Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 4—Against a sparkling background of snow and ice, the lofty peaks of the Adirondacks frowning from the distance, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York officially opened the 1932 Olympic winter games to 331 athletes of 17 nations, at 10.30 a.m. today.

As a lusty brass band blared the anthems of the foreign lands, and a crowd of 8,000 in the open air stands cheered lustily, the competitors, in the alphabetical order of nations, flags flying at the head, proudly marched around the 400 metre ice surface of the skating track.

At their head marched Fritz Berger, pretty girl figure skating champion, leading the Austrian delegation, and last to enter were the Canadians, red maple leaves emblazoned on their white jackets.

Then in order marched athletes of Belgium, slightly ahead the Czecho-Slovakia, Finland, France, Germany, England, Italy, Japan, Norway, Poland, Rumania, Sweden, Switzerland and United States.

The small crowd stood and cheered each squad, saving the loudest applause, however, for the courageous German squad and what is left of a few months ago was a powerful two-score crushes on the train-Chancellor Mr. Hitler's dictatorship that sent six of them to the local hospital. Fritz Dinn, Fritz Gerlach and Albert Breitme, still are in a critical condition.

JAPAN AGREES IF CHINA WILL

Use of Spur Line of Railway Only Allowed Japan By Russia

Tokyo, Feb. 4 (AP)—The reply of the Japanese government to the Soviet's proposal for peace in Shanghai, handed tonight by Sir Francis Lindley, British ambassador to Japan, to Foreign Minister Yoshizawa, agreed to cease hostile acts there if Japan is assured the Chinese troops will withdraw and completely cease their disturbing activities."

The reply was presented today by Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa after it had been approved by the cabinet and Emperor Hirohito, added, however, that the Chinese regulars or non-uniformed forces surrounded in their activities there would be compelled to reserve full freedom of action.

Short Reply Japanese

(By Morris J. Harris, Associated Press Staff Writer, Copyright 1932)

Shanghai, China, Feg. 4 (AP)—Chinese forces today faced a new Japanese attack in the Chapei section of Shanghai, while Japanese were carefully beating off the Japanese forces in a rain of artillery and machine gun fire.

It was the second onslaught by the Japanese within the same during day and followed another heavy bombardment of the Chapei area, sixteen miles down the river by Japanese warships.

Railway Issue

Tokyo, Feb. 4.—Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet Ambassador to Japan, called upon Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa today and it was understood he discussed the attempt of the Japanese military authorities in Manchuria to use the western portion of the Chinese eastern railway line for the purpose of moving troops to Harbin, Manchuria.

The Russian Ambassador pointed out, it was understood, that Russia conditionally agreed to the use of the railway by the Japanese for military purposes only on the Changchun-Harbin branch, and further agreement should have been approved, he said, before using the main line.

MANY EUCHRE TABLES IN PLAY

St. Paul's Church Holds Enjoyable Social Evening

Over forty tables of euchre were in play on St. Paul's Hall last night, the euchre held held in the Sunday School room on the Hall floor. Further down in the Ladies' Aid room, the sitting on a marked chair and at a marked table, the chair was allotted out.

The prizes for euchre were—Ladies' first, 400 lbs. of coal donated by Rierdon Coal Company, won by Mrs. Wm. Anderson; consolation, ladies' second, large roast of beef donated by Mrs. Wm. Bryant.

The ladies connected with the St. Paul's mission are very grateful to all those who donated the prizes or in any way helped to make the evening a decided success.

MANY DIE AS TANKER BLOWS UP AT TRAINER

Windows Mile From Scene Are Broken

OTHERS MISSING

Seven Charred Bodies Taken From Hold of Ship

Marcus Hook, Pa., Feb. 4 — Seven charred bodies, bringing the death roll of ten, were reported by workmen to have been taken from the hold of the San Oil Tanker Bidwell today, seven hours after four explosions wrecked the ship at Trainer, near here. Many others, believed victims of a fiery death, were missing several hours after explosion wrecked the San Oil Company's Tanker Bidwell at her dock at Trainer, near here early today.

The four explosions, of such force that they shattered windows a mile from the scene, scattered flaming oil in every direction and fired the wharf of the Sinclair Oil Company, at whose dock the Bidwell was tied.

Of the missing, six were reported to have perished while working in the middle Hole, the tank in which was the first to explode. One charred body was dragged early from the twisted mass of iron and flame. It was identified as that of Stephen Marks, 28, of Philadelphia. Edward Russell, 35, Marcus Hook, and Lloyd Hamilton, 30, Marrietta, Ga., died of burns after reaching hospital.

Eleven injured including the Captain's wife, Mrs. Viola Stevens, of Jamaica, L.I., were taken to the Crozer hospital. Their injuries are serious and five of they workmen were in critical condition. Another condition she had gone aboard but a few minutes before the blast occurred. Captain Rivers is among those missing.

Search for help brought fire fighting apparatus and ambulances from Wilmington, Del., Chester, Philadelphia and surrounding towns. Because of the terrific heat and danger of further explosions firemen were unable to aid the stricken crew. They confined their efforts to saving the wharf and surrounding property.

Full Army Division to Replace 5000 Bluejackets

Tokyo, Feb. 4 (AP) — The Japanese government decided today to mobilize a full army division of land troops to Shanghai to replace the 5,000 bluejackets now there and fighting with the Chinese there since last Friday.

Tokyo, Feb.4 (AP)—The Japanese government today announced that it would be handed to the British, United States and French Ambassadors today its agreement to cease hostilities in Shanghai if it is assured the Chinese will withdraw completely and immediately cease their menacing and hostile activities."

Rigid Economy Promised in Financial Estimates When Parliament Opens

Imperial Conference Opens in Ottawa on July 18th

STABILITY

Canadians Resolute in Adherence to Policies

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 4.— (By the Canadian Press)— Negotiations between Canada and United States for the completion of the St. Lawrence Canalization Scheme are in progress, it was announced in the speech from the Throne, delivered at the opening of Parliament today by the Governor-General, Bessborough.

Bright, winter sunshine reflected from clean, white snow formed a brilliant background for the opening of Parliament today.

All the color and ceremony, gay uniforms, mounted soldiers and Bessborough were in evidence when, shortly before three o'clock, their Excellencies Lord and Lady Bessborough arrived in an open sleigh for their first parliamentary opening.

The speech from the Throne was short but unusually short, stressed the fundamental soundness of Canada and the courage and fortitude of the Canadian people in the present distressful period.

The Imperial Conference will open in Ottawa July 18; the speech said. Rigid Economy

"A policy of rigid economy," will be noted when the financial estimates are laid before the House, the speech said. It will be considered with the "discharge of those statutory and contractual obligations which is essential to the preservation of the integrity and credit of the Dominion."

This period of trial has shown the Canadian economic structure to be fundamentally sound," said the Throne Speech the over-subscription of the National Service Loan manifested the confidence of the Canadian people in the financial strength of the country.

The report of the Duff Committee, investigating the Railway Situation, which was laid on the table of the House today, will be considered by the government during the present session, it was announced. The speech in part says:

"You enter upon your duties at a time of continuous and universal economic disturbance and distress. A similar situation has not prevailed the control of the Canadian people. But it rejoices that you resolute adherence to policies designed for the welfare of the nation, has minimized the adverse influence of external economic forces. This period of trial has shown the Canadian situation to be fundamentally sound. The over-subscription of the National Service Loan manifests both the confidence of the Canadian people in the financial strength of the country.

County Councils Will Delve Into Farm Problems

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 4—An association of representatives of all county councils in the Province, to further the farmers' interests, was formed today at a meeting held by Minister of Agriculture, in speaking today at Parliament Buildings, to over 80 members of county councils from all parts of the Province, who gathered at the request of the Minister to delve into farming problems.

"The association is to be a non-political body," declared Col. Kennedy, and will present to the government periodically their recommendations, says Col. Kennedy stated it is his intention to have the department of agriculture and the farmers to be in co-operate with the farmer to help them grow something especially suited to that county that will make dollars for the farmer. Col. Kennedy spread taxation on the farmer is heavy and cited his own case in Peel county where a millionaire who had died, had paid less taxes than he did.

"Taxes should come from the man best able to pay", declared Col. Kennedy, who approved the idea of

Obituary

JOHN LEE

Surviving his wife but three days, John Lee, resident at 91 Henry street for many years, died on Wednesday evening, at the residence of Mrs. M. J. Quinn, sister-in-law, 83 South John street. The funeral will be held from the latter address Friday morning for mass at nine o'clock at St. Michael's Church.

The late John Lee was a native of Ireland and came to Canada in his early years, making his home in Belleville. He is held in loving memory by all the older residents and was beloved by all classes and creeds and by all who knew him. He had enjoyed remarkable health in spite of his great age.

Mrs. Anne Lee, his wife, passed away on Sunday. At the time his condition was very poor and fears were entertained for his recovery.

He is survived by two sons, John of Montreal and Ed of Belleville. His only brother died and was buried in Kingston many years ago.

Mr. Lee was a devout member of St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church.

EDWIN JOHN JEFFREY

Mr. Edwin John Jeffrey, aged and respected resident of Tweed Township, Hastings County, died from apoplexy on the 30th of January 1932.

The funeral was held on Thursday Service was conducted at the home by Rev. J. W. Fraser, minister of the United Church, Bancroft, Ont. The text was Eccl. 7:1: "A good name is better than precious ointment, and the day of death than a day of one's birth."

Mrs. William Jeffrey, a neighbor, spoke by request concerning the deceased. He said in part, "Words fail us to speak of all the good qualities of our late friend. He was a good husband, a kind father, a true friends and in every way, an honest man. He kept the books of School Section No. 6 for over twenty years and there was never a cent wrong. His faith was in the Christ of Calvary, and, I believe, that now he is in heaven."

The pall-bearers were Messrs. James and Wesley Leitch, William Dillon, George Bierworth, W. A. Gasbel and E. H. Austin. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant.

Mr. Jeffrey was born in England about fourteen miles from Plymouth on the first of December, 1850. His father was John Jeffrey and his mother Thurza Liscombe. The father is buried in the old Methodist grave yard in Bancroft.

Sixty-one years ago Mr. Jeffrey emigrated to Canada and fifty-nine years ago settled in the section where he has since made his home. He married Hannah Jane Alcock of Belleville, who on her demise twenty-three years ago was buried in the Anglican Cemetery, at L'Amable. The issue of this brotherly union are those living:—John, Thurza, (Mrs. Wm. Barker) of Tory Hill; Ida, (Mrs. Harry of Kenora; Jesse R., on the homestead; Frank of Waterford, N.Y.; Pearl (Mrs. Herb. Hughes) Deville, Rainy River; Jennie, (Mrs. H. Sweet, Trenton; Nelson, Parry Sound; and Lena (Mrs. Gordon Vardy) Madoc.

Mr. Jeffrey spent a long and useful life among his fellow men and generation. He was among the first to settle on a free grant in Faraday. Ozen were then used and a fine yoke of oxen was a source of pride. Labour in the camps brought in thirteen dollars a month. In such conditions he settled amid the virgin forest and the clearing has been his work of a life time. Since 1913 he has operated a portable saw-mill. His sons Jesse and Nelson and daughter, Jennie, were in attendance at the funeral. To them and to all the absent members of the family there is extended the sympathy of a large neighborhood.

WILLIAM THOMPSON

The death at William Thompson of Montecagle Valley occurred in the Belleville General Hospital, Wednesday, February 3rd, 1932, after an illness of two years duration. The late Mr. Thompson was a well to farmer, in his 67th year, a member of the Glen United Church, and a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thompson.

Surviving are the widow Jean Ruth Sutherland, five sons, and three daughters—John of Belleville; Robert William, Wesley and Will son, all of Montecagle Valley; Mrs. Arthur Skinner, Belleville; Mrs. Maxwell Bancroft and Miss Susan, Colborne; also two sisters Mrs. Mary A. Bartlett, Montecagle Valley and Mrs. Charles Thompson of New Carlow, Ont.

The remains were taken to the Funeral Home of Martin and Son, and by motor hearse to his late residence Montecagle Valley for interment Friday at Glen Cemetery.

Versatility of Belleville Industrial Plants Shown in Tea Room Fixtures

Belleville industrial activities are versatile and cover a wide field from food stuffs to eye glasses. In the building trades another manufacturing that goes into the construction of a house or business building of any kind is produced right here in Belleville with two building hardware and lock manufactories of large size besides woodworking and general machinery shops to fill every need. It is interesting to note that the restaurant fixtures recently installed in the Capitol Theatre Lunch, Front street, were made in Belleville at the plant of the Wilson Company Limited, an organization which, keen abreast of the times and in fact a little ahead, if anything, in supplying everything in woodwork from plain lumber to the finest finished store fixtures.

The Capitol Theatre Lunch Tea Room, 227 Front street, which started a few months ago as a lunch counter, met with such instant success that it was decided to install a tea room for the accommodation of ladies. Instead of sending away for the tables and seats as is generally the custom an order was placed with Housing Co., Limited, and the result was more than satisfactory. The tables, seats, and wall panelling are finished in gum wood, beautifully grained and finished, and make a fine appearance, handsome and restrained in design, suggestive of the rich old seasoned oak in English country homes. The fact that these fixtures were designed and manufactured in Belleville and are equal to and superior to most of the imported kind is a tribute to the adaptiveness of local industry and a tribute to the progressiveness and up-to-dateness of the modern woodworking plant of the Housing Company, Limited.

Current Sport

By The Observer

The fate of senior baseball now lies in the hands of the sport fans of this district. The present executive of the Belleville Nationals have called a meeting for the purpose of finding out whether baseball situation stands, as far as the fans are personally concerned. It is to be hoped that the baseball enthusiasts will take advantage of tonight's meeting, which will be called at the Y.M.C.A. at 8 p.m. and make a special effort to be present as the old executive do not feel that they are carrying on the work much longer.

Kingston, Peterboro, Oshawa and Cobourg have all signified their intension of becoming members of the C. O. B. League for 1933 Port Hope is also very much interested but will have to line-up with Cobourg and Oshawa as they are an alternative. Belleville sport fans should realize just what the situation, at present, means. It looks like the rejuvenation of the old Quinte League of 1918 and 1919. Who, of the local sporting fraternity would like to see this come to pass? It will undoubtedly, and it is up to the younger element of the sporting circles of Belleville, to see that Belleville gets in the League as last year. With Belleville and Port Hope in the field it means a six-team league for 1933.

As we said: "the fate of senior baseball will be decided at the Y. M.C.A. tonight" when the meeting is called to order at 8 p.m. All are welcome.

MINSTREL SHOW DECIDED SUCCESS

Moira Masonic Lodge Entertain Brethren of District

Minstrelsy made famous by Al G. Fields, Hi Henry and others, has entertained countless thousands and there are still those who enjoy the end men with their funny sayings and southern songs. For the past number of years Moira Lodge, No. 11, A.F. & A.M., have contributed to the social side of life by giving, each year, a minstrel show in the entirety and last night at the Masonic Temple, Belleville, a capacity from every point in the district to enjoy for a brief hour, songs and sayings of other days. The banquet room, set in the form of a theatre, was packed almost to suffocation, showing the reason for a Grand Master's visit to the city and from the first to the last number, the audience laughed and cried in turn as the actors ran the whole gamut of a minstrel show.

End Men Clever

The end men, Sam Turner, Ab Wheeler, who toured all countries as a black face; Everett Smith and Eddie George were typical in their characterizations, especially Everett Smith, who gave a "rube" impression. Their songs were all clever and especially well executed and their jokes went over big with the gathering. George Dulmage, who is the moving and guiding spirit of these affairs, was happily cast as the interlocutor and conducted the programme in a most efficient manner. The chorus consisting of Harry Moorman, Fred Burke, Al Stillman, James Sanker, Ritchie Arnott and others, and Moira Lodge orchestra under the direction of Ross Hunter gave the gathering a treat with their delightful harmony in the chorus numbers.

The Programme

The programme opened with a chorus by the entire company, followed by a solo by Eddie George, "Sometimes Not Always"; Al Stillman sang the old favorite "The Best Things in Life are Free"; while Everett Smith contributed "Cubanola Glide." Ritchie Arnott sang delightfully "She Was Bred in Old Kentucky" and Same Turner (by request) gave "Don't Go Way and Let Me Sleep." A ballad "Grandfather's Clock" was the next number thoroughly enjoyed, rendered by James Sanker, while Ab Wheeler came through in fine style with "Dixie." A bass solo "The Song the Anvil Sings" was given by Fred Burke and the grand finale "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" was given by the entire company.

The brethren were welcomed by Worshipful Master W. M. Barlow and the work in the lodge room was necessarily made short in order that the company would have full time for the evening. Refreshments brought a delightful evening to a close and another milestone in Masonic history was passed.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Holds Meeting

The February meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School room of St. Andrew's church on Wednesday afternoon, 13 members were present with President, Mrs. Symour was in the chair. After business was transacted, the convener of the circle for the day, Mrs. Morrice, took charge, being assisted by Mrs. Peck, Mrs. Crooks, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. MacRae and Mrs. Mills. The programme opened with an appropriate hymn, the accompanist being Mrs. G. L. Fleming. Mrs. Maybee gave a Scripture reading and Mrs. Morrice offered prayer, and also read a most interesting chapter from the Study book, on some of our outstanding missionaries who are laboring in foreign fields, such as Dr. and Mrs. Jonathan Goforth who have done a notable work in that portion of the world which is now very much in the public eye, Manchuria. Reference was made to others such as Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Macdonald, pioneer missionaries to Formosa. Mrs. MacRae's paper on "Stewardship" was very instructive showing why we should give regularly and systematically for the work of the church. After the singing of a hymn, Mrs. Morrice told a very touching story of "The Lord's Care." Arrangements were made for the coming of Miss Pelton, organizing Secretary of the W.M.S. who is expected to visit Belleville and will give two addresses here at an early date. The Lord's prayer was then repeated in unison, and this was followed by a dainty tea and a social half hour, which was much enjoyed by all.

Thousands Leave To Mountain Top

By John P. McKnight

Santiago, Cuba, Feb. 4 (AP). — Fleeing thousands, virtually bearing their mattresses on their backs to escape danger, made wrecked Santiago a dead city today.

Nine persons were known dead and approximately 1,000 of the 70,000 population were treated for major or minor injuries. The damage was officially estimated in excess of $10,000,000 by officials who surveyed the ruins left by the most severe of the earthquakes to strike the city in the past 400 years.

St. Paul's Church Holds Vestry Meet

The annual Vestry meeting of St. Paul's Church was held Tuesday evening for the purpose of electing the new officers for the coming year, and reading the reports which were presented. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, presided in the chair and Clerk C. G. Sherratt took the minutes, being appointed pro tem in the absence of the regular clerk. The Ladies' Guild was also particularly sound in all respects.

Treasurer—Mrs. Jas. McKenna.
Secretaries Society, Mrs. Brant, Secretary.

The remainder of the evening was devoted to reports of retiring members and committees, and all were found to be in very good condition. Finances were especially satisfactory as the members concerned and a vote of thanks was tendered the retiring officers for their work. The Ladies' Guild was also particularly sound in all respects.

I'M NO HERO

by David Nowlson

Behind his glass showcases filled with divers confections to delight the eye and annoy the stomach, Clem Scoggins was not impressive. Nor was he impressive anywhere else. For Clem was skinny and meek and pecred at you with mild blue eyes shielded by humble, gold-rimmed spectacles.

"Old Scoggins" he was called when he wasn't around. It wasn't really that he was so old. Not unless you consider forty old. But when a man has spec: twenty-five years of his life selling candy to the inhabitants of a small town, he acquires the localized kind of look that inevitably stamps him old.

Roger Arthur Train—the Arthur an affluent gesture since his promotion to the road—leaned over Clem Scoggins' counter and addressed him with great earnestness. Roger was everything that Clem was not and he was by no means loath to letting the fact known. His clothes—the eloquent tweed, the shining necktie, the not too shrinking carnation in his buttonhole—testified to these matters. So did Train's manner, which seemed to belong in an office with mahogany furniture. But far more convincing than these was Roger's own testimony—and he appeared to take the stand quite frequently.

"The trouble with you" announced Roger with nasal positiveness, "is that you're far too much of a stick-in-the-mud. You haven't any get-up and get-up-'em about you. You're not romantic enough. I tell you, Clem, you have to be something of a hero to get along in this world. You have to be able to get up and show the world that you've got the stuff. You have to be able to kick obstacles and people, too—out of your way. You have to be a hero."

Clem's hair was sober and not very enthusiastic. He was familiar with Roger's success talks.

"Now, look, Indiana," Roger went on to his favorite example. "I started working the same time that you did, Clem. I've had all kinds of jobs already. When they tried to cram my style anywhere I just told them where to get off at. All this time you've been hanging on to this place, I've been out fighting the world and getting all kinds of experience. And now look at me. A good job on the road for Dalling & Straw, Incorporated. But look at you. You're still running this two-by-four candy store."

There was no denying this. So Clem nodded again.

"You've got to be something of a hero," Roger repeated. "You've got to be."

"No," said Clem. "I'm no hero. You're still a bachelor, too," continued the other. "Why man, you aren't living! I have four kids already. What kind of life are you living, anyway? I'll tell you Clem, you're not hitting on all six. You're no hero, Clem."

Clem sighed. "No, I don't suppose I'm a hero."

Roger, lumpy with pounds and importance, waddled out of the shop and left the storekeeper to his thoughts which were vaguely restless. Clem Scoggins was not entirely satisfied. He would like to get out and do bigger things. He didn't want to be a stick-in-the-mud, an inconsequential storekeeper. But was he anything else?

It was more than possible, Clem mused to himself, that Roger might be right. A man had to have a fighting attitude if he wanted to do anything in this world. He was too timid. If he wasn't so timid he would have spoken of Mrs. Parker long before this. Spoken, that is, something other than the commonplaces about business and the weather and what they were legislating at Washington. For guilt-en-haired Mrs. Parker was lovely in her smiling, jolly way. Trim and good-natured and still youthful appearing. More than once he had wanted to speak. More than once he had lacked the voice. Well, it must be as Roger had said, he was no hero.

He thought a twenty minutes to six, Clem locked his store and started up the floor to real lisle legend that read, "Out to supper. Back in 30 minutes." He started across the feeble plank bridge that led to Cooley's Lunchroom on the other side of the river.

As he walked across the bridge it occurred to him that he felt as if he were something human that was trying to call his attention to how weak it was. Clem shook his head. He must see one of the town aldermen and tell how dangerous that bridge was getting. Roy Adamson was a good friend of his. Roy would introduce a bill for repairs at the next meeting of the council.

"Evening, Clem," Bud Cooley greeted him as he entered the lunchroom.

"Good evening, Bud. How are you?"

"Fine, Clem, fine. And how is the candy business?"

"Looks mighty sweet to me," grinned Clem. Then they both laughed. It was their stock joke. They laughed at it every evening for the past twenty years.

Clem ordered, as he always did, roast beef with side dishes of corn and mashed potatoes. He ate slowly, feeling vaguely dissatisfied with himself. There was so much he could be doing and so little he had actually done.

He was still fretting over the problem as he made his way back to the store. Once more he trod the flimsy bridge over the river. Once more it quaked in agony and informed him that it was no hero. Suddenly he paused, horrified. Part of the bridge rail was gone. In the stream was a woman, struggling wearily to keep herself afloat.

Even as he watched, the woman uttered a feeble cry of "Help!" and disappeared under the swirling water. It was hopeless for him to think of going after her. What would he do?

Hastily he tore a plank from the weak bridge and, as the current bore the woman, praying that she would be able to reach it and thus sustain herself.

The plank fell short. Clem groaned. He couldn't swim.

The woman's struggles became weaker. She was drowning.

With the frantic effort of despair, Clem attempted to pry another plank from the old bridge. Stubbornly the bridge refused to part with it. He could not dislodge the plank. And the woman seemed to be slipping under the murky stream.

A third went over Clem Scoggins. He ripped off his coat and his shoes. Closing his eyes for a moment he leaped out in the direction of the plank. Already it was being carried down stream.

The water seemed to rise and slap him with a thump. He opened his eyes. The plank was just in front of him. Clem grabbed it.

Holding desperately to the plank with one hand and paddling furiously with the other, Clem found himself moving. He steered the plank over to the woman. There he saw, for the first time, that it was Mrs. Parker.

"Hold on to the plank, Mrs. Parker!" he yelled. She clutched the wood.

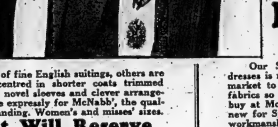
"Now hang on and I'll try to paddle us back to shore."

The plank sank a little beneath the combined weight of the two but Clem was able to keep moving. Finally, after what seemed an interminable age, though in reality it was but a few minutes they reached the shore. By that time there were many willing hands to assist them.

"Bring them both up to Clem's store," advised some. "It's closest."

Mrs. Parker was carried and Clem leaned on the arm of big Ed Stone. Once at the store, a woman was dispatched for clothes for Mrs. Parker. And a complete change in small room back of his shop.

Neither knew how it me about, but Clem started telling Mrs. Parker how lovely he was and Mrs. Parker told him how lovely she was since since the death of Mr. Parker. By the time the sole member of The Beacon staff arrived with his notebook and pencil, they were able to give him a real story.



"So you're going to be married, eh?" questioned The Beacon reportorially. "Right after receiving a proposal of marriage. That makes a peach of a story. Real romantic. You're a fine man, Mr. Scoggins. A real hero."

Mr. Scoggins grew red. He waved a deprecating hand. "Just the way things happened," he explained. "But—I'm no hero."

The future Mrs. Scoggins turned and winked eloquently at the reporter.

Figures of the 1930 census reveal that there are 11,930,000 foreign-born people in the United States.

Enough Is Enough

By Thornton W. Burgess

Enough's enough, yet few indeed are they who give the matter heed —Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit was wishing that he was anywhere but under the back porch of Farmer Brown's house. He could think of dozens of places he would rather be. But there he was, and, with Reddy Fox waiting for him just outside, there he was likely to stay unless—well, unless it became so unpleasant for him that he just couldn't stay. And he had an unconfortable feeling that this might be soon, for somewhere back of him in the darkness fitful voices were complaining, and some one was threatening to "get out." If that happened, Peter would have to get out, and how could he, with Reddy Fox waiting for him outside?

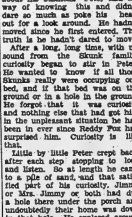
Suddenly Peter pricked up his long ears in startled surprise. There was a complaining voice he was sure he had not heard before. He listened intently. No, sir, he hadn't heard that voice before. He had recognized the voice of Jimmy Skunk and Mrs. Jimmy, but this wasn't the voice of either.

"Or, dear, what a mess I am in!" thought Peter. "It was enough to have Jimmy and Mrs. Jimmy to worry about, but it must be that there is another member of the family here. I wonder if they have separate bedrooms or if they are all together?"

He listened nervously to the sounds behind him. There was much low growling and some sharp words, all in fretful, sleepy tones. Now and then it sounded as if there might be a fight starting, but the sounds died down to a whines and sleepy growls. As his ears grew accustomed to the sounds he was better able to pick out the voices and before long, to his dismay, he was sure that there were at least four.

The longer he was there, the more there are, and the worse it is for me," moaned Peter under his breath. Those sounds all come from one place, so it must be that those Skunks are sleeping together. Who ever heard of four grown people sleeping together? I never did. Yet it must be so, for Jimmy Skunk hasn't any babies now; all his children are grown up. Anyway they looked so the last time I saw them. I would feel better if they would go to sleep.

An hour or two later Peter did feel better. The fretting and sleepy quarreling had ceased, and it was very still under the porch. Outside it was equally still, for Reddy Fox had long since gone about his business. Peter had no way of knowing this and didn't dare so much as poke his head out for a look around. He hadn't moved since he first entered. The truth is he hadn't dared to move. He forgot that it was curiously and nothing else that had got him in the unpleasant situation he found himself in ever since Reddy Fox had surprised him. Curiosity is like that.



Little by little Peter crept back, after each step stopping to look and listen. So at length he came to a pile of sand, and that settled part of his curiosity.

So at length he came to a pile of sand and that satisfied part of his curiosity

World's Fastest Escalators

The world's fastest escalators just installed in the London Underground by Otis

The measured pace of proverbially deliberate escalators is experiencing a novel thrill in the new high speed escalators being installed in the London subways to handle increasingly heavy traffic. The Britishers have gone in for speed in a big way for the new moving stairs are the speediest in the world.

Entrances and exits of the London (Underground) Electric Railway Co., Ltd., until recently, were equipped with "escalator elevators or escalators of regulation type, capable of handling 4,000 to 5,000 passengers an hour at a maximum speed of 90 feet a minute with a vertical rise of 60 to 35 feet.

But, a few years ago the Otis Elevator Company, through its London associate, Waygood-Otis, Ltd., began installation of a new type escalator capable of double the speed, of the old and with a vertical rise of 90 feet. It is estimated that these new moving stairs can carry 16,000 persons an hour, nearly doubling former capacity.

The single machine was first erected and put in operation at the Otis Elevator Company's workshat Harrison, N. J. After the several of tests, it was inspected and accepted by the London engineers. Fifty-one of these machines have already been ordered by the officials of the Underground and are being installed as needed, in the various subways of the British metropolis.

HEAVY FOG SETTLES

London, Feb. 4 (AP).—One of the worst fogs of the winter settled over a large area of Britain today, paralyzing road and highway traffic and tying up west bound and channel shipping. Continential aeroplane services cancelled flights.

The thick curtain showed some signs of lifting this afternoon but the improvement in dense form was predicted for tonight.

There were 561 golf clubs in operation in Canada at the close of last season, according to a recent compilation.

FALLING VALUES AS INDEX

Ottawa Citizen points to the falling in the price of Japanese securities as a result of the Japanese attitude in recent entanglement with China. On Oct. 26th, government bonds sold at 97 for 6½ per cents and at 83 3-4 for five and a half per cents. Last Saturday these were down to 77 ½ and 66 respectively, a loss of 15 3-4 and 13 3-4 respectively.

The other day the silk exchange at Yokohoma was closed.

Prospects of war in the prewar days of 1914 had the same effect upon European securities.

Finance and credit are still delicate barometers.

SENATOR MEIGHEN

Appointment of the Rt. Honorable Arthur Meighen to the Senate where he will lead the governmental party will be popular.

The new senator has been one of the most brilliant of Canadians and possesses gifts of analysis and of oratory which put him in a class by himself.

No more brilliant man is to be found in Canada and it is to be hoped that in the senate he will still find scope for those outstanding powers which he possesses.

BRITISH GOODWILL

The Mail and Empire points out that good will to man is the watchword of the present hour. "We have said that this world will not recover from its present economic distress until leaders arise who place a stronger emphasis upon the things of the spirit; until they cultivate in themselves and in their followers a spirit of mutual trust and forbearance; until they abandon mere selfishness for altruistic endeavor; until they learn to cooperate heartily for the common welfare of mankind," the Mail says in an editorial.

British forbearance and forgiveness are exemplified in the history of more than many. Britain offered to forego twice the amount of the war debts she owed the United States if the latter would also forego it. That was back in 1922. Now again Britain has been willing to give up her position of supremacy of the oceans for the sake of unloading the armament burden. Britain is going to see that the League of Nations idea is more than an idea, that it is like all ideas powerful when packed up with the people. Such attitude should prove the British sincerity and desire to act for the good of all.

WHY THE CHECK

People sometimes wonder why everything is not booming in the way of business. A good example of the reason why was given the other day in England when a veteran and keen observer pointed out, ensuing a reference to Japan's action in the Far East because it had been decided that the world was over-invested in order public debate. It was a time when words should be carefully weighed and no one should set a pace. One might well wonder what might not have occurred had all the members felt like expressing themselves and be allowed to do so.

Under the view of the Labor veteran, the fact remains that the question in the East is so delicate that nothing must be said or done to interfere with the diplomats who are working along a certain line of action. Random expressions would lead nowhere and might precipitate trouble.

The same condition occurs in less important difficulties in life, in councils, in boards, in business, as well as in politics. Many a viewpoint has to be supressed for the time being at least for the general good.

x

No nation has so stirred the world since the outbreak of the war as has Japan and done with loss of sympathy for the Nipponese, whose actions are difficult to understand, particularly the military actions taken against the Chinese. The world does not appear in a mood for fooling in the east or anywhere else since the last grave sword-jangling at Potsdam.

x

The proposal to burn wood in county buildings to economize on coal with the cause of employment has caused some discussion throughout the county.

x

Some people wonder if war starts before a declaration of war is made, or if war can exist without a declaration.

x

Now there is heard talk of more war debts, the war debts which Japan and China will have to pay some day. The weary world which believes the old war debts out of 1914-1918 will not be the cause of the present repression and depression, is hardly likely to lend a hand to any nation to spend more money in order to destroy wealth in property and life. A second batch of war debts is unthinkable.

PAULINE: A PORTRAIT
By Aline Michaelis

Downcast her gaze and few her words,
Has life been kind to her, or cold,
Of flowers or flame the memories
She leaves untold?

We would be friends to her, and yet
We have no measure of her need;
We dare not offer her a gift
Of kindly deed.

How can we fathom her desires;
How guess what good or ill befell?
Her young and lovely face is veiled,
Inscrutable.

She dwells among us day by day,
Yet strangely, never grows less strange,
How can we her aloofness end;
How work a change?

This beautiful enigma moves
About her duties commonplace;
But, ah, the romance which we weave
Round her still faces!

FLOYD GIBBONS, a while rapid fire shooter of the air waves, war correspondent and author, is right where he likes to be, right in the midst of the muss in Shanghai and Nankin. Floyd has been sending some hot news cables about the fuss over there, and one particularly interesting interview with a Japanese Admiral who found the whole disturbance somewhat strange, in that the enemy had not declared war and official correspondence between the combatants had to be routed through several layers of foreign consular offices. Floyd says he like the admiral point blank why Chinese women and children were fired upon, killed and injured. The admiral replied that because the Chinese had fired first and the Japs were only defending themselves. Again the age-old questions arise: who started the war, and who won the war?

SUCH A RUSH of business followed an advertisement in this Great Family Journal this week, five columns wide, four inches deep, that the store manager had to mail out S.O.S. calls for more clerks. He anticipated an increase in business as the result of the advertisement but no such rush as filled the store with eager buyers. Some merchants pessimistically say "what is the use of advertising, nobody has any money." There is plenty of money and plenty folks with money watching the advertisements to invest in good values and super-values. Belleville shopping district there is upward of five million dollars in the Savings Banks drawing three per cent. One of these days we are going up six per cent Ontario bonds, a Santa Claus gift from the powers that be at Toronto. Other Papers' Opinions

TO ELIMINATE THE JUNK

A Toronto Grand Jury has raised a point in connection with the licensing of motor cars that deserves attention. It asks that the Ontario Government refuse to license old and defective motor cars, some old cars permitting many to use automatically barring them from the roads. Many cars are now a frequent cause of damage and danger.

Of course any such plan would involve a Government inspection of every car licensed and that, in turn, would mean a big expenditure. But might it not be worth it? And does not a Government when it takes money for permitting many to operate an old rattle-trap to the public highways in some measure share responsibility if an accident results from the car's defective condition? Marine and statutory engineer inspection of boilers officially, as are elevators and a host of other things upon the efficiency of which human life depends. It might be well worth while if a careful study were made of the feasibility of the Toronto Jury's recommendation, with all that it would manifestly imply. Public safety is, after all the first consideration.

AUTOMOBILES USED UP SLOWLY

Automobile production in 1931 was down to something less than 2,200,000 cars—considerably below the normal of 3,000,000 and by each of the three years beginning with 1932. It is obvious that there must come a time when unavoidable replacements will compel a lift in automobile output. Theoretically, there is no countering the argument that the 26,000,000 cars registered in 1930, and allowing six years as the life of a motor vehicle, means would call for more than four million cars a year.

The weakness in this theoretical argument lies in the meaning of a passenger car. It is the glory of the American manufacturer that he has improved cars, great numbers, not because they were outworn but because they were not quite new. Official correspondence between the combatants had to be routed through several layers of foreign consular offices. Floyd like the admiral point blank why Chinese women and children were fired upon, killed and injured. The admiral replied that because the Chinese had fired first and the Japs were only defending themselves. Again the age-old questions arise: who started the war, and who won the war?

ENGINEERING

The work of the engineer in Canada is best known through the construction of railways, highways, and magnificent bridges that are among the structural wonders of the world. But he has left his imprint on every land in which he has been seen at all. By his energy and his genius vast areas of the best fruit ville have been made to blossom and dangerous swamps made into some productive gardens; railways have been gutted through great mountains; forests have been wrested from the earth; rivers have been diverted from their courses to serve in the development of power; lakes and harbors have been harnessed for the benefit of man.

Engineering is a popular profession as evidenced by the number of ambitious youths in the schools and varsities who are aiming to make it their life work. But in no other country there will be plenty of opportunity for the exercise of their knowledge and their energy. There will be a considerable amount of work to be done, as indicated by Sir Lawrence Jones and the inventive genius of the Canadian northern territory.—Toronto Globe.

DISARMENT

If we consider existing armaments from the standpoint of the huge amounts spent upon them it is to be pointed out that the armament budget of the United States during the 12 years from about $725,000,000; that of Great Britain to a little less than $600,000,000; that of Japan to $253,000,000; and that of France to $180,000,000. It will thus be seen that the United States, with a world-wide Empire to defend and colonies scattered to all parts of the world to keep in connection with the Mother Country, which has comparatively few colonies, has spent much more than Japan, than the United States, which is not connected with any element separated from the rest of the world by the broad expanse of ocean, and, therefore, comparatively free from any danger or attack. It will thus be seen that Great Britain has gone to dangerous lengths in giving in the matter of naval and land armament. She has voluntarily disarmed considerably on the seas; she has agreed to naval equality with the United States; she maintains a insignificant land force, and she has cut her air defence services to a fraction. It is for consideration as to whether or not the other powers will follow her lead. It may be said that the United States is spending less than it could on defensive machinery, but the heightening republic could greatly facilitate the process of world disarmament if it could see its way clear to co-operate more heartily with the other powers in the stabilization of Europe, in the further development of armaments, and in the

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE'S WARNINGS

Signals Which Ought to Be Regarded By Those Affected

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.)

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Hardening of the arteries, also known as arterio-sclerosis, is one of those conditions which still baffles science. Once it is established, the arteries cannot be improved; that is the deposits and changes which have lessened the elasticity of the arteries cannot be removed.

A great deal, however, can be done by way of prevention and hardening of the arteries, except in the extreme degree, of hardening that often goes with age. Besides, after the arteries are already so affected, much can be done to lessen the strain upon them and so reduce the danger of a stroke. There are many contributory disturbances that may accompany the condition.

Hardening of the arteries, one thing, try to prevent strain being put upon the heart and arteries by unnecessary and continual rushing about is to be avoided. Exercising so as to produce high blood pressure and arterio-sclerosis. Over-indulgence in alcoholic beverages is also harmful and, lastly, the stress of modern life, especially the nervous strain and weakened arteries, if carried on over a period of years.

Many cases of arterio-sclerosis, therefore, should never have occurred. Had the individuals in question taken proper care of themselves and avoided a hardening that, from excesses of all kinds, they inherited probably would never have broken down.

Kidney or heart disease may be responsible. Also, faulty arterial trouble. Lead poisoning and the toxic effects of gout may likewise be responsible.

Usually high blood pressure is a warning that the arteries are losing their tension, and that the individual with such increased pressure is likely to develop a sclerotic condition of his arteries later on. And what is worse, that the heart which is hardening comes on not suddenly, but gradually, in its ability to do its work. Sometimes persons are entirely unsuspecting of what is going on.

Everyone therefore, should have his blood pressure taken by a physician every six months, but at least once a year, when a complete physical examination is also indicated.

When the arteries are hard, the heart has more work to do. This extra work is usually compensated for by increased strength of the heart, so that more power will be available to offset the added burden. A system in which the tubes—the arteries—are hardened is abnormal. Sometimes, however, the heart is not able to compensate so well. Then shortness of breath may occur. In that case the weakened heart should be relieved and, so to speak, the result being that more strain is not put upon it than should, and blood keeps surging backward into the heart, instead of into the general circulation, as each heart beat.

Fortunately, since the heart does not carry off the waste products of the body, and since it carries only any given instant of time the proper amount of nourishment to the tissues as well as carries off some of their wastes it diminished, kidney disease may be responsible. Examination of the urine every few months should be had in all severe high blood pressure cases. In the less severe ones, every half year is sufficient.

Diet in this may be important. Usually meats, highly-seasoned dishes and rich foods alone should be cut to a minimum. But the best diet is one that is recommended to each person by a competent physician.

FANTASY

Above the city, midnight was an ocean
Of phosphorescent moonlight;
Drifting stars
Were strange sea flowers; and soar-ing cornices
Were the sea floor's long upthrust and jagged rocks.
We walked the ocean bottom, and through those silent streets
Of twilight blue, along the upper tides,
A Zeppelin slow above the swimming towers
Was a great fish with monstrous silver sides.

Which I started to do, but first I counted up my books in the hall rack, and I yelled back, May ma, I cant find my algebra, and I see my books anywhere!

Do the lessons askes dont you know where you put them? ma said, and I think I put them in the hall rack.

Well then their still there, so dont look for them, ma said. And she came out to help me look, saying I think you have yur head on backwards, you cant find anything, it looses it's way in the days of Pompay after a cyclone, I thort you were sipposed to be doing yur home work in yur roome sambianis of order? she said.

Well so I do, ma, I mean I was just looking for it, I was in the little wrere, I said, and ma said, Well then you better get it in the hopeless. I dont see any sine of any algebra in here, you just look out you then here? she said.

Yes ma'am, and I dident im sure I put them in the dining room closit, I said, and ma said, How many times do I have to tell you after school, I said. Aw heck, now I cant do my homework, I said.

Making me feel lucky, and ma said, Well now thats just too bad, and pop said, Its one of the saddest cases I ever hear of, now you make up for lost time, yesterday and get those books.

And if youre one second longer than 3 minits you'll hear from me, ma said, and pop said, And immeedity after that I heard from me, ony more so. Havent you started yet? he said.

Yes sir, I said.

Well I did, telling were instead of better.

GAMES MAY BE TOTAL LOSS

Lake Placid Invested Over Million Dollars in Project

By EDWARD J. NEIL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Lake Placid, N. Y.—While such cities as Cleveland, Los Angeles, the Belgians and the Swiss settled down to the business of training for the run, speed skaters tore around the Stadium rink, skiers wandered through the woods and the bob runs were well with the winter Olympic sport fans, the village merchants were not on the cost of staging these international games.

The financial mechanics behind the grand show of little New York village are centered under the shadows of lofty Adirondack Mountain peaks. Business men who have in sight of the ski jumpers leaping from the crest of the mountains, south of a mile high, that looks like a pencil description of some new form of suicide.

It scarcely seems possible but Lake Placid has invested in the games almost $1,500,000 in this panorama of mountains and lakes and forests.

The State of New York put up $500,000 for the bob runs. The Newspapers floated a $350,000 bond issue, and every merchant, every citizen in one way or another has contributed to the vast total.

Mayor Lake Placid, relieved at the sudden shift in weather conditions which have brought above zero temperatures and an abundance of snow, still has many worries as the opening ceremonies draw near. It is absolutely no hope of getting the ground open for the games, since there is a sudden shift of interest among visitors and natives alike and it will be returned ever a dividend on this sum in the hotel keepers, shopkeepers, attractions.

"The crowds have not come as yet, the mayor said, the enthusiasm for the scenery, the thrills and smashes that already have broken up one German team on the lightning fast bobsled course bruised and damaged a half dozen others and a sad jump that sent on Japanese to the hospital with a broken leg, but wait with the start of the guineas for Saturday, a program running through Feb. 12, the worried villagers are wondering if they ever will.

A deep and curious wonder exists among several Belleville residents who have been driving for days to find out just where Sea-Scout Yard got its name.

Several prominent residents of this city have been asked this question but to date no satisfactory answers have been given. Some of the more informative qualities have been read, but still the mystery has not been learned. It is available is the fact that the Yard is the short end off Whitehall, in London, and was used for a long time, about 1890, as the headquarters of the Metropolitan Police—of which there are 20,000 men—but they are now located at New Scotland Yard and on the Thames Embankment.

And are now Scotland Yards, so that's about all that is known about the thing, and still does not explain the why. About all that can be added anyhow is not to let them get anything on you.

Another curious quirk of human nature comes to the fore. After lengthy deliberation with himself in the secrecy of his office one of the local merchants has come forward with the announcement that henceforth in his house all afternoon matinees would commence fifteen minutes later than those previously. Instead of starting at two o'clock the first picture would be flashed on the screen at exactly twofifteen. A transient boat builder who came into this city some time ago and constructed a boat which was shown for some time in a garage window on Front Street, has now received more orders for boats than he will be able to soon as possible.

Two young men of this city have designed a portable ice boat, which can be taken apart and carried on board of a car.

The mast comes in telescopic sections; the body or floor of the boat is hinged down the centre and the sail can be folded up and carried in a small space.

No patent has been obtained on the boat, but the young builders are expecting a fair sale of their product in the near future.

"Only" say the young men, "we are not out for a money making scheme, we are simply trying to have a little fun."

A surprise party had been in the course of construction for a period of nearly two weeks, and the anniversary of the event fell on the same date as the tenth wedding anniversary. Friends of the couple had spared no effort to make it a great success and the whole affair had been carefully arranged and been gotten up and all seemingly had been forgotten by the husband and wife who were supposed to be in readiness.

All the friends and neighbors were to meet at the home of one of their number and then proceed from there to the house of the unsuspecting party the surprise was about to be perpetrated on. The small army of well-wishers met all right, and the parade was set out for the home. However there was one thing they had not counted on; every other night of the year the happily married couple could be depended upon to be found at home, but on this occasion, of course, they thought that the occasion demanded something out of the ordinary. They dressed and went to the show. Result—there was no party after all. Or did the party of the first part know all along?

Intermediates Fozzled When Ganaonoque Hangs 4-2 Defeat on Squad

Sticky Ice Foreign to Style of Play is Responsible

CLEVER GOALIE

Gananoque Repeats Coup of Last Year When They Took Jrs.

With nothing at stake and nothing to gain the Gananoque hockey team put the local Intermediates out of the O.H.A. running by defeating them by the score of 4 to 2 last night.

History often repeats itself and proved that fact when Gananoque put the skids on them in the first game last night as they did, so to speak, on the local team at the end of the O.H.A. running last year.

The "homesery" placed a make-shift team on the ice last night but the locals could not seem to take advantage of this opportunity. Gananoque used Gooderham and Le Sha, a player who had not been on the line for the last few games but just could not seem to beat them.

The game was played on sticky ice which was quite soft and sticky and the locals were not able to figure out what to do when they had the opportunity to crash the defence. They were unfortunately rolling. Although at least two goals were scored against the locals by their net minder, they did not seem to be able to be fair with themselves even when the opportunity arose with the result that they are today "out in the cold" as far as intermediate hockey in Eastern Ontario is concerned.

Not wanting to criticise, it might be pointed out that the defence of the locals was not equal to their ultimate defeat. It might also be added that no less than five of the casions goals were scored when the defence should have been on hand, so to speak, all over the opposing forwards. The locals tried everything known to hockey, but it was not they night and the result was that they were defeated.

For the winners Seguin, in the nets, a fearless lad, was head and shoulders above all players on the ice as he carried a game that may never be equalled. Close behind him was Johnnie Wind and Dave Young as these two boys played "man-size" hockey all night. Wind is a junior and his performance will long be remembered by the fans of intermediate hockey last night. Berard, Bishop and Young also played smart hockey for the home team and in the pinches rose to the occasion to outplay the locals.

Strange Ice

Although the game was played on a sheet of ice to which the locals were not accustomed, the fact still remains that they could not beat Seguin when they had the opportunity. Shortly after time this boy turned shoot aside to stave off certain defeat. He was successful and the result that Gananoque again put the high hockey boots into the mouth bells" for another year.

Once again the second line of Leachman, Morgan, Bishop and Hall outshone the front line of Mc-Master, Campbell and Scott, although Cordie Hall was not the equal of the best games of the year but, seemingly, could not be suppressed. The second line scored both goals for the locals and they were the only two many more coulders had they not tried to carry the puck down the length. The ice was so soft and the locals so slow that they did not know exactly what to do, with the result that they did not get much of anywhere. Leachman, Morgan and Cox Tice, in the nets, stopped all shots that could be scored by Berard when he backhanded the puck into the net from the far left wing boards was a good shot although it has been stopped by the average goals in intermediate hockey. The individual star of the locals would be out of the question although McMeekin, Leachman, Morgan and Wright played very good hockey but on the whole the locals did not play anything spectacular throughout the entire night especially in the "Scouter" Rickey stepped in and tried to fill the shoes of Irvin Bishop but after giving all that he had in the second period was unable to stand to relish in the final frame after exhibiting a perfect exhibition of gamely played hockey.

The Play

The game over rather slowly and Bob Scott had the first shot on the net when he tested Seguin. The ice was so soft and sticky that neither team could, seemingly, carry the puck very far without overskating or losing it. After about five minutes of play Berard, Bishop Wing carried the puck down the left boards and Lester Wing, who rose to the occasion, but was beaten by La Sha, who batted in the rebound making the score 1 to 0 for Gananoque. About one minute later Dickson took a pass from Wing to make the score 2 to 0 for the home team. The locals were not discouraged by now and they bombarded the Gananoque net at will but could not seem to score until Jack Leachman gave Pete Morgan a perfect pass and Pete made it 2 to 1 for Belleville. The local second line tried everything known to hockey to try and tie the score but they could not seem to help the twine behind Seguin. As the period ended St. Denis missed a new goal when he took a perfect pass from Morgan only to shoot his shot past and far into the corner of the rink. The period ended Gananoque 2; Belleville 1.

Second Period

At the start of the second period Bob Hall replaced Holway on the defence and the locals pressed hard and often but try and even the count. About three minutes after the period started Leachman batted a "backhander" into the net for the second goal scored in many a moon. Bernsford had no idea of scoring but only to centre the puck out so as to give his forwards a chance to get in front but the puck deflected into the net off Tice's skate making the score 3 to 1 for Gananoque. Fire ranged up and down the ice for many minutes before Jack Hall passed to Jack Leachman a perfect pass to make the score 3 to 2 for Gananoque. McKeekin and Campbell very nearly evened the score when they combined only to have Seguin beat Campbell in the long run. The period ended with a neat shot Johnny Wing who had evaded the entire Belleville team. The period ended 2 to 2 for Gananoque.

Final Frame

The final frame opened with Holway back on the job and the forwards changed around in the hope of how to even the score. Time after time Holway carried the puck up the ice only to be thwarted by Seguin in good work at times by Seguin. The ice was terribly sticky by now and the locals could not seem to get the puck down to Seguin. The line kept rolling and Seguin and the Belleville defence shooters could not get into position to shoot. Time after time the second period Bernsford sick-handled his way through the entire Belleville team to beat Tice and make the score 4 to 2 for Gananoque. This goal was the locals used five forwards, to try and even the count but Seguin was on duty and stood up as they might. The play for the last ten minutes of the game was entirely in the Gananoque end of the rink and the locals could never dodge the twine behind Seguin. The substitutes were used freely and "what not" in the final moments of the match but the locals were "just not" and at the final game ended 4 to 2 for Gananoque. Although Belleville was definitely out of the running they are still entitled to the position they beat Port Frontenac and Queen's. This fact remains to be seen.

Gananoque is now in possession of now night's game coupled with Monday night's battle will prove the championship of the district.

The game was rather clean as Referee Jackson of Peterboro had to hand out ten penalties to the players but the penalties that were all for minor offences.

The line-up:

Belleville—Goal Tice; defence Holway, Hall; centre McMeekin; wings Campbell and Scott; subs, Hall, St. Denis, Leachman and Morgan.

Gananoque—Goal, Seguin; defence, La Sha and Robertson; centre, Wing; wings, Dickson and Bernsford; subs, Johnnie Wind, Lester Kenale and Bellie.

Referee—Jackson of Peterboro.

CAMPBELLFORD DEFAULTS BUT STILL WINS

Trenton Jrs. Taste Defeat at Hands of Northern Squad

GOOD ICE

Northerner's Default Due to Playing Two Men Not Elegible

Trenton, Jan. 4 (Special) — The Trenton juniors journeyed to Campbellford on Tuesday night and lost to them in a close game to the tune of 4 to 3, in twenty minutes overtime. The ice was excellent making the game fast throughout. I'm sure the fans or fifteen paid admission (for there surely wasn't more) enjoyed the game as their cheers at times (large made the rafters shake) but perhaps the rafters aren't very solid.

Bush for Campbellford was without a doubt star of both teams after playing eighty-seven minutes of the thirty minute overtime game he scored on Monday night was cut out last night as fresh as ever and played nearly all through the game without a sub. His stamina in the game go to show what a man in real condition is capable of. It would behoove some of our local players to copy from his book and acquire a little more condition. He was ably assisted by Rowe and Mc-Donald, Rowe getting the assist on the job. Heigh ho, what a neat six-minute penalty to — Dr. Dick Irvin, put the Leafs, Mr. Duncan, out of the running last night by cleanly checking the Leafs who are sailing along at the top of their heap, Detroit Cardinals, in Irvin's former job, repeat! Time and the official appointment would tell. And it would mark the third leader this year of the Maple Laughing Leafs, the first Godfrey Mathison of Winnipeg, having drop ped out of sight, Conacher before the start of the season, which, may be, he will regain with Toronto, the big defence man, hasn't been scoring two goals per game, if you know what I mean.

BLACK HAWKS SWAMP LEAFS

7-0 Trimming Leaves Canadians Only Two Points in Front

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 4.—(By Canadian Press)—Proud possessors of Maple Leafs' hopes of strengthening their position at the top of the Canadian division of the National Hockey League were shattered in Chicago last night when the fast Chicago Black Hawks went on a scoring rampage and blanked the Toronto entry 7-0.

Splitting up their goals in each of the first two periods before adding three more in the third, the Hawks' frame by scoring three times, Chicago clearly outplayed Leafs for the entire game and were fully deserved for their victory.

Paul Thompson, flashy wingman, added needed Hawk scoring punch when he scored probably have a second beat by the way he hit the ice, Bill Cook, Hawk coach, said after the game.

Third Period.

Opened by Bush getting the puck away from Begin on his own blue line and carrying it almost thirty after took the puck down shooting by Ross Wilkie, who scored over the top corner of the net. Trenton boys began to step and some Mattis scoring another on a pass from Richards, a minute before the end of the period bush scored on a pass from Hendy tying the game up.

First 10 Minutes Overtime.

Bush took a couple of shots in quick succession but failed to score Campbellford were now forcing the play. Both teams played hard and missed some sweet chances to score during the last ten minutes of overtime.

Second 10 Minutes Overtime.

After two minutes of play Bush secured scoring a pass from Hunley putting them done up. After that Campbellford played defensively taking shots and shooting the puck up the ice at every opportunity. Despite the valiant effort put up by the Trenton boys they were unable to score, Campbellford winning 4 to 3.

Campbellford—Goal, Roy Oddi; defence, Wilkes and Holmes; centre, Hendy; wings, Hunley and Bush; alternates, K. Oddie, Lambert, Bunyan and Goltzie.

Trenton—Goal, K. Chambers; defence, Rottian and Lambert; centre, Richards; wings, Dolan and Mattis; alternates, Willie, Begin, Richards.

Penalties—K. Oddie, Begin, and Holmes.

Kenneth (Bub) Davis of Herley Falls was the referee.

STRANGE RUMORS AFLOAT

In Montreal the other day I picked up a story to the effect that Emil Iverson, the "physical director" coach of the Chicago Black Hawks was due for a change of scenery. But nobody was willing to vouch for the rumor that I could find. Allied with this story was one that George Boucher, the veteran defence man, was slated to succeed Emil. In Toronto I heard something along the same line, but Arthur Dunn, until recently the coach of the Maple Leafs, was the man slated for the job. Heigh ho, what a neat six-minute penalty to — Dr. Dick Irvin, put the Leafs, Mr. Duncan, out of the running last night by cleanly checking the Leafs who are sailing along at the top of their heap, Detroit Cardinals, in Irvin's former job, repeat! Time and the official appointment would tell. And it would mark the third leader this year of the Maple Laughing Leafs, the first Godfrey Mathison of Winnipeg, having drop ped out of sight, Conacher before the start of the season, which, may be, he will regain with Toronto, the big defence man, hasn't been scoring two goals per game, if you know what I mean.

Shaking off the lethargic style of play, which was responsible for their loss against Queens last week, the Y's Men's Basketball team of Belleville, performed in a highly effective manner last night to win from the Kingston "Quintette" by the score of 41 to 30. Manager Stone City lads were never in the picture from the start of the game and the Belle boys were leading 21 to 8 at half time.

Shortly after the second half opened Drew, Kingston's star defensive player, was forced to leave to the fact, that he injured his ankle. Although McPhee, Calnerr and Ridley did their best to overcome the lead they played a brand of basketball which was not in keeping with their reputation. Farley Faulkner was the high scorer of the night, with a total of 12 points, but he was closely followed by Tom Watt, who scored, 11 points. The Belle boys showed all played stellar basketball with the Drew, Watt and Faulkner trio at the game with the score standing 45 to 30 in favor of the locals.

The line-up and individual scores were:

Kingston Y.M.C.A. — Allen 3; Vince, 13; McMahon 0; Buck 4; Drew, 0; Ridley, 0; Total 30.

Y's Men—Davison 8; Faulkner, 12; Watt, 11; Weir, 10; Ridley; Snell 0; Total 43.

Referee—Bill Hall. Umpire—Mercer; Ridley; Snell 0; Total 43.

The Queen's Juvenile Church league team won from the St. George's Juvenile Church league team in a game that decided the honors for the first half of the season. The game, however, was a fast fought, close checking affair with the winners having put a slight margin over their less fortunate opponents. The win by St. George's ensures them of a place in the final playoff series for the championship of the Juvenile Division.

St. Joseph's —I. Tobe, A. Tobe 2; Scott 5; Follwell; Samuels Total 7.

St. George's —Barrigan; Burley; Saunders 3; Power; Churchill; Edwards; Angell; Adams; Morris. Total 10.

CAPONE STAR HERO IN 1931

Soviet Premier Cites Him in Speech of Capitalist Society

MOSCOW, Feb. 4.—(UP)—"Scarface" Al Capone was the "outstanding American hero of 1931," Premier Viacheslav Molotov told a National conference of the Communist party in a speech on "the moral decay of capitalistic society."

Paradoxically declaring that foreign specialists will be invited to collaborate in the second five-year plan more than ever before, the Soviet Premier said that the gangster Capone in the American scene was a distinct symptom of the decay of capitalist countries.

The Chicago gangster received 1,500,000 columns of publicity in the American press, which was more than was given President Hoover in 1931, Molotov declared.

The Premier's speech was made to the conference on the 5-year plan, but was not published until to-night.

KINGSTON SQUAD TO BE OPPOSITION

Always Hard Nuts to Crack on Local

Headed by Frank Bellringer, Kingston's star hockey player, the Kingston Frontenacs invade the Belleville Arena to-night to battle with the local Intermediates, when second and third place will be the Friday night. The Frontenacs have always given the local hockeyists a battle to the last ditch and Friday night will be no exception to the rule, from all appearance of the Frontenac Intermediates is in for a battle and a lot of new faces will be seen by the fans.

They have Cunningham, just a young lad, but, one who performs in the section of the province, is the same boy who played in Kingston, against the Frontenacs when they had a real standing player. Frank Bellringer, Tommy Boys of baseball fame and Harold Buck, the ex-Belleville athlete are the starting forwards with Beanham, Thurley, Muchmore and Dougall doing the relief work. The Frontenacs are a fast skating team and are running the locals very close for the second round or the league ladder. No love is lost between the two clubs and a bitter struggle is expected.

At The Belle

ROMANTIC ADVENTURE IN "SUICIDE FLEET"

High adventure of the blood-tingling, imagination-stirring type is revealed in "Suicide Fleet," RKO Pathe's spectacular special staged with the co-operation of the United States Navy, which Manager or Forhan announces as the next attraction at the Belle Theatre commencing Sunday.

The picture combines a great romantic adventure story, excellent performances by an outstanding cast, pictorial direction and photography, and amazing production values. Whole divisions of navy destroyers and submarines are used in the sensational sea battles in which two clipper ships are actually sunk by real shells from the submarines sending the shattered parts of the vessels leaping thousands of feet in the air. The spectacular photographic shots give audiences an illusion of really which never before has been done in task and builds steadily toward a tremendous climax. There is plenty of comedy and sufficient, but not too much, romance.

The story deals with the war adventures of pals who leave their Jersey lagoon fishing smacks to join the Navy. They all love the same girl, thereby creating the romance rivalry in the final crisis.

Principal players are Jack Holt, Boyd, Robert Armstrong, James Gleason, Ginger Rogers, Harry Bannister and numbers of others of the imposing cast.

Ruth Wilkie and Helen Morgan in a novel melodious gem titled, "Sweethearts on Parade," featuring clever and funny comedy entirely unexpected in pictures today could have done justice to the sparkling Noel Coward play as have this grand Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical triumph at the Belle to-night.

At The Capitol

SETH PARKER, CEPHUS AND LIZZIE

The Capitol was the scene of silence yesterday afternoon when Seth Parker and his Jonesport neighbors was screened four times in a comedy feature.

Manager Holmes, who is responsible for taking our readers into the Capitol's confidence through this column, tells us that the simplicity of Seth Parker is the key to their sensation in the most sophisticated screen entertainment.

Seth Parker is but twenty-eight years of age, but he does twenty-eight years he has accomplished more than many film stars—he has won his way to tens of millions of hearts through the very thing which made "Way Back Home" so appealing, old and young alike—simplicity!

In these days of hurry-scurry, when an hour is not a minute, we often wish the world would stop for a while, and allow us to catch up with the bewildering lead provided by Seth Parker. "Way Back Home" stops the world's motion for sixty-five minutes, and in that time we sit back of our seat and rest contented by, glad in the knowledge, that there is more of a cow's hair to be found in the rattle of a canopener." In other words, "Way Back Home" is refreshing.

Seth Parker remains at the Capitol today (Silverware Gift Night) and daily at 2:45, 7:15 and 9:00.

GELATINE RECIPES

Have you ever noticed how many recipes call for the use of gelatine? Desserts and salads made with gelatine seems to be growing more and more popular—I suppose because so many kitchens now are equipped with means of refrigeration. At all events, that is Miss Helen G. Campbell's belief. I noticed an article of hers a short while ago in The Chatelaine, of which she is dietitian and Institute Director, in which she gave some useful hints on how to use gelatine.

The making of gelatine dishes is a simple process but success is assured only if certain precautions are taken. The recipe should be carefully followed; for correct proportions is essential to good texture. The proportion of gelatine and liquid is important. If fruit is used it should be drained, then the juice measured and used to replace the same quantity of the liquid stated in the recipe. For instance, if one cupful of liquid is called for and the fruit yields two tablespoonfuls of juice, decrease the first amount by two tablespoonfuls and add the fruit juice to make the proportion correct. If fresh fruit is used, it should be prepared, sprinkled with sugar, drained, and the juice measured and used in the same way. A sustained cold temperature causes gelatine to stiffen and become tough. This point should be taken into consideration if the dish is made a considerable time in advance and kept in a mechanical refrigerator or in another place of a very low even temperature. In that case, it is best to use rather less gelatine than the amount stated.

Gelatine is easy to digest and has distinct food value. It gives body to many mixtures, a smooth even texture to others, and it binds ingredients in a pleasing way. Here is a recipe for a delicious desert—Peach Bavarian.

Peach Bavarian

1 tablespoonful of gelatine
1-4 cupful of cold water
1 cupful of peach syrup
1 tablespoonful of lemon juice
1-4 cupful of sugar
1-4 cupful of whipping cream
3-4 cupful of diced peach pulp

Soften the gelatine in cold water. Dissolve sugar in hot peach syrup, and pour over softened gelatine. Add lemon juice and stir well.

When the mixture begins to set, fold in the drained peach pulp, and the cream, whipped stiff. Pour into a mold which has been lined with halves lady fingers. Chill until firm. Serves six.

Raspberry, strawberry or pineapple may be substituted for the peach pulp and juice.

Weddings

HUTCHINSON—RISHEA

PETERBOROUGH, Feb. 4.—The marriage was solemnized at eight o'clock Wednesday morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, by the Rev. J. J. O'Brien, of Josephine Delina Rishea, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amie Rishea, of King George street, and Walter Hutchinson of Calgary, Alberta, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hutchinson of Calgary.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of white crepe, trimmed with lace, a white veil caught with orange blossoms, and white slippers and hose. She carried a bouquet of pale pink carnations, and her only ornament was a gold cross, the gift of her grandmother, Mrs. H. Rishea.

The bridesmaid, Miss Olive Rishea of Peterborough, wore powder blue crepe with matching hat, slippers and hose. She carried a bouquet of corn-lae carnations.

Edward Rishea, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. The table was crossed with crepe and satin ribbons and centred with the three-storey bride's cake. Roses were in silver vases.

In the evening, a dance was held for the bridal party and their guests at the home of the bride's parents where Mr. and Mrs. Hutchinson will reside.

Social Evening

The members of Cannifton Anglican Women's Guild and their friends held a social evening in Cannifton Town Hall on Tuesday, February second.

There was a very large and enthusiastic gathering and thanks are due to Mr. and Mrs. Webb of Cannifton, under whose supervision the arrangements were so admirably carried out.

The Beauty Box

There's a terrible sounding name for sagging tummy muscles. It is enteroptosis. The medical profession, from the members of which we receive much interesting information these days affirms that fifty per cent of the middle aged women have it. The percentage of younger women afflicted with it is as small as it should be. There is a simple remedy. Lie flat on the back on floor or bed, hands under the hips. Lift the legs slowly until you are standing on the back of your neck. Lower legs slowly. Not easy the first few sessions, but, as muscles strengthen, there will be less discomfort and not so much lamenting.

Plastic surgery puts outstanding ears in their place where they belong. No need of any woman suffering from this affliction. Large lobes can be trimmed down too, though only the surgeon who has the eye of an artist should attempt this remodeling job. A single incision and a few stitches, unpouch puffs that form under the eyes. Beauty seekers considering surgical relief for facial defects must beware of charlatans, must find a surgeon who stands high in the medical profession.

Sinoe frocks have got bosomy, corset makers have created flooding bra garments with upper stories shaped with pleated fabric that gives the effect of the normal, rounded bust. A consolation to the girl who cultivated the boyish shape until she didn't have any, any more.

Red hands are a common winter difficulty, resulting from the use of harsh soaps, not drying the hands after washing, or exposing the hands to cold atmosphere. They whiten and improve by avoiding these conditions, by anointing freely three times a day with a healing hand lotion, by covering with lanolin at night and encasing in large white cotton gloves.

A common habit is that of standing with the body weight on one foot. Very bad. It weakens the ankles, throws the spinal column out of alignment, weakens the abdominal muscles. Mustn't do.

A perfectly fitting brassiere is not only silhouette help to the bearwright, but it provides comfortable support. This is the day of trimness; quivering flesh is out of the modern picture. Plump ladies need to be well harnessed.

TRADING SLOW ON STANDARD

Penny Specialties Fail to Make Headway on Thursday

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 4.—Quietly irregular action marked forenoon trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today, with issues and gains evenly divided and moves or less unimportant at midday. Activity in penny specialties, which boosted volume yesterday, was somewhat reduced.

Base Metals were firm, Noranda and Nickel showing small advances when taken. Dome slipped 30 to 9.75 but other higher-priced golds were firmer. Oils were unchanged over at 56, off another 5, and other silvers were inactive.

Among cheaper stock Ventures firmed a cent but Sylvanite and Buffalo sold slightly lower. Ribago was again traded in fair volume and moved up a fraction. Small gains also appeared in Moffatt-Hall and Richfield issues.

Peninsular Pete, reacting a fraction to 6, showed the only change in the oils.

DISTILLERS STOCK DOWN

Dividend Elimination is Cause of Break in Stock

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 4.—Distillers-Seagram accounted for most of the activity on Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. The stock came out at 5, weakened slightly and then towards noon broke precipitately. Turnover increased as the price broke sharply from 4 1-4 to 4 per share and for a time the market was altered into some semblance of life. Later official word was received from Montreal the dividend would not be paid.

The other most active issue was Dominion Stores, which, concentrated business in one section of the floor as both distillers and Dominion Motors are traded in the same quarter of the curb. Dominion Motors sold uniformly this morning at 43 a share, unchanged from last night.

The rest of the market sold irregularly lower in very dull trading. Nickel came out higher but eased slightly in the second hour. Burt was down a point. Page-Hersey, Ford of Canada, and Loblaw "A" eased small fractions, Chemnickel Gas dropped a point.

C.P.R. and Smelters were up about 1-4 points each. Over 500 shares Hinde and Dauche changed hands at $1.

EXCHANGE RATES

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 4.—(By the Canadian Press)—Exchange rates at noon today were as follows:

Pound Sterling in Montreal, 3.96 1-4; Pound Sterling in New York 3.42 1-4; Canadian Dollars New York 87 1-8.

ne tonight and was content to sit back with the rest and do my little share of the work, nevertheless it was a pleasant surprise to me. I want to thank all of you, and I wish also to extend my hearty welcome to the new men of the Board. With the new compliment of workers I feel that we can accomplish a great many things this coming year and while it may be a trying one and one of the hardest we have yet had to face, I still think that we will emerge in as good a shape as ever were. While it behooves us to practise economy in all our departments, still we should not forget that there are many improvements that can be made and improvements which are essential to the well being of the animals and the school's in general. Once more Mr. Chairman I will thank you for that I intend to do my best."

Standing committees were chosen as follows:

COST OF TOWELS

were very, very dirty, and a sort of merry-go-round of washing and drying resulted. "I was up here in this building for over eight years as one of the janitors and myself got to know towels pretty well," said the towelling. I remarked to him about the number that was apparently being used. Then the janitor told me that some of the children were more wasteful of towels than were others. He cited the case of one young boy he said used to commence washing his hands and later drying them in the assembly hall in which where he again started to wash. The first time he saw him use two or three towels, the next time three more, and then he was apprehended if he again washed his hands a few moments later and used three or four more. Some children were about twelve towels used by the one boy.

"I have tried in every way I know how to check the use of towels for years," stated Mr. MacLaurin, "and I considerably favor the slogan system," asked. However, Mr. Harvey was a strong adherent to the policy, that the dollar amount be given. "Games are a real issue in any school and we have a good bunch if we let ourselves fall behind any of them. Why our pupils could beat any other school at any game if they only had some sort of support from us. It's all right for some of the ratepayers to oppose it but we aren't all on the shelf. Those girls have beaten all nearby teams and should receive given more consideration."

Chairman of the Board Allan Schryver:—"I think that physical activity is one of the best methods of any curriculum and an essential part of every training. Everything is to be taken into consideration in all matters this year, but I think we should not be overlooked in some other department. I am in favor of giving at least one hundred dollars of the amount asked for, with the proviso, that should the girls be winning, up to the full amount asked for have been followed some of the students around to make sure that they used them only as towels and not to be seen signs hung up and everything else—I don't think any one could do more."

The matter was finally referred to the Sports and Recreation Committee.

Girls Ask Grant

Another matter which occupied the attention of the Board was a grant asked for by the girls' basketball team. One hundred and fifty dollars was asked for that they might be able to attend out-of-town matches and to entertain other teams when they visit the city besides other numerous incidental expenses.

Mr. Lent was opposed to the move of granting any money at all to the team. "When I went to school," remarked Mr. Lent, "we didn't have any funds for games and we made out all right. I think some action be taken in this matter—or if we do have to give them some that the grant be cut if necessary."

Mr. Harvey:—"I hope that the Board do not consider me as opposed to sport—contrary I did appreciate and prompted me to adopt the attitude I had taken."

The amount of one hundred dollars, with the proviso that not up to one hundred and fifty would be forthcoming if needed, was finally passed by the committee.

Break Into School

Further communications included one from Mr. Kelk, principal of King George School, New locks were required on that school. For the last week thieves have been in the habit of breaking into the school and stealing considerable damage. Also material to the amount of sixty dollars had been stolen in the past few days. The matter was referred to the Sites, Building and James Gleason, Ginger Roberts and Robert Armstrong in "Suicide Fleet", opening at the Belle, Friday.

REJECT PLAN

Indications Japan Will Submit Counter Peace Terms

Japan, adamant in its refusal of the peace terms proposed by the powers, indicated yesterday it was preparing to submit counter proposals.

Concerted efforts of Britain and United States, supported by France, Italy and Germany, to induce Japan to China appeared to have lost ground, still Tokio's position was firm.

Chinese troops, reported to have sunk a Japanese destroyer in defending the Woosung forts, were early this (Thursday) morning subjected to barely resisting a new attack on the forts and a Methodist mission chapel. Several shells were reported to have fallen inside the International settlement.

Japanese troops were waiting daylight to enter Harbin, centre of Soviet influence in Manchuria, before crushingly defeating the Chinese.

At Geneva came an intimation that Japan was ready to fight against the League of Nations under article 15 of the covenant.

A despatch from Tokio today said it was definitely reported that a division of Japanese troops was on the way to Shanghai.

Fighting at Shanghai.

By E. R. ECKTON

United Press Staff Correspondent

Shanghai, China, Feb. 4.—(Thursday)—(UP)—Japanese marines, replused in an aerial and artillery attack on Chinese positions at Shanghai yesterday, renewed the assault with greater force in an offensive against the Chapei district.

The heaviest guns yet used in the battle of Shanghai were brought in to action, and a 6-inch gun brought into action, and also engaged a Chinese armored car west of the Lunghua aerodrome.

The fighting was increased in intensity at 12.20 p.m. More Chinese guns had been brought into action, and the Chinese were finding the range of the Japanese.

Since 11 a.m. Japanese destroyers have been bombarding the Chinese from Woosung, from Shanghai, forts intending to destroy completely the fortifications which were reported heavily restored.

The Japanese concurrently were attempting an encircling movement to isolate the Chinese. And United States marines and soldiers of the fire indicated that the Chinese were holding their position.

The Japanese were firing from the vicinity of the Hongkew wharf area of the International settlement. They also were operating from the Standard oil dock, it could be determined, the machine gun and rifle detachments were used in an advance despite the bombardment of the Chinese positions.

Shells Fall in Settlement.

Shells continued to fall in the settlement, and flurries of rain and snow, in addition to fog, kept the Japanese aeroplanes from an early renewal of bombardment of the Chinese, who had been heavily reinforced overnight.

Unable to Accept Terms.

By ELMER BABB

Associated Press Staff Correspondent

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

Tokio, Feb. 4.—(Thursday)—(AP)—Japan will inform the great powers today that she is unable to accept the terms of their proposals to settle the conflict at Shanghai.

Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa said this morning that Japan would not agree to the powers' suggestions in their present form, and that he was making counter-proposals.

The particular cause of the difficulty is the fifth item of the plan. This item provides for the settlement of all outstanding controversies between China and Japan in the spirit of the Kellogg-Briand pact and the League of Nations resolution of Dec. 9, which invites the assistance of the neutrals to investigate the conflict.

The Foreign Minister declared Japan never could agree to outside intervention in Sino-Japanese negotiations over the Shanghai and Manchurian questions.

This was in line with his statement yesterday that "refusal to permit any third party to take part in ancient rifles. They were blue coats with a determined and confident air.

There were no male soldiers in the vicinity, where shrapnel fell frequently as the fighting between the Japanese and Chinese continued. The women said they were guarding the road to prevent a possible Japanese advance on Chapei, to Shanghai's native city, where the Chinese forces were bombarded and the Japanese marines landed.

It is said there never was a trifle of healthful discovered but what somebody some sort of an idiot. This I am not prepared or qualified to discuss, but there is this I do say, that no intelligent man will live in this great-great out-o-doors and study the creatures that occupy it before man has any control over them; combined with this formation of the laws and the regularity of the sun, moon and whispering stars, without being compelled to believe there is an over-ruling Power.

Few come with me to the wilds of Northern Ontario and let them be so, or think before they do. Above all I ask you to forget all book knowledge and look for yourself at the peas down the old grown up tumble-down road where we hear the chirping of the little brook known as Beaver Creek. Here we go on the right, and step over the large stepping stones that I am well acquainted with. Here is a large stone about out in the road in front of us utterly out of place. Look underneath the covey flip upon the bushes and apparently look upon our party says "Why they are as tame as our barnyard fowl." Let us pause and stop on a brow of a hill and drink in that pure air of the north country. Here we can count from five to ten snow shoe rabbits and hear the rare Uncle Jack, why are these rabbits all white?" My reply has been that a sure sign of a change in the near future. Another question. Why are they all so large? Simply because they have never come into contact with man to learn that man will harm them, the same as a coward will sit around among the domestic animals and animals don't harm the cow-birds.

Yes, in Northern Ontario I have seen rabbits all white on the 20th of October, when there was little snow came and the woods were clothed in a white mantle that it was almost impossible to see the rabbits. On the following season the rabbits were all white on the 20th of November and there was no sign of snow but the frost had set in, and ask you does this rabbit possess the power to change its color, does a man power to change its color for protection against the enemy? In such like the case we must believe there is a greater Power than man, and that is the Great Nature, God-Creator or the Great Spirit. The same power that has given dowers of these so called wild creatures of the forests, and so on up the scale never right down the animal family to the squirrel, chipmunk, and even little cute little mouse which will carry wheat a hundred times its own weight and then climb eighty feet high in a tree and store away the wheat in his home for the winter.

But to me the most convincing evidence of a Supreme Power is expressed in the existence and habits of the monarch of the insect world. I have read several very flowery articles about the bee, and have likewise antiem on the mouse and if my view of it is as laughable as the articles discussed in political speeches, he explained, were the bee to receive a dollar for every payment for which did not begin until the 1st day of January next, or commission.

The commission, Premier Henry stated, would begin its sittings at the discretion of Hon. Mr. Justice Middleton, and the appointment of also vested in His Lordship's decision, the appointment of counsel to the necessary counsel to open the sittings and such assistants as might be required for him. The Premier had no idea he added, of the date when the first sitting of the commission would begin. He expressed pleasure at the appointment of Hon. Mr. Justice Middleton, describing His Lordship as a "painstaking man, adapted for such a task, which involved financial transactions.

Gold displaced coal as the most valuable British Isle country with a normal industry in 1931.

Cool Million Lost By Cut in Milk Price

Toronto, Feb. 4.—Farmers of Ontario will lost about $1,000,000 less annually through the cut in the price of milk in Toronto announced this week, Ernest H. Clarke, representing the North York Milk Producers' Association, yesterday told York County Council.

The drop in milk from $1.65 to $1.45 per cwt. delivered at the dairies, means a loss to the farmers of about $1,000,000 annually, and, incidentally, means that purchasing power at a time when the nation, and especially the farmer, is in a state of economic distress," he said.

Henry Expresses Faith in Activities of Hydro Directors

Payment of $50,000 to John Aird Jr., son-in-law of the Dominion Steel Corporation and Dominion Corporation by the Ontario Hydro Commission will be investigated by Hon. Mr. Justice W. R. Middleton of the Supreme Court of Ontario, sitting as a Royal Commission, it was announced last night by Premier George S. Henry following the Hydro executive meeting.

In a written statement released by the premier at conclusion of the council, he stressed that he had every confidence in the government in both the commission and the administration. The statement continued: "Insinuations" had been made which it was felt, had never been in evidence in the public mind. Because of the success of a public organization such as hydro depended upon public confidence, the government had decided the fullest possible inquiry of such matters should be made.

Following the receipt of the Aird payment statement, the premier stated in an interview that the probe merely fulfilled his promise of last August when he stated an investigation of the facts would be made into the payment to Mr. Aird. Payment of $150,000 to the Canadian Corporation to Mr. Aird would not be investigated, he said, because it was that had nothing to do with the Hydro Commission and was a matter solely between Mr. Aird and the Beauharnois organization.

JAPAN'S SHIPS RAIN SHELLS ON WOOSUNG

Three Destroyers Used in Bombardment of Fort

PLANES ACTIVE

Bomb North Station at Chapei This Afternoon

Shanghai, Feb. 4 (AP)—Three Japanese destroyers moved close and shell fire on the Chinese forts at Woosung again today, while in Shanghai itself, on the river front Chinese and Japanese troops ripped at each other with field pieces and machine guns.

Japanese planes had their own under the heavy bombardment today as they did yesterday, when at one time they were reported to have dropped their bombs on Japanese to have been flattened out.

Japanese destroyers which took place between 11 o'clock and noon, an eyewitness reported. Two of the destroyers crept up close to the forts, he said, apparently in order to draw fire from the Chinese guns. The chief response from the Chinese, however, came from the machine gunners on Soochow Creek.

"When I arrived, the observer said, "one of the destroyers apparently had been hit and was beached. But it got off later and steamed down the river, headed for the English Channel, nearly six miles off Portland Bill.

The vessel virtually gives the lie to the report that a mine struck by the destroyer Tyrrell with powerful apparatus which is used in daily dives.

Reports received here indicated the battleship was located some time after 10.30 p.m. last night at a point 10 miles south of Portland Bill, rock promontory off which it went ashore in 1906, and remained there.

THEFT CHARGE IS PREFERRED

Has Carefree Holiday on Money Allegedly Extracted

Toronto, Oct., Feb. 4 — Arthur E. Noble, 21, pleaded guilty today and charged with theft of $1,-770 from the treasury of Central Saving Bank here, when he stepped off a train after what police described as a carefree holiday, embracing sextuple rides and race track gambling at the Southern United States.

The thefts were said to have been carried on systematically during the month of August, September, October and November, when he was employed by the bank.

Think Japan is in Secret League

Former British Labor M. P. Declares Russia and France Backing Her

New York, Feb. 4.—J. M. Kenworthy, former Labor member of the House of Commons and retired lieutenant-commander in the British navy, declared yesterday Great Britain believed Japan is in secret league with France and Russia in her "seizure of Manchuria and designs on China property."

"Oh, I know that sounds sensational," he said, "and I know it has been denied by France. But we believe it just the same, and have our reasons for our convictions.

"As long as the militarist party is on top in Japan, the Government will endeavor to carry out its immediately ambitious plan of aggrandisement and conquest.

"That plan, we think, has five phases. The first has been accomplished with the seizure of all Manchuria. The second is in process of accomplishment. It is the capture of Shanghai, Nanking and the Yangtze valley. The third will be the occupation of Siam and its littoral. The fourth will be the seizure of Indo-China, and the fifth will be the conquest of India."

M-2 LOCATED IS REPORTED

Divers Try to Reach Craft—Destroyer Finds Submarine

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The Admiralty announced last night that the submarine M-2, missing since it dived a week ago yesterday with sixty-one men aboard, had been located at the mouth of the English Channel, nearly six miles off Portland Bill.

The vessel virtually gives the lie to the report that a mine struck by the destroyer Tyrrell with powerful apparatus which is used in daily dives.

Reports received here indicated the battleship was located some time after 10.30 p.m. last night at a point 10 miles south of Portland Bill, rock promontory off which it went ashore in 1906, and remained there.

Loan Rate of Interest High Declares Hepburn

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.— Criticism of the high rate of interest, 8 per cent, applied to the recent $5,000,000 bond issue by the Ontario Government, was voiced by Mitchell F. Hepburn, Provincial Liberal Leader, during an interview today. "At a time when we have more money in the saving banks than ever before, and when there are few opportunities of making safe investments, the Ontario Government has raised the interest rate for public borrowing to 6 per cent," the Liberal leader declared. The general effect will be to force all municipalities making similar bond issues to offer the same high rate before going on to the money market. It is a very fine gesture for the money-lenders, but very bad for the hard-pressed taxpayers of the province, who are demanding retrenchment."

Criticise Government Over Poultry Disease

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 4.—Criticism of the Ontario Department of Agriculture for its alleged failure to take steps to control the poultry disease situation was voiced yesterday by the Canadian National Poultry Recording Association in convention here.

The Association claimed it had realized the seriousness of the Poultry Disease situation and had frequently brought it to we attention of the department without any definite results.

Prescott Rector Chosen on Fourth Ballot By Kingston Delegates UNEXPECTED

New Prelate is Graduate of Trinity—Born at Portland

KINGSTON, Feb. 4.—Archdeacon John Lyons, rector of St. John's Church, Prescott, is Bishop-elect of the Diocese of Ontario. He was chosen to succeed the Right Rev. Mark Hunter, who recently resigned to become Bishop of Huron Diocese. The Synod met in special session Wednesday with Bishop Sweeny of Toronto, presiding, and on the fourth ballot Archdeacon Lyons was the choice of the 61 clerical and lay delegates present. Thirty-one clerical and 24 lay votes were required for election, and when the fourth ballot was taken at 5.30 o'clock Archdeacon Lyons was given a decisive majority. The votes were as follows:

	First Ballot
	Clerical	Lay
Dean Broughall, Hamilton	10	8
Dean Broughall, Hamilton	10	7
Reverend C. F. Whalley, Brockville	8	6
Archdeacon Lyons, Prescott	7	8
Bishop De Pencier	4	1
Archdeacon Coleman, Kingston	4	4
Canon Herbert, Woodcock Toronto	2	3
Rev. W. E. Kidd, Ancaster	1	2
Scattered votes given to several other clergymen
	Second Ballot
Craig	16	11
Broughall	11	10
Lyons	11	14
Whalley	11	6
	Third Ballot
Lyons	21	23
Craig	16	8
Broughall	11	11
Whalley	8	3
	Final Ballot
Lyons	43	33
Craig	6	4
Broughall	6	3
Whalley	1	1

Archdeacon Lyons was warmly appointed when he was declared by the Bishop of Toronto as coadjutor Bishop of Huron. He was chosen to the Synod meeting near dreaming 20 years ago, and has been running, and in thanking the Synod for the honor conferred upon him asked for their prayers and their co-operation.

Bishop-elect Lyons was born at Portland, Ont., on the Rideau, 54 years ago. He was educated at and received with the Canadian Pacific Railway, where he is a clerical assistant in Toronto. Then he decided to enter the ministry of the Anglican church and graduated from Trinity, Toronto, where he graduated as Master of Arts and Bachelor of Divinities in various parts of Ontario Diocese, Perth; Ont., St. Paul's, Caledonia, Picton; St. Thomas', Belleville; St. John's, Prescott. He has had married children in all places where he has ministered, and his family numbers three sons and one daughter. In the administrative duties of his office he has been specially selected, to be most popular. Mrs. Lyons' home was in Portland. They have two daughters, residing at home.

The Synod was opened in St. George's Cathedral this morning, when a service was conducted by Bishop Sweeny, who administered Holy Communion to the clerical and lay delegates.

The scrutineers appointed for the election in St. George's Hall were Judge E. H. McLean, George Hague and Colonel A. Gray, for the laity, and Canon Creegan, Rural Dean Bryan and Rural Dean Cooke for the clergy.

Judge E. H. McLean brought up the matter of the salary to be paid the Bishop-elect. After some discussion a resolution was passed unanimously: "In the opinion of this Synod the initial stipend of the new Bishop shall be the same as the present Episcopal rate, but if in any one year this does not amount to $4,500 the Synod will supplement it with such amount as made up this total from the general fund. A free house and $500 for travelling expenses are included."

The New Girl

by H. Louis Raybold

There are disadvantages even in being a star player on the Varsity eleven and Peter Randall constantly tried at having his girl at the moment escorted to the weekly grid from contest by other men, because he was unable to take her himself, was expressing his feelings loudly and at length to his male friends.

"I sweat and toil, providing my bit of the afternoon entertainment so that such loafers as Russ Madden can sit beside Jane and say all the things to her I want to be saying myself!"

Jim chuckled. "What you need, big boy, is a proxy! Some disinterested party to fill your shoes and prevent others from so doing. Some one like, myself, for instance."

"You!" Peter snorted. "Why would I want a lovelorn devil like yourself butting in, especially with a susceptible little vamp like Jane!"

"You forget—" and Jim waved his pipe towards the picture of a demurely pretty girl looking at him from the dresser. "My affections are already engaged. I'm the safest man you could employ."

Peter stared without really seeing her as the girl whom both he and Jim had danced with at one time in the high school days back home. Then, "I've a mind to take you up!" he declared. "I've a hunch Russ is set to ask Jane to the big game. If you could hook in before he does—"

"I'll do that very thing!" promised Jim. "Watch my smoke and have no worry. Dear old Alma Mater, depending on you to win its annual classic, cannot have any mental disturbance curbing your style!"

Twenty-four hours later Peter's scheme appeared to be well-started towards the desired end.

"I let no grass grow under my feet, Peter," Jim announced, as he strolled into their quarters just shy of midnight.

Peter looked blankly up from a sheaf of scattered notes on Victorian poetry. "What d'ye mean?"

"I took myself around to Jane's this evening, bid-slayed young Madden, and dated her for the little scrap. Behold in me an approved and accepted escort!"

"Wait—" Peter was outwardly all admiration. "When you undertake a job, I can see you don't shirk on it."

"Not I. And I'm doing more even than you asked of me. I'm taking her to the Sock and Buskin play tomorrow evening and the informal assembling the night after."

Peter frowned slightly. "See here, Jim, I don't expect you to spend every blasted moment—"

Jim waved a nonchalant hand. "Trials all right. I'll do that much more than to knock some of the conceit out of Madden, as well as to oblige you, Furthermore, Jane herself, is her own reward for taking it around a bit. Forget it and feel free to devote your time to jacking up your marks to a point where they don't threaten your continued career as a football player."

It seemed to Peter that the face of Ellis Baily on the dresser changed its expression slightly. It occurred to him that perhaps Baily would not care to have Jim thrown too constantly with a girl almost as attractive as herself, especially when she was not on the job as a counter-irritant.

"It won't be long now until the game!" he said to himself. "After which I'll do my own escorting."

But empires have lost their emperors, towns have been razed by hurricanes, girls have transferred their girlish affections from one man to another in less than three weeks. Peter, meeting Jim and Jane on three separate occasions, could not but observe their complete absorption in one another. Strangely enough the cessation of the effect of such absorption in his relation to Jim and Sally worried him more than in his relation to Jane and himself.

Sally was such a trusting, sincere and gay little soul. If anything should happen to wreck her joy in life, he would never forgive himself.

In a moment of intense self-reproach at his part in what was going on, he despatched a hasty note to his sister back home.

"Dear Sis:

Why not drive on for the game? Bring Sally Jenks along with you. Am sending tickets. Surprise party on Jim.

Peter."

The days immediately preceding the game left little time for energy for Peter to dwell on his personal affairs. He ate, drank and dreamed signals, trick plays, strategic formations—all aimed to bring victory glory and fabulous gate receipts to his college.

He arranged with Jim and Jane to meet them afterwards on the steps of Monroe Hall. He knew something which they did not know. His sister had ignored his letter, then sent him a telegram that very morning.

"Really arriving for kick-off. Best of luck."

Game days have evolved a vocabulary all their own. This particular Saturday could have run down the entire word list and needed the dictionary for additions. The foliage was brilliant, autumnal, gorgeous; the stands were gay, kaleidoscopic colorful.

Not that Peter had leisure to appreciate the scenery. Mostly he was but part of a determined, perspiring, mo ling machine desperately a crashing equally mo ling, perspiring and determined.

Yet perhaps at that tense instant when his steady toe sent the contested pigskin over the goal for the winning point his thoughts may have winged to the stands where sat his room mate, his sister, his girl of the moment, and his old, old love.

At any rate, when everything was quite gloriously over, he found his way to Monroe Hall. First of all, he saw Sally and his heart turned over inside of him. Gosh, what had he ever seen in Jane that dimmed his memory of Sally? Before he could speak, she ran over to him and held out both her hands in greeting. "What do you know, Peter?" she whispered. "Three days ago I broke my engagement to Jim, and already he's gotten him another girl!"

But it wasn't Peter's fault that his little scheme had such a sad and fairy tale ending!

THE END.

Dean of Manchester Follows Old Custom

Manchester, England (By The Canadian Press)—The Dean, of Manchester, Very Rev. Dr. Garfield Williams, made the usual Christmas pilgrimage around the parishioners in this city, visiting the theatres and having a visit with the performers at the Hippodrome behind the scenes. This is a custom long established by the Deans of Manchester, the idea being to take New Year's greetings to the players. Dr. Williams' first rounds began at the Opera House on Dec. 29, when he looked around and said: "Mr. Laye, Desiree Ellinger, W. H. Berry, George Robey and other important artists.

At the Hulme Hippodrome, which he visited before the performance, Dr. Williams was much interested in the preparations for the opening scene of "Little Red Riding Hood", and suitably commented to be photographed in the centre of a group of the company. "I want you people to know," he said, "that the church realizes the splendid work you are doing by helping to keep the world cheerful in these dark times." The Dean then visited the Second Palace, the Crown Theatre, Eccles, and the Salford Hippodrome.

Dr. Williams also went to the Prince's Theatre, remaining for a time to see some of Jay Laurier's fooling and Clarice Vance's singing before proceeding to the next house.

THE BEASTS OF TARZA,N No. 30.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)—

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

For several weeks, Jane Clayton had been kept a prisoner aboard the "Kincaid." That fateful night when, alone, she had gone to the ship, hoping to find her baby and her husband, seemed years ago to her. Instead, she had found herself locked by Nikolas Rokoff in a cabin. In spite of her tearful entreaties she was still held captive and could learn nothing of her loved ones.

During this time the Swede cook had brought her food, but he, too, remained deaf to all her questions. Then one morning from her cabin port she saw her husband being rowed to the shore and the ship once more proceeded upon its way. Three days from the spot where Tarzan had been marooned the "Kincaid" came to anchor in the mouth of a great river, and presently Rokoff came to Jane's cabin.

After telling her what they had done with Tarzan, he demanded her personal cheque for a large sum. This, he said, would guarantee her safety and return to England. "If you refuse," he added, remember, I have your son." And the evil face told that Lady Greystoke wrote out the check and handed it to Nikolas Rokoff who received it with a grin of satisfaction upon his evil face.

But he was thoroughly angered at his failure to reduce the girl to terror. As Jane turned wearily away he stepped close to her. Suddenly his face convulsed with rage and desire. Like a wild beast he pounced upon her, with his fingers at her throat. At the same instant the door of the cabin opened noisily, and a man clothed in a dirty white stepped into the room.

WELLINGTON'S NEW ARENA TO OPEN TONIGHT

Official Opening of Ten Thousand Dollar Structure

PICTON SALARIES

Salaries of Two Officials Drop $50 Per Year

Picton, Feb. 4—(Special) —The village of Wellington, Prince Edward County, is known for the prosperousness of its farmers and the fine public buildings of which it may boast. The Consolidated School is one of the most modern of its kind in this section of the Province and to it go the pupils of the surrounding community. The Anne Durland Public Library was given by a former Wellington boy, Henry D. Saylor of Canada Dry Ginger fame. Its shutters are among the best and its places of business are a credit to the village in size.

The village also boasts of a fine central Community Park which has a beautiful natural skating rink covered top years ago by a Wellington boy, General Sir George Cory, now in India. The community now would be proud of its name of years ago.

And now, the village boasts one of the best covered rinks for a place of its size, in the Province. This rink became the centre Wednesday night when a team from the Y.M.C.A. will play the Wellington team which is taking part in the Prince Edward County League. On Friday evening, the final County League games are to be played there, when the fast Canadian General Electric team will meet Shannon and the Morrisville will play Bloomfield. These games are expected to pack the new arena to the roof.

The new arena is a tribute to the progressive community and its residents all money for the erection of this $10,000 building was secured at home by offering shares. Each subscriber was asked to give an instalment note calling for ten annual payments of $10 and each, without interest, the first instalment being due Nov. 1, 1931. Any subscriber might prepay the full ten instalments at any time not later than Jan. 15, 1932 by paying $80. This entitled that person to one fully paid share on stock in the company. Quite a number took advantage of this special offer.

The new rink is located near the Consolidated School in the heart of the village. It is a metal covered building, with ice surface is 180 by 80 feet while the building is 220 by 150 feet. It is hoped in the future to have curling there and perhaps indoor tennis courts and bowling. There is any amount of room for parking cars.

The Wellington Arena Company was formed with Norman Clinton as Secretary-Treasurer and M. B. Clark, E. L. Hubbs, T. L. Reed, Geo. Green, A. M. Thompson, H. D. Clemens and A. D. E. Alexander as Directors.

With very few exceptions all work on the building was done by local labor. The Company has taken as its slogan, "Build by the Community for the Community." It is indeed a real Community enterprise.

Town Council Makes Cuts

Following the lead of the County Council in reducing salaries of officials, the Town Council at their meeting last night asked the Clerk, R. H. Calnan, and the Treasurer, Jas. Gillespie, to accept reductions of $50 each per year. Both of these officers suppressed their willingness to co-operate in the attempt to put down expenses and agreed to the reduction. Members of the Council receive no pay, the salaries of the two constables will be dealt with at the next meeting when the officers will be given the chance to express their views.

To Aid Relief Work

A Minstrel Show is being prepared by local talent under the direction of Dr. Walton and will be given in the near future. The proceeds will go to the Central Relief Committee. Under the direction of Dr. Walton a good show may be expected. The Kiwanis Club will assist.

At the Kiwanis Club meeting on Tuesday night, Mr. Scott Montgomery, manager of the Bank of Commerce at Bloomfield, gave a fine talk on the British North American Act.

Privy Council Upheld Validity of Act

LONDON, Feb. 4.—(CP CABLE) —In a judgment delivered today the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council upheld the validity of the Security Frauds Prevention Act of Alberta.

Their Lordships allowed the appeal of Nat. A. Arthurs, Attorney-General of Alberta, and J. J. Frawley, solicitor for his department, against a ruling by Chief Justice Horace Harvey of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Alberta.

The Alberta decision upset by their Lordships today, was that the Alberta Security Frauds Prevention Act was ultra vires in part; that it had no application to a Dominion company.

Patrons of Cheese Factories Will Discuss Problems

All Year Cheese Production Will Be Under View

FACTORY MERGERS

Cheese factory patrons of Central Ontario are called upon to meet in Belleville, Thursday, Feb. 11th, when they will hear several prominent cheese business men.

The meeting is to discuss the advisability of organization of the patrons along lines similar to that which the makers possess.

The notice to the patrons is signed by officials of Sidney Town Hall, Pumpers, Harold and Moira Valley factories and by F. B. Malloy, secretary of Belleville Cheese Board.

Among matters to be discussed are:

Improvement and increase of quality and quantity of raw material supplied to cheese factories;

Consolidation or amalgamation of present manufacturing plants with a view of operation for 12 months a year so as to take care of surplus milk in the winter months;

Establishment of one or more central storage plants where cheese can be assembled, coded, weighed and graded before being sold and also to arrange for marketing.

Advisability of consolidation of milk and cream transportation, the extra expense of which are borne by the producer and consumer in the final analysis.

Holding of meetings and conventions, to consult and advise with the Federal and Provincial Departments of Agriculture on all matters pertaining to the cheesemaking industry.

Advisability of sending a deputation to Ottawa, to ask the Government to grant a bonus on all cheese exported in view of the fact that a subsidy of 50 per bushel is being granted to the wheat growers of Western Canada.

ONE PERCENT LEVY

WINNIPEG, Feb. 4.—A special tax levy of 1 per cent on wages which it is estimated will net the government $1,000,000 annually is planned as part of the Manitoba administration's new taxation programme it is said in Government circles yesterday. The tax would be substantially the same as that levied by British Columbia.

Use Tear Gas and Dynamite Bombs

Edmonton, Feb. 4—Master of the Arctic's swashbuckler trails, Captain W. R. "Wop" May, veteran war-plane flier, made off into the twilight of the northern barrens yesterday to aid Royal Canadian Mounted Police in capturing Albert Johnson, insane trapper who has killed a Mounty and wounded another in evading arrest in the Arctic Circle 80 miles south of Aklavik.

Captain May took off from Peri Mackenzie, little trading post in Northwest Alberta, on a hearty 200-mile flight to Aklavik. With him he had a Royal Mounted policeman and a supply of ammunition, with which, if necessary, Johnson will be blasted from the flat River semi-circular parapet where he now beamed in by three mounties.

May started for Aklavik a short time after the arrival at McMurray of Pilot C. H. (Punch) Dickins from Edmonton with the mail service.

It is thought May will arrive at Aklavik Friday. Actual attack on Johnson's lair will be delayed until Saturday.

May carried with him a supply of tear-gas bombs and at Aklavik will pick up specially-prepared explosive bombs. These will be flung from the machine as it speeds low over the mad trapper's stronghold where he has put up a two-gun defence and killed one mounty—Constable E. Millen—since he fled from his snow-banked cabin after police had blown off its roof with dynamite bombs.

Johnson, it was reported from Calgary last night was a teamster in that city in 1926. He quit to go prospecting for gold in the Yukon. He would be about 30 years old now, according to the Calgary report, which said Johnson seldom talked and at times was somewhat queer.

YOUNG MAN SHOT SELF

NEW TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 4.—Percy Ritchie, 27, yesterday, was found dead as the result of a gun shot in his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ritchie. A pistol lay beside him. No inquest will be held.

The earliest ranching leases in Western Canada were issued in April and May, 1882, and covered as much as 100,000 acres, the annual rent being one cent per acre.

HARBIN NOW WITHIN GRASP OF JAPANESE

Chinese Forces Retreat East and Japanese Unmolested

Changchun, China, Feb. 4—Harbin, the important railroad centre built on the banks of the Sungari three decades ago by Imperial Russia and now the headquarters of the Soviet Government's Manchurian Interests, was within the grasp of the Japanese today.

Thousands of fur-clad soldiers of the army of General Jiro Tamon, conqueror of Tsitsihar and Kowpangtze, encamped on the southern outskirts of the city in preparation for entry Thursday.

Cutting winds flurried the recently fallen snow as General Tamon's three trains advanced along the Chinese Eastern Railway 30 miles from the city of Shuangcheng to the southern suburbs of Harbin. The temperature was around 30 below zero Fahrenheit.

Recalling the costly night fighting that preceded the fall of Tsitsihar last November, the general decided to wait for daylight before occupying the city.

The Chinese forces under Ting Chao, who had declared he would hold Harbin at all costs, had retreated eastward and General Tamon looked for no resistance.

Reports that General Ting's forces had streamed out of Harbin in motor buses were received here shortly after Japanese despatches had announced the Chinese leader intended to continue his opposition to the extension of Japanese occupation throughout the north Manchuria.

Chinese Suffer Heavily

London, (Thursday) Feb. 4—Harbin, Manchurian metropolis to the Daily Mail today said that the 28th and 36th Chinese brigades suffered 1,000 casualties in Harbin alone as Japanese troops south of Harbin on Wednesday morning. The Chinese were in full retreat, the despatch said.

MELLON ENVOY TO GT. BRITAIN

United States Secretary Accepts Highest Position

Washington, Feb. 4—Secretary Andrew Mellon of the United States Treasury last night accepted the Ambassadorship to Great Britain.

The acceptance by Secretary Mellon, who has served under three Presidents beginning with the Harding administration, was announced by President Hoover.

Mr. Mellon, earlier in the day had intimated that inquiries that he post had been offered him, that he had not given the matter his mind as to whether he would accept it.

The President in announcing that the veteran Secretary of the Treasury would succeed Charles G. Dawes who resigned to head the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said: "My critics have been telling all countries in their international relations, the manifold economic and other problems demanding wise solution in our national interests, calls for experience and judgment of the highest order. The importance to our country of the sound determination of these weighty difficulties need no emphasis.

"I have decided, therefore, to call upon one of our wisest, and most experienced public servants to accept a position which will enable him, after many years of distinguished public service at home, to render equal service to his country in the foreign field.

"I have asked Mr. Mellon to undertake the Ambassadorship to Great Britain. I am happy to say he has now expressed his willingness to accept."

Ogden L. Mills of New York, Under-Secretary of the Treasury, is to become Secretary when Mr. Mellon departs.

It is said that Jane Austen refused to dine with the authoress of "Pride and Prejudice," and only was willing to dine out as "Jane Austen."

That's why 100,000 women praise the Silent Glow Oil Burner. In place of old fashioned dirt, it brings cleanliness and health; instead of worry—happiness and leisure.

Insist on the genuine Silent-Glow—

IT LIGHTS QUICKER—GIVES MORE HEAT—BURNS LESS OIL AND MORE AIR PER UNIT OF HEAT GENERATED

Read this letter from a well satisfied user of "Silent Glow":

"During the winter I installed a "SILENT GLOW" oil burner, model B, in the circulating furnace in my Grocery store. I used the two burners only when it was very cold. This winter I have used $42.00 worth of oil and saved $12.00 on fuel with much more satisfaction, and with always an even and healthy temperature."

FARM LABORER FINDS TROVE

Gold Jewelry Dating Back Before Christ, Dug Up

St. Ives, England (By The Canadian Press)—Ancient articles of gold found at Amsicroe Farm, Towednack, near St. Ives, Cornwall, which were dug up recently by a farm laborer, Ernest Thomas Berriman, have been designated by the Coroner and jury sitting on the case as treasure-trove and therefore the property of the Crown, as is done where money, plate or the like, is found hidden in the earth, the owner being unknown. Berriman was digging in an old copse for his employer, Wilfred Hollow, when he found the articles in a thick hedge, buried two feet in earth.

At first Berriman thought they were of no value and left them in the field overnight, but later he took them to a local antiquarian, who advised him to consult the coroner. A jeweller to whom he took the articles later said they were of gold of at least 18 carat. The view was expressed that the articles were of the Middle Bronze Age, 1,000 years before Christ. Three of them were fragments of bracelet chains and were beautiful examples. The other articles were of raw material, probably intended for making such other torques or for use in barter. There was a theory that similar to the best of them in the British Museum. Some experts in ancient jewelry and articles treasure-trove, a claim was lodged by T. M. Blamer on behalf of the Duchy of Cornwall, and the Coroner said he would consider the points raised, meanwhile would retain the articles. The Coroner stated that when property was seized by the Crown the finder was, by a recent Act of Parliament, compensated in full for his trouble.

The find has aroused great interest in the district, several archeological antiquarians were present at the inquest.

Inspector F. B. Creasy is in Kirkland Lake investigating the shooting. Kivi Kivi claims he has acted in self defence. Kivi and three other men are in custody.

World's Market For Postage Stamps

London (By The Canadian Press) —One perilous result of the financial depression is that London now holds the supreme position as the world's market for rare postage stamps. In an interview recently H. R. Harmer, philatelic auctioneer and expert said: "In the more depressed European countries are being the first 'luxury' trades to be hit is the stamp trade. In Austria, Spain and Switzerland, the sale of rare stamps has practically come to a standstill. New York dealers have also been hit to a lesser extent. The result is that London today is the philatelists' Mecca. There are as many as ten auction sales during a day going on in London. As much as $2,500,000 is spent in the London stamp auctions in one year. The rest of the world's capitals have now almost dropped out of the race". Mr. Harmer, who recently exhibited four stamps worth $125,000 at the Old Bond-street galleries, has the finest stamp in the world. It is the one-cent British Guiana. He lent it for the exhibition at Guildhall, Regent-street, which opened Jan. 18.

The 5,000,270 pounds of creamery butter produced in Nova Scotia last year represented a 25 per cent. increase over the previous year, and was the largest in the history of the province.

HIGHWAY WORKERS INJURED BY DYNAMITE

Battle Rages in Chapei Sector, Japanese Blast Out Stubborn Defenders

Jap Planes Swoop Down on Chinese Forts at Woosung

CHINESE PLANES

One Japanese Plane Shot Down During Fight

BY MORRIS J. HARRIS

Shanghai, Feb. 5 (AP)—Shanghai shook to another terrific bombardment of Chapei this afternoon and there were reports that the Japanese at last had succeeded in blasting the stubborn defenders out of their positions around the strategic north station.

It was impossible to verify them, for the smoke from the fires and shelling so thick over the native city that no one could see what was going on.

Simultaneously Japanese planes swooped about the Chinese forts at Woosung, guarding the entrance of the Whangpo, sixteen miles below Shanghai, but after a two-hour bombardment the defenses were still hanging on.

From Air and Sea

For more than two days those forts have been under heavy fire from the air and from warships in the river. Reputedly the Japanese have scarcely that they were reduced to a pile of rubble by the with each new day the bombardment has been resumed.

It was considered significant that that far the big guns of the fort have not gone into action, but this is probably because those guns are obsolete and of no use in such an engagement as this has been.

There was widespread belief that the Chinese in Chapei had received heavy reinforcements, which was known that a force of 3,000 Japanese blue jackets were landed during the day. A brigade of the Japanese army was expected tomorrow.

Chinese planes took a more important part in today's action than at any time hitherto. One Japanese plane was shot down, but it was not altogether certain how this was accomplished. Chinese sources here said anti-aircraft guns had brought it down but the aviation headquarters said it was a victory of a squadron of Chinese planes over three enemy ships. This report also said two additional Japanese planes had been forced down, behind the Japanese lines.

China Will Resist

Shanghai, China, Feb. 5 (AP)—Wang Ching-Wei, president of the executive yuan, or cabinet, of the National government and also chairman of the central Political Council of the Nationalist Party, issued a statement from the port capital at Hoonsiu today in which he declared China would resist to the last any peripheral to her territorial and administrative sovereignty and would continue to oppose Japanese aggression.

General Tsai had just embarked unscathed from Japanese air raid. "They shall not," he said, "they think to frighten us by dropping bombs on our villages and pounding us with artillery. They are wrong. The bombs and shells will make us more resentful than soldiers. Instead of frightening us they only raise our fighting spirit. Our soldiers will never yield but will hold their ground to the last man."

The general manifested no respect for the fighting ability of the Japanese bluejackets. In spite of their advantage in equipment, he considered it is learnt that the Japanese are sending a division of infantry here from Japan, he said.

"We will welcome the showdown."

At the same time there appeared with a charred card on which were Japanese characters. General Tsai read it a bit mournfully. "Shiozawa," he said, "was the name of one of the Japanese aviators brought down at Woosung. He was trying to bomb the Chinese headquarters. A twisted machine gun and a revolver taken from the same plane lay on the table nedby.

Fighting Ends

Shanghai, Feb. 5—Japanese aeroplanes dropped bombs on a Chinese troop train moving in Chapei today, taking heavy toll.

Shanghai, Feb. 5—Firing high over the Chapei area, Japanese warplanes and the train moving up with reinforcements for the 19th Chinese infantry which has been resisting artillery bombardment for several days. They swooped low enough to cut loose with their bombs and one of them struck a closed car, splitting it from end to end and scattering the bodies of Chinese soldiers over a wide area.

The Associated Press correspondent said the bodies strewn along the railroad track. The bodies of mangled horses also lay among the wreckage.

Evacuation Recommended

Shanghai, Feb. 5 (AP)—A group of United States residents of Nanking, who left there yesterday after the United States Consul General recommended evacuation of women and children from the city arrived here tonight aboard the British steamer Empress.

They said conditions there were outwardly "not serious" but they left when advised to do so.

10 Per Cent. Casualties

A report from the Japanese naval command to Tokyo said the naval forces there had suffered nearly ten per cent. casualties since the fighting began. The total number of dead and wounded was placed at more than 200, including four killed and twenty wounded yesterday.

Shanghai, Feb. 5 (AP)—The master of a British steamer which arrived here this evening said he had seen a Japanese aeroplane down in the Yangtze River beyond the Chinese lines at Woosung. The pilot was still in the cockpit, badly wounded.

It was thought here that this plane might be the one which the Chinese said they had shot down two days ago, a mile and a half inland from the Woosung forts. On the same day they said they had shot a Japanese destroyer in the Whangpo.

BOARD ENDS 2 DAY SESSION

Further Session Will Be Convened Some Time Later

A two-day session of the Pension Tribunal which was held in the Council chamber, City Hall was concluded at 1 p.m. today. During the course of the session some two hundred cases were dealt with. Decisions and decisions will be handed down within the next few days. It is of interest to note that claimants are given every opportunity to present their case. The information of the members any and all evidence which may be considered of importance in the final determination of the respective claims. They may also call medical witnesses to assist in proper classification of ailments. A number of local medical practitioners as well as gentlemen from Toronto have been called and examined. The claims which were considered today will again be seen on the waiting list for some considerable time. There are still many claims awaiting hearing in this district. It is understood that a further session will be held early during the spring or early summer.

Those who sat with Capt. John I. Grover were the members of the Tribunal, Dr. W. H. Eyre, medical consultant, T. B. McKenty, Commissions Council, representing the Canadian Legion, and Mr. J. A. Isaac, Pensions Advocate, upon developments in the possibility of the preparation and presentation of the claims. Mr. W. H. Heron, District Registrar; Court Reporters, T. Fyburn, and L. C. Moorehead.

SOLUTION NOT IN SEPARATION

Self Government in India Achieved Only By Co-operation

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 5— Freedom and self-government in India will only be achieved in co-operative partnership with the British Empire, with 25% of the British markets and brains, declared Mohammed Ali Ispahani, Indian author, addressing the Empire Club here yesterday. Solution of her problems is not in separation from the British Empire, he said.

France Will Assume $6,000,000 Liability

Paris, Feb. 4—The French government will be asked to assume outright liability for a $6,000,000 bond issue sold in Canada by the city of Soissons in 1921.

A bill to this effect has been drawn up. It asks that the present indirect aid offered by M. Flandin, Minister of Finance, be replaced by the government's assuming complete obligation in respect to the bonds.

VESSEL SINKS IN COLLISION

Six of Crew of Twenty Reported to Have Been Saved

Halifax, N. S. Feb. 5 (CP)—The sinking of the Gloucester fishing schooner Eleanor Nickerson by the steamer Jean Jadot is reported in a message received by the Halifax agent for the Department of Marine at 12.10 Atlantic Standard time (10.10 G.M.T.) this morning. The scene of the collision was given as 43.05 north, 63.43 west, the message reports adding in the vicinity of the accident to keep a sharp lookout for survivors and wreckage. This has been broadcast by the Halifax agency to all ships near the scene of the disaster.

The Eleanor Nickerson is listed in official records as having a tonnage of 142 gross registered. It was 114 feet long and 27 men comprised a fish crew.

WORKERS SPEAK POLICE PATROL

Premier Will Not Countenance Repeal of Section 98.

Toronto Ont. Feb. 5—While nearly two hundred city and provincial police patrolled inside and outside the Parliament buildings today, premier Henry heard a deputation of the United Front workers urging repeal of Section 98 of the Criminal Code and the right to unlawful assemblies and organizations but which developed chiefly into a complaint against Chief Draper and the city police force in connection with activities and meetings and the recent prosecutions and sentences against the communists.

After hearing A. E. Smith chairman of the deputation of Section 98 James Hargreaves, William Moriarity and James Sutherland, who voiced various opinions, Premier Henry stated the Attorney General had prosecuted the Communists for law violation, the law must be observed, that it must not be "emasculated," that police commissions will never be set up as suggested, that he would like to meet Tim Buck, that he knows some people break the law and are sentenced, but must be assisted back into society.

NO PRIZES AT EUCHRE DONATED

UNLESS CHILDREN REARED CATHOLIC MIXED MARRIAGES CONSIDERED ILLEGAL

Vatican City, Feb. 5 (AP)—Marriage between Catholics and non-Catholics hereafter will be considered illegal unless the children actually are educated as Catholics, a new and stricter ruling issued today by the sacred office declares.

The congregation's ruling, in the form of a decree, was approved by Pope Pius.

The text mentions that the step was taken to "conform with the Encyclical Casti Connubi" in which the Pope dealt with many aspects of marriages including certain habites in mixed marriages.

The decree applies to marriages between "Catholics and non-Catholics, baptized and un-baptized."

The ruling tightening mixed marriage restrictions was issued because of a belief that parties to such marriages often have disregarded promises that the children should be reared as Catholics.

The congregation decided that henceforth those who obtain the dispensation of the Church for mixed marriage must take those promises seriously and that the Church no longer will accept the plea that the laws of the countries where such persons reside prevent proper Catholic education of the children.

If necessary, the congregation decided, such persons must refrain from going to countries where they would be unable to keep their pledges to the Church.

In case of any failure to educate the children as Catholics, the Church will regard such marriages as illegal.

Arrested by Opposing Forces Man Turns Up

Shanghai, Feb. 5.—(CP Cable)—Henry Benson Currie, Canadian, who was reported missing after he had escorted the Chapei section of this embattled city, today returned to the international settlement and told officials he had been twice arrested; once by Chinese, who detained him for a day, and again by Japanese who held him another day.

Currie who had enjoyed the Chapei area serving a United Jack, was seeking the mother of a Chinese friend whom he had previously brought to the international settlement after rescuing his own wife and child.

The Canadian was unharmed, he said, but "I sure took up his duties with the volunteer corps guarding the border of the settlement.

WORLD POLICE FRENCH PLAN

Andre Tardieu Presents Proposal to Arms Conference

PARIS, Feb. 5.—The Foreign office said today that the French Government considered Japan's withdrawal to the text-point proposal unsatisfactory, and that it was ready to throw full support to further efforts by Premier Briand and the United States to solve Sino-Japanese difficulties.

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Concrete proposals for establishment of an international police force to guarantee the security of the League of Nations were presented formally to the world disarmament conference today by Andre Tardieu, French Minister of War, and head of his country's delegation to the conference.

Although today's meeting was originally called solely for the election of officers, Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, former British Foreign Secretary and President of the Council did not stand on technicalities. He accepted deposition of the French document as "in order", although general debate was not scheduled before the conference until next week.

ALLEGE HORSE STRUCK BY AXE

Harry Bowden Remanded For One Week For Alleged Cruelty

Harry Bowden, aged twenty years, appeared before Magistrate Masters at Madoc on Thursday charged under that part of the criminal code dealing with the maiming of animals and he was remanded for one week in charge of Chief Constable Hall of Belleville.

Bowden has been in the employ of Wm. McMeekin of Madoc township for some little time and it is alleged that, while getting out timber one day last week with a team of horses owned by his employer, he struck one of the horses with the sharp edge of an axe cutting several ribs and causing internal injuries as a result of which it is alleged the horse died.

The complaint was laid by Provincial Constable Hill of Madoc.

READY TO ANSWER

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., Feb. 5 —(By the Canadian Press)—"I will be glad to appear at any time, before a committee of the House," was the only comment today from Hon. George N. Gordon, K.C., of Petersborough.

MUNICIPALITY MUST AID FALL EXHIBITIONS

Winners at Local Fairs to Show at Royal Winter Fair

GRANTS REVISED

Annual Meeting Held By Ontario Fairs Association

Toronto, Feb. 5.—Re-organization and co-ordination of Ontario's Fall Fair system either this year or in 1933 was announced yesterday by Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Provincial Minister of Agriculture.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions, Col. Kennedy outlined the new plan which provided a selected class of livestock and other exhibits for the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. The winners from local Fall Fairs, he explained, would be sent to regional fairs to be sponsored by the Government. In turn, the winners at these fairs would be exhibited at the Royal.

Grants to Fall Fairs, the minister explained, would be revised this year though the total amount contributed by the Government throughout the province would remain the same. Dominion grants, he termed the practice of municipalities to "steal a lot of their responsibilities." The minister declared that the time was coming when all grants to the Government would pay no grants to Fall Fairs in excess of the amount contributed by the municipality. The province and the municipalities, he said, had been in partnership in the support of Fall Fairs, but there had been many cases in which the municipality, evidently considering the Government an easy mark, had sought to evade their share of the burden. This had been done without consulting the Government. Only a hundred men through the city were employed in the new gas line each evening and again early this morning. "Should your bill come for a quarter, Mr.?", was the usual form of greeting which confronted the householder when he answered the ring at the doorbell made by them, and while all the men are on strike and the amount of walk was taken into consideration, many men prefer all the way from ten cents to fifteen, still the average price was twenty-five.

On the highways, during the heavier part of the fall traffic records were kept at a very slow gait, and in some cases a halt was made in the nearest town until the main fall was over. Traffic continued to pile up, but the heavier forms of transportation kept the roads well open and the fall in the total was, however, did not fare so well, and residents in this section were forced to resort to the more primitive methods of transportation a good many years ago before the advent of the automobile. Sleighs and jingling bells were greatly in evidence. Many milk and bread dealers in the city substituted in this method of transportation.

NARROW ESCAPE IN TRENT RIVER

Mr. George Wessels, of Frankford had a very narrow escape from drowning in the Trent River at Glen while ago, when he tried to secure the possession of a log which was floating in the river for some time, from a point which he had been working on the Robertson dredge, says the Frankford Courier advocate. The current was flowing swiftly and also Mr. Wessels found that he had lost his control of the craft and as he was borne downstream towards Dam No. 4, he realized that his locality was at hand to see his dangerous predicament and he made every effort to secure the power house where willing helpers pulled him safely to a pier by hooking him with a pitchfork with a rake. Mr. Wessels was none the worse for his experience but he is reportedly escaped drowning as the river is very turbulent at this point.

There are about 800 men in the British safeguard serving protecting about 5,000 mile of coastline.

Winter Resumed Sway in Southern Ontario

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 5—Winter resumed its sway in Southern Ontario yesterday, carpeting the ground with a snow-blanket from three to six inches deep. The storm was felt east from the border cities to Peterborough and neighboring points.

Driven by strong winds the snowfall assumed blizzard proportions for a time but by night it had ceased. Forecast of colder weather gave winter sports enthusiasts hope they might be able to indulge in skiing and tobogganing after waiting vainly through January for snow.

Nothing Slow About This County Council

Tillsonburg, Ont., Feb. 5.—South Norwich County Council does not relish the prospect of reduced salaries. At the January meeting the council approved of a general salary cut. Then took the cudgels again, rescinded the previous motion and voted itself a ten per cent. statutory increase, effective immediately.

The January rescission called for a twenty per cent cut in salaries of both reeve and councillors. The motion which originated with a ten per cent. increase, including both reeve and councillors, was passed with only one dissenting vote, that of Councillor James Jackson. It was sponsored by Councillor L. M. Kennedy.

COUNTRY IS BLANKETTED

Storm Intense For Hours in Second Heaviest Fall of Year

Increasing in violence from a few scattered flakes in the early afternoon, to a blinding fall that almost halted all forms of transportation, and piled up a snow-blanket, with its bulk, the heaviest snowfall of this season was recorded in Belleville and district yesterday afternoon and continued on through into the late evening. Almost a foot of snow covered the city on the most sheltered parts of the city, and out in the rural districts where the full force of the strong northeast wind was felt the heavy drifts lay piled in high and ragged windrows.

For some of the residents it was a busy afternoon with great activity before the "heavier" fall had quite finished very many of them were out with their shovels soliciting jobs from householders whose sidewalks they had left in a state. Possibly two hundred men through the city were employed in the new gas line last night evening and again early this morning. "Should your bill come for a quarter, Mr.?", was the usual form of greeting which confronted the householder when he answered the ring at the doorbell made by them, and while all the men are on strike and the amount of walk was taken into consideration, many men prefer all the way from ten cents to fifteen, still the average price was twenty-five.

On the highways, during the heavier part of the fall traffic records were kept at a very slow gait, and in some cases a halt was made in the nearest town until the main fall was over. Traffic continued to pile up, but the heavier forms of transportation kept the roads well open and the fall in the total was, however, did not fare so well, and residents in this section were forced to resort to the more primitive methods of transportation a good many years ago before the advent of the automobile. Sleighs and jingling bells were greatly in evidence. Many milk and bread dealers in the city substituted in this method of transportation.

37 Men Start Job to Clear Away Snow

Thirty-seven men were taken on this morning by the city to clear the crossings and public property in the central business district. Yesterday No roll was called of the men and they were taken just as they lined up for the task to go to work, it would be very difficult for any systematic allotment of the work as the men on the spare water truck in charge of Chief Hall and about the only way that this snow removal can be managed, stated the Chief in charge of the work, is just to take them as they come. No definite plan of action or arrangement will be made regarding the continuance of this work in the future. Details will be published later, when arranged.

Upward of 172,615 women and children are employed in factories of Italy.

WORKER PICKS INTO CHARGE OF DYNAMITE

Five Men Injured, Four Seriously, at Kaladar

HIGHWAY WORK

Unexploded Charge Cause of Accident Near Kaladar

Kaladar, Ont., Feb. 5 (CP)—Four highway workers were seriously injured today in an accidental dynamite blast one mile east of here. The explosion occurred when a laborer drove his pick into a charge of dynamite which had been missed in blasting operations. A fifth workman suffered cuts on his back.

The injured men are being taken to hospital at Smith's Falls, 60 miles east. The accident occurred on the Madoc-Perth section of the Sarnia-Perth highway, Kaladar is about 40 miles north of Belleville.

The four taken to Smith's Falls Hospital were Roy Thompson, of Adolphstown, W. D. Matthews of Napanee, W. Delude, Toronto, and Ernest Hall, of the same address. Information secured from Kaladar last this afternoon stated that the men received broken legs, fractured arms and considerable powder and pieces of rock were blown into their faces by the explosion. Dr. Sargent, of Kaladar, physician at Kaladar and Dr. Tindle of Plainfield, attended the injured men at the scene of the accident, giving first aid after which they were rushed to the hospital. It is understood that the injuries will not prove fatal but the exact extent will not be ascertained until a thorough examination is made at the hospital.

Waslyszyn Held on Liquor Charge

Mike Waslyszyn, an Austrian, was arrested at Point Anne this Friday morning by Provincial Constables Kelly and Campbell and placed in custody at the county jail. Yesterday this afternoon or Saturday morning he will appear in police court to answer to the charge of selling liquor contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act.

The arrest of Waslyszyn was the result of evidence given in city police court Friday morning by citizens of Point Anne, who was arrested on the street at Point Anne by Provincial Constables Kelly and Campbell. Constables Stringer and Kelly of the Belleville district office Provincial police. Lewen, it is said, had the liquor in his home and beer in his possession at the time of his arrest and in court this morning he stated that he had purchased the beer from Mike Waslyszyn. Lewen pleaded guilty and was remanded until Saturday for sentence.

Acting upon the information received from Lewen the Provincial police arrested Waslyszyn and on searching his premises the police state they found the alleged bottle of home brew beer, which they seized.

TOUCHED ZERO DURING NIGHT

A marked difference of 36 points is spotted on the thermometer during the past 48 hours. Following yesterday's heavy snow storm, which was the largest amount of snow the year was seen, the mercury dropped considerably last night. Yesterday's temperatures were 36 and 20 low. Today, however the mercury registered 32 at noon while it had dropped to as low as zero during the night. This is but a second time this year that the mercury has dropped as low as zero.

ATTEND FUNERAL OF RELATIVE

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Grose, Cedar street, returned home last evening from Toronto, after attending the funeral of Mrs. Alvin Gibbs, of Queen Hilland. Redgrove Avenue, who passed away suddenly on Monday.

Obituary

LATE JOHN LEE

The funeral of the late John Lee took place this morning at 8.30 o'clock, from the residence of his sister-in-law, Mrs. M. J. Quinn, 85 South John Street to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rt. Rev. J. F. Hickson, V.G. The service at the grave side, in St. James Cemetery, being conducted by Rev. H. J. Madden.

The bearers were Messrs A. B. Collins, M.D., P. Cole, Jas. Lynch, John Neate, T. Sullivan and W. A. Woodley. There was a large number of friends at the funeral.

FREDERICK J. BENFORD

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 5.—The death of Frederick James Benford, 301 Talbot street, took place Wednesday afternoon at the General Hospital, following a few days' illness. He was born in Northampton, England, 61 years ago, and has resided in this city for the past five years, during which time he was employed by the Talbot Shoe Company.

He was identified with the St. John's Anglican Church, and is survived by his wife, his mother, Mrs. Jane Benford, in Memorial Hospital, Mrs. Alfred, England; Frederick, Toronto; Hiram, Winnipeg; Albert, Belleville; two daughters, Mrs. B. Tracey, Oakland, and Mrs. J. Tracey, Walkerville; also four brothers and one sister in England, Mr. Benford was a former resident of Galt.

The body will rest at his residence Talbot street until today (Friday), when it will be removed to C. O. Towers & Son's Chapel for service at 2 o'clock.

JOHN TANNER

STIRLING, Feb. 5.—(Special)—A familiar figure, John Tanner will be sorely missed from Stirling streets, in the person of Constable John Tanner, who passed away at three am. February 4th. He had been seriously ill some months ago but had been able to be around the house. He six his evening meal with the family, Wednesday but in the night he became suddenly worse and in spite of all that medical skill could do, he succumbed. Mrs. Tanner has been in failing health for months and deep sympathy is expressed for her.

He leaves to mourn, two sons and Doris. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Ida Bateman of Rawdon; four children blessed the union, Mrs. Tanner, Harold; Mrs. Courtney, Harold; Mrs. Charlie Jeffry, Minto. His second wife was Mrs. James Cooney of Stirling, they were married over twenty years ago.

In his early life he followed the occupation of a farmer near Harold, but about twenty years ago he moved to Stirling and was appointed Constable of the village, a position he held to the day of his death. In religion he belonged to the Church of England; before his removal to Stirling he was warden of the church to which he belonged. A staunch Conservative, he was also a member of the Orange Order. He will be buried under Orange Orders.

The funeral will be held tomorrow.

FACE BURNED BY HOT BABBIT

Stirling Man Narrowly Escapes Loss of His Sight

Kenneth Sargeant, employed at J. P. Woodley's Beach garage, suffered a painful accident Wednesday, says the Stirling News-Argus. He was repairing a car bearing with hot babbit, and when pouring the metal it exploded and most of it hit him in face, causing painful burns about the eyes, nose and face. He was taken to the hospital in Belleville, and it was thought at first he would lose the sight of both eyes, as the ball and lids had been burned, but fortunately the sight has not been impaired. He will have to undergo treatment in the hospital for a while to keep the eye ball and lid from growing together.

It is supposed that the cause of the accident was the damp block of wood upon which the work was being done. A little substance such as water touching babbit, is bound to create an explosion.

CHICKEN SUPPER MOST ENJOYABLE

Women of St. Thomas' Guild Responsible For Repast

The chicken supper, which was served by the Women's Guild of St. Thomas' Church in the Parish House Thursday evening was most enjoyable and successful in every way. Close to three hundred and fifty persons were served and the many good things provided were greatly relished.

The serving by members of the Guild was excellent and as little delay as possible was caused in looking after so many people.

During the necessary waits between tables an impromptu programme of instrumental and vocal music and recitations was given in the main assembly room and the various numbers were greatly enjoyed by those waiting their turn to enter the supper room.

Very enjoyable instrumental music was furnished by Mrs. Ross Hunter, piano; Mr. Ross Hunter, violin; and Mr. Glen Elliott, cello.

A quartette composed of Miss Wilkinson, Miss Frances Evans, Miss Georgie Steichler, and Miss Rose Wilson, members of St. Thomas' Church choir, rendered several delightful numbers and Miss Bernice Arbuckle, also a member of the choir, recited several selections in a clever and pleasing manner.

The members of the Women's Guild are deserving of much praise for the excellence of the supper provided and for the pleasant evening they afforded those who attended.

"FRANKENSTEIN VERY THRILLING

For weeks and weeks, movie fans have been eagerly awaiting "Frankenstein," scheduled to open at the Belle, Monday, for nine days, and since daily, after three weeks at the Tivoli, Toronto.

Unless you are entirely shockproof, you will want to come prepared. "Frankenstein" is a shocker.

It was the Universal Company that made "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Dracula," planned to out-Dracula "Dracula" in this production, and they have done it.

"Frankenstein" is without a doubt the most thrilling, the most exciting, the most dramatic picture of the year.

James Whale directed it with a cast including Colin Clive, Mae Clarke, John Boles, Boris Karloff, Edward Van Sloan, Dwight Frye and Frederick Kerr.

You remember the old time legend. You undoubtedly know that "Frankenstein" was the man who made a monster. Frankenstein was killed in the end, but his scientific zeal with him. So great was his interest in the scientific knowledge he locked himself away from his friends, his family and even his fiancee, the beautiful Elizabeth.

But in spite of them all, he actually galvanized this eight-foot monster with life. That, alas the monster had the strength of twenty men and he shrewd, cunning, cruel—but he is criminal. What happened? Frankenstein could not control it. See the film to see what happened when this terrific monster escaped to prey upon terrified men and children.

The management announces that "Frankenstein" is not a play for children, but for the adult mind only.

At The Capitol

SHERLOCK HOLMES NOW AT THE CAPITOL

Succeeding Seth Parker, who appears in "Way Back Home" for its last time Friday night at the Capitol, is a character familiar with everyone from seven years to seventy. That character is the famous Sherlock Holmes, created by the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. This fictitious detective, and his henchman, Watson, have been greatly tempted by Hollywood with a measure of success, but it takes that marvelous English character actor, Arthur Wontner to reincarnate the detective of the cape and briar, to perfection.

Adapted from Conan Doyle's "Empty House", the episode in the life of Sherlock Holmes is entitled "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" and the picture contains all the ingredients beloved by booklovers and movie fans—romance, intrigue, ingenuity, splendid acting, brilliant and clear speech, comprehensive story, excitement and thrill upon thrill. This is no stereotyped laudatory notice, but a genuinely honest one for what they may expect from "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour," when it arrives at the Capitol on Saturday for three days.

The supporting programme comes up to the Capitol standard and includes, Variety and Radio, and one of the new 1932 Vitaphone Comedies and the Paths' Sound News.

Woodchuck Chuckles As Winter Comes

Mr. Arctony Monax (ground hog to you) sat in his shadow yesterday, drove with a layer of dazzling white snow, and let chuckles after chuckles escape him, as he thought of the pedestrians struggling through the drifts above.

"Well, I fooled 'em, Ma. Maybe they thought I didn't see my shadow that other day when they were all watching for me to come out, and perhaps I didn't, but it seems that they were all fooled again. Spring right off the bat when Old John Bear and myself climb out of our dens. But wait a look at it." And fresh spasms of mirth overtook him. "It's just as well for me that I came the thin, piping voice of Mrs. Groundhog. "And after we had practically promised them an early Spring—ich ich toh."

Constable Will Accompany Accused to Find the Man

Magistrate Mikel heard two cases at the local police court this morning. A local resident pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and the usual fine of $10 and costs was imposed with 21 days' imprisonment in default of payment. The accused was of the opinion that he could not pay the fine and took the trip "up on the hill."

Daniel Lourens, a resident of Point Anne, was charged by Provincial Constable Kelly with having liquor in an illegal place. The constable stated that he found Lourence on the street of Point Anne about midnight last night and he was in possession of five bottles of home brew beer. The accused pleaded guilty and sentence was enlarged until tomorrow.

Lourens stated that he had purchased the beer from a man by the name of "Mike," but he did not know his surname. The Crown asked the accused if he would accompany the officer to Point Anne and identify the man he had called Mike. After considering the request the accused thought it was best to accompany the officer and they immediately departed for the

LONG INQUEST

Doctor States Boy Was Suffering from Many Diseases

"Frank Dainty came to his death as the result of injuries received on the morning of the 31st inst. when the motor car he was in accidentally left the road and crashed into a telephone post near the highway at the junction of Consecon and Redgersville highways."

Such was the verdict handed down by the jury after a lengthy deliberation of evidence which was held in the police station last evening. It was one of the longest inquests to be held for some time, owing to the number of witnesses to be examined and the amount of evidence submitted. Coroner Dr. G. S. Orser presided over the case and Crown Attorney S. C. Donahue conducted the examination.

Death from Hemorrhage

Evidence was submitted by Dr. R. S. Gibson, practising physician of this city, definitely stating that the fact that death had ensued from a hemorrhage of the right lung caused by a blow on the left temple, there was a fracture of the third and fourth ribs, and he had been still suffering from the effects of an almost total collapse of the pneumogastric, was a victim of chronic heart disease, and was afflicted with tuberculosis of chest bones. While these conditions were not all necessarily fatal, Dr. Gibson, evidence submitted later acquainted the court of the physical condition of the late Mr. Dainty which existed, as the time of the accident.

No Sign of Life

Dr. Gibson when called stated that he had received the call to the hospital soon after midnight of the morning of January 31st. When he viewed the late Mr. Dainty there was no visible signs of life. Artificial respiration was resorted to but after some time it was given up as hopeless; the man had no external injuries visible except a small scratch on their hand and a very tiny abrasion on the tongue. There was no bleeding at the nose or mouth. Further examination revealed by a post mortem which was held later in the day, gave the cause of the above mentioned results.

Police Evidence

William Morley Durnford, Provincial Police constable, Picton, who was first called stated that when he arrived on the scene later Sunday morning, the motor car was still in the same position as it had been when the accident occurred. He immediately caused several photographs to be taken which were submitted as evidence, Exhibit A, B and C. The roadway was quite dry and dirt tracks, which were visible from the wheels of the wrecked car were indicated by small piles of stones placed by him on the road. The ditch on the side of the road was some twelve inches deep.

Traffic Officer W. Prink, attached to this district, was advised of the accident at 1.15 this morning and together with Officer Ryles they went to the scene observed the conditions of the car and made measurements and sketches. The accident occurred nearly half a mile from Carrying Place. There was no one present at the time or when the car and nothing was found suggesting a crash. After the accident when the machine was searched. The car had skidded some sixty five feet sideways and from such superficial examination discovered by the marks he judged that the car must have been traveling between forty and fifty miles per hour. He saw Mr. Hare, the driver at the hospital that night. Dainty had been the owner of the car. When questioned as to how he determined the car had turned sideways and skidded, he replied that the four distinct tracks of the tires revealed it."

Officer Ryles, who was called corroborated the evidence and had nothing to add.

Heard No Comment

Samuel Wellman, residing at Carrying Place was the first man to reach the scene of the accident. He had been in the house some two hundred feet away from the crash and had hurried to the scene when it occurred. He described the crash as almost like thunder. He suggested by the noise it made and he arrived in time to assist in lifting Dainty out of the car. A moment later the police officer arrived with his machine, and immediately rushed the boy to the Belleville General Hospital. He had not been in any conversation with any of them and heard no comment on the accident. This was also corroborated by Mr. Rowe of the same address (Toronto) who went to the crash with Wellman.

Driver Testifies

The driver of the car at the time of the accident was the next witness called—Mr. O. Hare, of Toronto, employed in the Royal York Hotel. He had known Dainty for a year or so. On Saturday he and G. Hardy Jr. had come for a trip from Toronto to Trenton on their way to visit with Dainty, in Trenton, as their car had begun to give trouble, they had phoned Carrying Place where Dainty was working, and asked them to come and get them with another car. When Dainty and Mr. S. Pollard, employed with Dainty, arrived, a trip to Belleville was suggested. After visiting Belleville the party set out for Carrying Place in the car Mr. G. Hardy Jr. and his wife. The accident occurred enroute owing to the bad car, and the icy state of the roads they were traveling. The junction was reached and directions were not clear; when the brake was applied the car skewed and skidded off the gravel in the intersection of the road—the pole was hit with some force and Dainty who had been riding in the back seat with the two other men evidently had been thrown against the back of the front seat. He did not regain consciousness after the crash. The speed of the car was estimated by Hare to have been in the neighborhood of thirty miles per hour. He asserted that he did not put the brakes on forcibly or unnecessarily and stated that he did not know how the skid marks which appeared could have belonged to the car which he was driving.

Geo. Hardy Jr., who lives in Toronto also gave the same evidence of the happening, as did Mr. Roward Powell, who is employed as stable boy in the stables belonging to Mr. Hardy Sr. in Carrying Place.

Happened in Accident

George Hardy Sr. saw Dainty last that same day. He had been cutting wood and left about three afternoon and had been there when he (Hardy) left with his wife and for a trip to Belleville. He had no knowledge of the trip the boys had made and the accident, which he happened on by pure chance, was the first indication Frank Dainty had. Mr. Hardy threw some light on the subject which had interested the court regarding the skid marks some 86 feet.

"It is quite possible, that I might have put them there myself stated Mr. Hardy. "My car weighs with the neighborhood of fifty three hundred pounds and I stopped very quickly when I came on the scene of the accident. I also skidded in the ditch and was going to pull them out, but I found out what had was and what had happened, and then I rushed Dainty to the hospital."

Mr. Donnan: "Could the boy have deceived as having good habits?"

Mr. Hardy: "Absolutely. He was one of my best friends, and though he was handicapped by a stiff neck which made it necessary to turn his whole body when he talked to anyone, and was further afflicted with a number of other things; he was well known and popular. His weight averaged only 96 pounds."

The case was then left in the hands of the jury who were composed of Messrs. A. W. Woodley and Messrs. Chas. Walters, S. Weden, W. Thompson, T. Holland, W. S. Vallance, Thos. Thorne, R. George and J. Barlow.

LEAGUE AWAITING SHANGHAI REPORT

Council Will Hold Another Session When Report Received

GENEVA, Feb 5.— (AP) — The League of Nations anxiously awaited today for the first report of its neutral commission in Shanghai, which is inquiring into the Sino-Japanese conflict there.

The Japanese declaration that "they cannot agree to cease all war preparations and cannot allow neutrals to participate in the ultimate negotiations with China, was accepted in League circles as a continuation of the policy Japan has followed since the special League Council session last October and November.

Another sitting of the council will be held when the first report of the Shanghai investigators has been received by Sir Eric Drummond, League secretary-general. This report may arrive tomorrow.

Col. Miller Returns to Belleville After 45 Years

Will Conduct 48th Anniversary of Salvation Army Corps

Old memories will be stirred this week end at the Salvation Army citadel it being the 48th anniversary of the local corps.

These meetings will be conducted by Colonel and Mrs. G. Miller.

The Colonel is well known in Belleville and was Capt. in charge of the corps in 1887 having followed the noted Capt. Will Dyson, converted baseball star.

The Colonel and Mrs. miller are two of the oldest Canadian officers and have a united unbroken record of ninety years' service having each served forty-five years.

They have risen in position and rank and early in their experience were elevated to the staff of the late William Booth, General and founder of the Army.

They served for many years as field officers and as district officers.

The Colonel whose profession is that of accountant was chosen as Property Secretary and remained in office for twenty years and designed many of the Army's fine buildings including the Booth Memorial Training College, Toronto.

At the death of Colonel Rawling, Colonel Miller was chosen and appointed by the General Field Secretary. Five years in this position marked by great success and advancement brought him the "veil of glory" of his leaders.

He was promoted to the position as Chief Secretary for Canada, Western Territory, This means all Canada west of Port William, also Alaska.

Over five years they labored in those parts and will have much to say about their work; the opening of the Army in Dawson City, Whitehorse, Prince Rupert, the growth of the Army in North B. C. and Alaska.

Because of their age they have gone into honorable retirement but have many calls to conduct special meetings.

Three Men Fined In Liquor Case

Thursday morning in police court before Magistrate Mikel, Manson Hawley of Carrying Place, S. Chase of Cardenville, Prince Edward County, and John Spooner of Trenton, were charged with unlawfully having liquor in their possession. When they each pleaded guilty and each was sentenced to pay a fine of $100.00 and costs or to serve three months in the Hastings County jail. As the fines could not be paid, the men were placed in custody at the jail to serve the sentences imposed.

Seizure of the liquor, under which these charges were laid, was made Wednesday night about ten o'clock by Constable Kelly and Constable Campbell of the Belleville District Office of the Ontario Provincial Police on the house of Manson Hawley, Cannifton.

Chase and Spooner were with Hawley in Cannifton, Wednesday night when they were placed under arrest at the time but were ordered to appear in court Thursday morning, which they did with above result.

RAILWAYMEN ACCEPT A CUT OF 10 PER CENT

Representative of 26,000 Workers Sign New Agreement

MAKE REFUND

Cut is Effective from December First with All Railways

Montreal, Feb. 5.—(CP)—The 26,000 members of the running trades, that is, the locomotive engineers and firemen, trainmen, conductors, yardmen and railway telegraphers, employed by the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, today accepted a per cent reduction in cut for one year and two months, dating from Dec. 1, 1931, to Jan. 31, 1933, and an agreement to that effect was signed here early this evening.

The cut was put in force by the railways as from Dec. 16, 1931, following a majority recommendation of Board of Arbitration. Under to-day's agreement the money subtracted from the men's wages for the two weeks between Nov. 16 and Dec. 1 will be returned to them.

It was agreed that, on or after Dec. 1, 1932, business conditions had not so improved as to enable the railways to terminate the agreement at Jan. 31, 1933, notice to that effect will be given to the representatives of the employees and further conferences will follow. In every reasonable effort to bring the matter to a conclusion.

To-day's decision ended weeks of negotiation between the railways and the employees. The agreement was signed by Grant Hall and G. J. Hungerford, Vice-Presidents, respectively, of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways, and by ten General Chairmen, representing the engineers, firemen, trainmen, conductors and telegraphers, each group being represented by a General Chairman for the Canadian National Railways, the Canadian Pacific and a General Chairman for the Canadian National Railways.

THE BISHOP DESIGNATE

The election of Archdeacon John Lyons of Prescott, formerly of St. Thomas parish, Belleville, as Bishop designate of the diocese of Ontario is of special interest to the people of this city where for four years he was vicar of a local parish and is well known not only to his own parishioners but to all Anglicans of the city and to the people of Belleville and the district at large.

St. Thomas Church particularly feels pleased at the choice which has fallen upon him of being elected to succeed His Lordship Rev. C. A. Seager, D.D., who left this diocese to become bishop of Huron. The Archdeacon has always been in close touch with the people of other parishes and with ministers of other communions.

Popular with laity and clergy, the newly chosen bishop is certain to be one of the most popular of elections to such an office. He has a wide knowledge of the parishes in this diocese and with him in office the principles of the Church of England are in good hands.

Bishop-designate Lyons is a man of deep human sympathy. This interest in men and women and his devotion to the high principles of his calling are factors required in a successful holder of the episcopal office.

ADVISING ON FARM PROBLEMS

The association of representatives of county councils which has been formed in Toronto to act in an advisory capacity in assisting the government with advice, especially as regards agriculture and other matters with which some bodies are dealing from time to time. County councils are in close touch with questions as they arise in the territories which have knowledge of by. For instance many matters of great importance are transacted in Hastings County Council at their three sessions throughout the year and many discussions turn upon matters of provincial legislation as it affects, agriculture, roads, education and the county councils are much the same, except that the activities of the former are on a larger scale and endeavor to satisfy the requirements of the province.

Members of country councils are generally well-informed upon public questions and cannot be stampeded into expression of opinion.

Such an organization as that of representatives of the county councils ought therefore to be of special value to the government as the association is to be non-political.

The Good Roads' Association has done a very great deal towards the development of the Ontario highway system. This association has a staff in the demand for better roads and was a mouthpiece in a large measure of rural communities and county councils of efforts to bring opinion to the highways department.

The present organization is to be primarily occupied with the agricultural problems. County Councillors, representing their counties ought to know what the needs are and a healthy sign when the Minister of Agriculture in Ontario, Col. the Hon. T. L. Kennedy, has seen fit to call these representatives together to devise a sincere effort on his part to seek the benefit of the advice of those intimate with the farm problems in every part of the country.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

The promised land of electricity was recently discussed by Professor Pupin who said that the electrical engineer must agree "that we achieve our dynamos, electric lights and electric labor-saving devices in spite of our ignorance. If the transformation of the world by the empiricism of Bell, Edison, Marconi and others seems miraculous to us, what shall be said of the future? Dr. Pupin's vision of a society leading 'an existence akin to that of the Olympian gods' is certainly high up on the probability," says New York Times.

"Until recently we floundered in a morass of terms which were used so carelessly was a 'fluid.' It had something to do with magnetism and therefore with matter. No definition was possible, there was a vast confusion about the manner in which the 'fluid' was propagated through a conductor or in a flash of lightning. Yet Ohm, Ampere and Coulomb laid down laws which actually made it possible to build machines that send energy over wires to drive distant motors and light lamps.

"We used to pride ourselves on having 'harnessed' electricity. Harnessed indeed! It was not until the electron was discovered and recognized as an infinitesimal particle of energy that we began to assume the control that is essential in the realization of the Pupin prophecy. The vacuum tube in its various forms testifies to the power of our newly acquired knowledge. India already a means of international communication, television within our grasp, X-rays practically applied not only in saving human lives but in the analytic industrial laboratories, amplifiers that make it possible to magnify feeble effects until they become Niagara-like, are evidences of this control.

LOVE'S CLAIRVOYANCE

By Aline Michaelis

If my beloved had a grief
"How could I hidden be?
Could he know rapture, keen and brief,
And my eyes fail to see?

There is a strange clairvoyance here;
His secret thoughts I read,
I know the things he holds most dear,
I sense his unvoiced need.

Why it is so I cannot tell.
I only know always
When joy has cast its golden spell
About my loved one's days.

I know when sorrow takes his hand,
When loss his heart has stirred;
His every grief I understand,
Though he may speak no word.

There is a strange clairvoyance here;
Love makes my senses keen,
For when two souls have drawn so near
No secret between.

BROCKVILLE RECORDER is putting on airs because it has passed the one hundred and eleventh anniversary of its birth. Had a celebration down there the other night with "a feast of reason" passing the pipe around and H. E. Stephenson, a Brockville Old Boy, now a high-powered publicity director, outlined a few years of the local business scenery which has not changed much since he carried parcels for Lewis and Patterson, dry goods emporium, or delivered papers for the Recorder in his first faltering steps toward the attainment of a Master's Degree in the art of Publicity which it may be said has developed as rapidly as the years have flown since the time H. E. delivered papers to John Mc-Mullen, who wrote one of the shortest and best histories of Canada ever published. Although quite a young old lady as the years go, The Recorder still carries a sprightly appearance, due according to Editor Graham, to the Herculean labors which have lifted the chin of the old lady, improved her make-up greatly and given her a new dress every day. A peculiar thing about the Brockville Recorder is the fact that except for the inevitable changes made by the transference of all newspaper hands to the Heavenly Messages the Recorder's staff remains practically intact through the years. Editorial room, composing room, press room, and business office, half a century service is as a day that is gone. Hon. George P. certainly knows how to get the good ones and keep 'em.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW objected to Californians changing the name of his play "The Apple Cart" to "The Orange Box." Quite right, there's nothing like a name unless it helps to advertise the land of flowers and fruit. Hence local earthquakes are just shimmy shakes and earth expansion to make room for the bigger and better population the Golden West is always so eager for. Hence the name was only a shifting of scenery caused by a shifting wind which shifted the snow from the mountains tops to make room for a fresher and cleaner supply. When it comes to the art of publicity California has the entire thirty-three degrees and fifty-seven knots.

"TRUE" ANGINA NOT COMMON SAYS EXPERT

All Breast Pangs Not to Be Classed With Cardiac Disorder

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.,)
Famous Authority On Health And Psychology

Angina Pectoris is the name generally given to pain in the region of the heart. The pain may be slight or severe, it may occur at intervals or last for hours. In severe cases the pain is knife-like and most agonizing and it may even extend into the neck and arms.

LOUIS E. BISCH

A great many pains about the heart are thought to be angina which are not. In fact, what might be termed "true" angina is not as common as supposed. It would be well, indeed, if these various sexual pangs were grouped under the name "anginoid" meaning like angina until a definite and unmistakable examination of the exact nature of the malady is made.

I am stressing this point particularly because almost invariably persons who suffer from it have a clear notion what kind, become very much alarmed. Added to this is the anxiety of others on at once. In fact some become so frightened that they make a special visit to the doctor-for fear of hearing the truth. They believe their doom is already sealed and that sudden onset and the crampllike nature of the pain are the ordinary neuralgias. Some have thought it was due to spasm of the heart muscles or even of the aorta or valvular stricture.

At any rate, men are more frequently affected than are the delicate women. In fact, some authorities hold that it is a great exception to a man's disease. Heredity seems to be a factor in some cases. Angina has been known to follow the overuse or tactic of influenza, gout or diabetes.

What interests us here is the unusually emotional excitement. Muscular exertion may be a factor but emotion may be a fact. Getting chilled, a cold bath—indeed, any shock of any kind will bring on the spasm and an attack of most intense pain. It follows, therefore, that any treatment for true angina should lead as quiet a life as is possible.

But as stated previously, all angina is not of the real variety, so to speak, and the victim of a mere nervous disposition—a neurosis really—can usually overcome it. In this latter type the pain may last for hours while in the organic variety its duration is brief.

The treatment for the functional variety is evidently one of sedation to he nervous system and the use of the mild analgesic bromides which is responsible.

All persons with anginoid pains should therefore undergo a complete physical examination to determine first of all which type they belong to and not be suffering from. In either case treatment is indicated. That is the way to prolong life and to allay the haunting dreads that may be entirely false.

Other Papers' Opinions

ROMANCE IN THE JUNGLE

It is strange that in this prosaic, comforting age romance should develop in a jungle; but it does. Away out in the wilds of Eastern Africa, a wild and rugged country, where lions roar and hyenas howl, the Cupid of the white race has broken new ground. The daughter of a noble house, well known in English social circles, accompanied her father in search of big game. A famous hunter acted as guide and chief huntsman. The famous hunter always is an interesting character, and in Africa especially he generally is a man of many accomplishments.

Romance Cupid with an eye to business. The parent away on a hunting trip, the daughter left to her own, with a few native boys. A hasty marriage, witnessed by the native boys. Then the "anginoid" stage of the honeymoon, and they tell the rest of the folk.

But, alas! When father returned from the hunt the hunter, not informed the papers that he had no further authority to order any more hunting trips for the bride. A new head hunter has been engaged, and the disappointed bride can to spread further devastation among the wild things of the very modernized jungle. But Cupid is disgusted, all the natives are talking about the strange incident, and wondering what kind of people the white folk are. The moral is that the well-known irate parent acts about the same in a jungle as he does anywhere else. — Toronto Globe.

NEW U.S. AMBASSADOR

Andrew William Mellon, Secretary of the United States Treasury, has been appointed American Ambassador to Great Britain in succession to Hon. Alanson B. Houghton, recently retired. Mr. Mellon measures up to the high standard of men usually chosen by the neighboring Republic to fill its most important diplomatic posts. He is only to recall the long list of ambassadorial representatives at the Court of St. James to realize that this is a big appointment. For the most part these ambassadors are well read-men, men who have employed their personal wealth and their national prestige to improve the relations between the greatest of empires and the greatest of republics. Mr. Mellon is, certainly, one of the ablest men in the United States, though, on account of his great wealth, he has often been the subject of attack.

Those who are in a position to know say that as secretary of the Treasury in three Republican administrations he has performed far-reaching services for the Republic. His remarkable grasp of financial affairs has enabled him to recognize on the federal affairs system and improve the treasury machinery in a way that has gained him a reputation of experts in such matters. Dealing all that time directly with the treasury, where one-half the world's available gold supply is stored, to the British Government, he should be able to play an important part in the present tense, very delicate, looking towards the cancellation or postponement of war debts and reparations. Mr. Mellon has been appointed by the United States in losing vastly more than it is gaining by the collection of those debts and that the best of the United States, and it is time for the rest of the world, is to be thankful for. The trouble facing Mr. Mellon and President Hoover is that of convincing the politicians in Congress the absolute necessity of early and drastic action on the subject.—Toronto Mail & Empire.

Tense Conditions Justify Grant

Toronto, Feb. 5—The tense conditions prevailing in the Far East warrant a large appropriation to keep the York Rangers Regiment in service there, Lt.-Col. Hervey Leslie, O.C. Rangers, said yesterday, when he appealed to the York County Council for a grant of $1,000 to assist committee later decided to recommend that a grant of $500 be made to the organization.

"Present conditions in the Orient are so tense we should try to keep the regiment intact," said Hervey Leslie. "We hope that things will never reach the stage that they did before. But we ought to keep the spark of life alive in the regiment. Many of its supporters have given much of their time to it."

MANLY MINER

What will bring the most tourists into Ontario, live or dead stroke-tions? At the present time, people in the United States go to Yellowstone National Park and other State and Federal parks, to see pet Chief ly to see the live bear along the roadside. Why not make Ontario equally as attractive an instead of the 125 million people in the country south of us going to their own parks, have live attractions here in Ontario for them to come away? Now that highways are being opened up in several districts north and west of Sudbury, clear across the Province, the number of tourists we could our country have that tourists coming in from the United States and Canada, to see pet Chief ly to see the live bear along the roadside. Why not make Ontario equally as attractive an instead of the 125 million people in the country south of us going to their own parks, have live attractions here in Ontario for them to come away? Now that highways are being opened up in several districts north and west of Sudbury, clear across the Province, the number of tourists we could our country have that would be glad to come back and pay us cash for seeing it for a while? A bear in Fall of the year, and leave equally as attractive and should be as much protected as those father would act as guides; whereas, if bear were allowed to be shot in the Spring, that would not only cut off your attraction for tourists but there would not be as many bear hunters come in the Fall for Deer season. Summer, seeing bear plentiful, would only be an advertisement for them to come back in the Fall for Ontario to cash in on their licenses.

In the United States, nearly every State that has bear in it, protects the bear, and they are protected and only hunted at certain season of the year. Why not make Ontario a bearated several pair of bear, and last Fall something like 400 were shot. If bear were so destructive, why would Canada, Alaska, Siberia and protect them, and then cash in on the hunter's license who shoot them?

The bear were here in Ontario long before moose came in and were multiplied in the midst of the bear, so that today Ontario has more moose than all United States, and perhaps the rest of Canada; then, the bear were so destructive to the moose, the moose would not have increased as they have and they are in this Province during the last forty-five years.

As far as bear decreasing the moose, personally, I think if the facts were known and exact facts and figures could be obtained, my own opinion is that bear shoot at least ten moose to feed their cubs to every one they kill for meat; such be the case, why so much yelling about the few moose those killed for flies and Indian's dogs to eat up?

There is just one thing I would like to see, that is the law against has a chain of log cabins to rent at Matagami. The question is, what would be the chance of destruction, and a bounty on them has even been suggested. Let those who say "he is opposed to trapping" just go to Ontario and see for as he says they are, what difference would it make to him whether bears were trapped or shot? The only difference I can see is that there would be a few more bear trappers rent his cabins as there would be trappers, if they were open season declared on bear in the Spring of the year.

I am only a young man, but am old enough to try to see both sides of this controversy. If you would call

Heard On The Street

It all started with an item in an Eastern contemporary regarding a delegation of one hundred and twenty-five postmen who waited on the municipal committee of that city regarding a bylaw they wished enacted requiring all houses to be equipped with a hole or slot in the front door, at least three and one-half inches by six inches, into which the mail they carried. The postmen set forth the fact that there were thousands of homes which had no opening at all, some with only a letter box, and others which were letter boxes in name only—time and weather had made them inoperative. With some houses they had to take a chance and slide the letters under the door; if the door was not high enough to permit the passage of the letter, then they had to stand around and knock at the door to open.

By the time they had done this at fifty or more houses the morning would be pretty well gone, and mail service suffered accordingly. If the party for whom the letter was intended did not happen to be there was only one thing to do—that is to shove up then there was only one thing to do—that is to shove up then there was only one thing to do—that is to shove up then

SEN. BASEBALL ASSURED FOR NEXT YEAR

Meeting Held Thursday Night Most Enthusiastic

15 PRESENT

Delegates Will Be Sent to C.O.B.L. in Cobourg, Saturday

Baseball's future, locally, had the outlook after the specially called baseball meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, than has been seen in a number of years. Due to the adverse weather conditions, which prevailed, there were only about 15 interested citizens present, but they made amends for that, than has been done to foster the game in Belleville, in quite some time. The meeting was one of the most optimistic ever held in Belleville, and there is no doubt that the next meeting will be attended by at least 50 interested citizens after the keen and hopeful meeting of last night.

Let Vice In Chair

In the absence of President A. W. Frost, K.C., A. E. Hunter, Vice President, occupied the chair. Secretary Jack Duff read the minutes and the meeting was at once thrown open for general discussion for the purpose of finding out, the general feeling as to the possibility of operating a senior baseball team in Belleville in 1932. After some discussion, it was decided at the meeting, that a team be entered forthwith into the Intercounty O.B.B. League for this year, a voice vote being taken as to the wish of the opinions for the betterment of the baseball interests locally. Everyone present gave their views and the excellent ideas were brought forth with the result that a good discussion getting together on the subject, so to speak, was the outcome. Many suggestions as to the financing for the coming year, the schedule, ticket selling season tickets, personal canvassing of the sporting element of this district and many other excellent suggestions.

Mayor Wess Present

Mayor Wess was present and the meeting was pleased to hear that he appreciated his presence. It showed the civic interest in the game. His Worship replied, that he was only too glad to assist in the building of baseball in Belleville, as he is one of the game's most ardent supporters. Mr. F. T. Hall gave the financial statement for 1931 and it was found, that the club was about $200.00 in arrears. Mr. Duff pointed out, that the team had operated very economically the past season and was proud of the way that the players had come to the front to help the expenses down. He showed the meeting that the club's commitments had been in the neighborhood of $1,200.00 last season, and that he figured the meeting was nothing out of the ordinary, but, on the contrary was below the average of expenditures in a season's operations.

After the Business

After the business, it was decided to send three local representatives to the annual meeting of the O.B.B. League, which is to take place in Cobourg on Saturday. The three delegates chosen were Mr. Trask, of the American Hardware; Manager Norman Cerow, manager of the Nationals and W. J. "Frenchy" Gale, the captain of the Belleville team. Mr. A. H. Culvin, Vice President, was also appointed a member or other interested citizens also stated, that they would attend the meeting Saturday and follow the interest in the game during baseball.

Adjourned Till Feb. 22

The meeting adjourned until Friday, February 12th when it is expected, that a representative representation will be present at the annual meeting and election of officers of the O.B.B. League. Each member present last night assured Mr. Culvin, that he would be responsible for at least two new faces at the next meeting. Several other interested citizens were mentioned and they will be approved next week and invited to attend the next meeting personally. With the feeling, which now exists there is no doubt, that the citizens will get behind the game and see that Belleville is represented in senior baseball this summer.

There is plenty of material for a good senior baseball team in Belleville and all that is needed is the moral support of the citizens to put the game back on a level footing of seven or eight years ago. The

JEREMIAH "SEES" MORENZ

When Eddie Jeremiah told the boys he wanted to see Morenz in action he certainly was optimistic. But let him tell the story as I heard it. Eddie by the way is the all-American football star from Dartmouth who has been widely advertised as the boy who is going to set the sparks, pardon pacts, which will blast the New York Americans TNT powder chasers skyward. "It was borns me up to hear so much talk of the old boy Morenz," said Eddie on the train coming up from Montreal last night. "I can keep it in this 'Ole head all you guys there is only one boy in hockey worth bothering about." Well—Eddie got a look at real all right, and he got on the ice, after careful study of the just what number Morenz was wearing on his sweater. It was number seven. "What did you think of Morenz?" was asked him after the game. "I couldn't see any number seven," said Jerry. "He looked like the boy Morenz," and Eddie player kept passing me so fast that Morenz looked like a battalion." OH, MORENZ!

Although the Belleville intermediates are out of the running, they are not through for the juniors. The patrons who have followed the juniors to date will now realize that Belleville has a team of which they can be proud of and it is our guess that it will take a team of championship calibre to beat them.

It was with pleasure that we heard of the Canadian Olympic Hockey Team's victory at Lake Placid yesterday. The Canadians came through in fine shape their rivals and a lot of pessimistic Canadians feel they are a team worthy of their laurels. Now that they have proven their prowess they have been recipients of many words of encouragement and praise. Everyone loves a winner.

Last night's baseball meeting was one of the most enthusiastic gatherings of its kind ever seen locally. The baseball fever got down to business -nothing but optimism was heard. Altho' they adjourned until next day night more good business was done than in the previous published in years along baseball executive lines. It is a safe bet that at next Friday's meeting there will be at least double the persons who should be vitally interested in baseball.

One member in particular was loyal to get behind the Belleville baseball club had done more, in the past few years, than any other medium of which is the Intelligencer. Here are very high words of praise there is no question of truth in them as the winning baseball clubs have represented Belleville in past years, were known of from coast to coast. Every one present at the meeting, fifteen at the meeting, felt that Belleville should be represented in the O.B.B.L. this year.

Mr. Trask, of the American Hardware; Manager Norman Cerow and Captain W. J. Mills were the delegates chosen to represent Belleville at the annual meeting in Cobourg tomorrow. Two names from Kingston, Oshawa, Port Hope, Belleville, Peterboro and Cobourg will be represented at tomorrow's conference at the Town Hall.

Although the local juniors won last night's game in Trenton by the score of 3 to 1 they are not under-estimating the Trenton kids' ability, as they always play better hockey in Belleville than they do at home. Tomorrow night's game should be a hotly contested one and goals count on the round it promises to be a bang-up affair.

Current Sport

By The Observer

Local sport fans will have a chance to see plenty of hockey over the week end. Tonight the Kingston Frontenacs come to town for the express purpose of seating Belleville out of second position in the local intermediate group. Tomorrow night Saturday—the Trenton Juniors play the first game of the junior group play-off in the local Arena Gardens. In order to give all a chance to see this play-off game the puck will not be faced until after 9 p.m. On Monday evening the juniors play the return game in Trenton. While on that game might the final game of the "Big Six" loop will be played when the Queen's "redskins" come to town.

The Students are out to win the local loop without a single loss, if possible, and to prove this fact they have secured a section in the local arena which is to accommodate 500 Kingston supporters. They have stated that they intended bringing their Hallett band to Belleville for the occasion. Although the locals are set at the running for this year, they intend trying to make the grade for the least second position.

Local interest in hockey has there been as much interest as there has been shown this year, for all hockey fans seem assured of first place, the games here both Saturday nights and Monday night should draw an almost perfect hockey season.

FIST FIGHT AT HOCKEY MATCH

Picton County League Scene of Regular Free-For-All

Picton, February 5.—Though the ice was sticky, both hockey games on the Centennial rink on Wednesday night were fast and provided the crowd of fans with a great deal of excitement.

Demorestville defeated Collegiate, 1-0. The Collegians greatly outplayed the others but lacked the scoring punch. Raymond Hudgin scored the lone goal of the game. Milford and Canadian General Electric played the second game, the score being 1-1. A feature of this game was a fist fight which started with two players and spread to all members of both teams. Two were sent to penalty box and here another battle ensued. A local reporter using this as a press box, received a few of the misdirected punches. The two players were barred for the rest of the game and two others given penalties of five minutes each. Harry Welsh and Laverne Wright were the offending players and the fight was the result of slashing and other rough play.

A fist fight is rare in the League but are usually of short duration with all teams friends by the next game.

Trenton To-night

Wellington's new Arena opens Thursday with two County League teams playing there. The game between Bellerilla Y.M.C.A. and Wellington, scheduled for Wednesday night did not materialize but a large delegation is planning to go to Wellington from this town for the opening ceremonies.

Everett Rees, for several years a mail driver on Rural Route 6, Picton, was buried yesterday. The funeral service was held at his late home, Green Point with interment in Glenwood cemetery.

Mr. Rees was in his 51st year and was born in Ops. He was unmarried. Besides his mother, there survives a brother, stepbrother and half-sister, all of Green Point. Mr. Rees was an active sportsman and will be missed by many friends.

Farmers welcomed the snow on Thursday as they are anxious for it's sleighing, especially for hauling wood.

Friends of Rev. John Lyons, M.A., former pastor of the Anglican of St. Mary Magdalene, here were very pleased to hear of his appointment as Bishop of Ontario. Acting E. H. McLean of this town, attended the service of the Holy Communion at which Mr. Lyons was published in years along baseball executive lines. It is a safe bet that at next Friday's meeting there will be at least double the persons who should be vitally interested in baseball.

Rev. Rural Dean Cecil Winter and Mrs. Winter, are spending a few days in Toronto this week.

Mrs. Julia Bell of Wellington, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Bell, Centre street.

Mr. Lorne Hudgin is another local boy, who has made good. He has been appointed head of the Bureau of Research, Workmen's Compensation, New York), Canadian branch of La Salle, Quebec.

Miss Margaret Goodwin and Miss Ruth Brownell, nurse-in-training at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, were guests last week end of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Goodwin.

Belleville Juniors Defeat Trenton 5-2 and Win Group Without Loss of Game

Playoffs Start at Belleville on Saturday Night

McDONALD STARS

The Belleville Juniors came up to Trenton and succeeded in beating the locals 5 to 2. Despite the fact the ice was dead soon the game was fast and the locals are due for lots of credit. The Mentors having all the advantage of ice while the locals have had but four practices this year. A number of fans journeyed up from Belleville to see the game while the Trenton fans turned out despite the dirty weather. They will go to Belleville on Saturday night and it should be a nice game to see.

McDonald was the man of the hour on the Belleville team playing last night for, when they who I believe is sick. McGuire, Goyer and Wood were also good. They showed plenty of training and their passing being much superior to Trenton.

While on the Trenton team Vic Willis played his usual nice brand of hockey, his back checking was a feature. Ellis was good and Gray in the corners. Ken Begin who has not been playing this year until the past week was a big help. Ken played with the Intermediates in Oshawa last night and a game in Campbellford on Thursday night but three games in a row seem to be nothing for this boy the way he has been playing. He is in the best game he has played this year, last night he was up and down scoring his man at all times, while Martin, Dolan, Richards and Kidd were good. Ruttan that sturdy defenceman, managed to get through for his usual good.

1st Period.

The game opened up fast Trenton getting the puck, Mattis taking a shot, Hollett making the save. Donald, McGuire and C. Morgan broke away Belleville line were there and keeping Chambers busy. After a few minutes of play Willis, Jordan and Richards went over to Willis got a pass from Richards and Kidd scored. Campbellford on Thursday night but three games in a row seem to be nothing for this boy the way he has been playing. play McGuire was right in on the goal but failed to score. Ruttan the sturdy defence man got started and went down the rink rounds and split the defence to score. Begin was down on a belleville goal often and had Scoops jumping to save Morgan, McGuire and McDonald were now working their combination nicely and were threatening all the time. Morgan after a penalty for cross checking. McDonald came down and shot through Chambers legs and scored but the referee had already stopped the play, so no goal was allowed, while Kidd the speedy forward of the farmers' club was right in behind Jordan's pass to McDonald who scored after 13 minutes of play. Jim Mattis who has had only one previous penalty in the league was given one for tripping. Nicol, C. Morgan and Goyer were right in but couldn't score. A moment later McDonald was given a penalty for tripping.

Begin went in but failed to score. The period ended with Belleville leading by 3 to 0.

2nd Period.

Trenton came out strong McDonald shooting right on the goal Chambers was called on to make a real save. Kidd missed a nice pass from Martin which would have been a sure goal. Morgan for the visitors came right in and Chambers slipped to meet him and stopped him from scoring. Lambert was given a penalty for tripping Morgan, Kidd, Begin and Mattis were displaying some nice combination but couldn't get one over. Trenton were now playing four men up trying to score and were certainly mixing it up. Pollwell came in for Trenton and Chambers had an open net. Willis got a pass from Kidd and took a shot and his pass Ethier then goes through the forwards and fools the referee to score another for Belleville in the last few minutes of play. The game ended 5 to 2 for Belleville.

Industry Prosperity Only Thru Farmers

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 5.—Return of prosperity to industry will come only when buying power is placed once more in the hands of the farmers, said Dr. George I. Christie, president of the Ontario College of Agriculture, Guelph, addressing a convention of Association of Fairs and Exhibitions meeting here last night.

"All the gold and silver and lumber goes not equal the value of the farm products," he said. "Prosperity lies when the wealth of the soil is not converted into money. No greater health-producing agency exists than the soil of Ontario and the other provinces of Canada, if it is properly and rightly harvested and rightly sold.

Game With Frontenacs of Kingston Creates Interest

Tonight the two old rivals Kingston Frontenacs and Belleville Intermediates look-up in a regular league scheduling game. The Frontenacs are out to beat the locals and take command of second position in the loop and a merry battle is expected. It is the intention that the two leaders will go to the local out of second place and the Holway coached clan are not for taking any third position place this year.

All of the locals will be on hand tonight to defend their league position and as the Frontenacs have won their last three starts they will come to town quite confident, that they will take home "the bacon."

On Saturday night the local juniors meet the Trenton Juniors in the first game of the group playoffs. The Trentonians feel that they can defeat the local boys and the old inter-town rivalry is once more at its height. The locals will have added strength in the acquisition of Eddie McGuire of Ivanhoe, who has been out of the seven goals scored by his team, when they met the Napanee Collegiate early this week and Cecil Thompson, Ivan Mitchell; wings, McGuire, C. CANADIENS TIE WITH TORONTO

Defeat Marons 6 to 5 in Classy Overtime Struggle

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 5— (CP) — Coals were plentiful for all-star Americans in a pair of National Hockey league fixtures over the week-end in New York and Montreal last night. Canadiens and Maroons went on a scoring bee in Montreal and after 10 minutes over time the Habitants emerged with a 6-5 victory while in New York, Bruins avenged last Thursday's defeat in Boston by trouncing Americans 5 to 0.

Canadiens' victory placed the world champions in a tie with Toronto Maple Leafs for leadership of the Canadian div'sion while the Bruins triumph boosted them to within striking distance of the third place Detroit Falcons who are four points behind Chicago, Leafs, however, have two games in hand over habitants and will have a chance to pull out in front over the week-end when they oppose Boston and Detroit on successive nights while Canadiens are idle.

LONDON TECS. BLANK STARS

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 5— (CP) — A pair of deadlocks and one "run-away" victory made up the three matches played in the International-Intermediate league last night.

London's thing place Tecumseks were the only club to gain a full quota of points with a sensational 4-3 triumph over Syracuse Stars. Hamilton Tigers defeated Detroit and Cleveland all added a single point to their standings after finishing in stalemates.

Showing superior speed on the attack and an unbeatable goal tender, Rex ran to a pair of goals in each of the first two periods and held Stars in the final frame to beat back their first reverse in seven starts. Each of London's forwards got on the score sheet scoring play with the exception of Schmelzle and Mike Myrtle was credited with two points by virtue of his assist on Cecil Thompson's goal. The game proved was a continual parade of penalties and Rusty Hughes, rugged star defence man, spent the time of the 20 minutes in the cooler.

Danny Meadow Mouse Rubs His Eyes

By Thornton W. Burgess

Most people in their eyes believe And doubt they ever can deceive. Danny Meadow Mouse.

This is simply Danny's way of saying that most people have perfect faith in their eyes and believe that they see what they think they see. Usually that is true, were it not true, eyes would be of little use. Yet eye sometimes are deceived. Again just the opposite is true; eyes see correctly, but the thing they see is so strange that their possessor refuses to believe them. In short, he doubts his own eyes. Just this thing happened to Danny Meadow Mouse.

Danny had climbed up a tall mullein stalk to reach the surface of the snow that covered Farmer Green Meadows. He had it in mind to run about a bit in the moonlight and perhaps gather a few seeds from the top of weeds that stood above the snow. He often did this, for in this way it was easy to get plenty to eat. It was much easier than climbing those tall weeds when there was no snow. But it was lonely, so lonely, it was risky. No one knew this better than did Danny. Under the snow, especially when it was crusted over, he was quite safe. He could go and come almost as he pleased, in the little tunnels he had made along the surface of the ground. There his sharpest-eyed enemies could not see him, while on the surface of the white snow he could easily be seen from quite a distance.

So now Danny was very, very careful. He had made a little round hole close to that tall stalk, and when he reached this he stopped. Very warily he looked about. He poked just enough of his head out to allow his bright little eyes to look all around in every direction. There he reached, looking and looking. Reddy Fox might be somewhere about. Hooty the Great Horned Owl or Shadow the Screech Owl might be silently flying overhead. Hooty or Shadow a careless Mouse.

He saw nothing to cause him alarm, and that just about made up his mind to climb out when a shadow drifted across the snow, now just a little way off. Danny didn't see Hooty at first, but he who made that shadow. It was the shadow of a bird with broad wings. Danny held his breath and didn't move so much as a whisker.

"Hooty the Owl" he exclaimed under his breath. "It is lucky for me that I saw that shadow when I did. Just a wee minute more and I would have been in his sight. Well, he won't stay long; he likes the Green Meadows best."

Danny remained just where he was, not moving so much as a whisker. In a few minutes that shadow returned and the maker of it alighted on a fence post for just a little way from Danny, and back to him he flapped those great broad wings he hadn't a doubt that they belonged to Hooty. But when those big wings were folded and their owner stood on the top of the post, Danny just simply ducked down out of sight. Hooty often did this, for in this way it was easy to peer about to see if no one had been Hooty on that very post. He wasn't big and so straight that he looked to be a part of the post itself. His legs were hidden by feathers, and of his feet only the great cruel claws grasping the top of the post could be seen. From opposite sides of the top of his big round head two little tufts of feathers stood up like two little horns. Oh, Danny knew Hooty when he saw him. At least he thought he did.

As Danny saw those broad wings he hadn't a doubt that they belong to Hooty

But if this were Hooty on the post, now something was wrong. He didn't stand straight like a part of the post, but more as Blacky the Crow might stand if leaning slightly forward. He was a bunch shouldered. There were no tufts of feathers on his head. His feet were armed with great cruel claws, but they were not hidden by feathers, nor were his legs. And such legs! Danny hadn't supposed that any member of the family of Hooty had such long legs. It was no wonder that he rubbed his eyes. Yes, sir, that something must be the matter with them.

Very, very carefully Danny peeped out again. The stranger had turned and such a face as Danny saw! Never had he dreamed of such a face! It was of two great feathered disks, one on either side of a pair of fierce eyes just above a hooked bill. That face seemed to Danny like a bad dream, and for once he ducked down to rub his eyes.

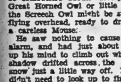
Personals

Mr. A. Gonsehu left the city yesterday morning to attend a funeral of his sister, Mrs. Burnside, formerly residing at Richard's Landing.

Mrs. R. B. Wilbur, North Front street, was admitted to the hospital, Tuesday to undergo a serious operation and her condition is favourable.

The many friends of Ex-Alderman James Duckworth will regret to learn of his illness. He is a patient at Belleville General Hospital.



Mr. W. H. Adams, Ann street, is confined to his home through illness.

Mrs. Lionel Train returned last night from a two weeks' visit in Adanac.

Mrs. Jack Arnott entertained the members of her Sunday School class of the Methodist Church at a party at her home last evening. Fifteen were present and enjoyed a programme of games and contests. Lunch was served before the party came to a close.

In the throneed Senate Chamber and in the main corridors of the House, at the opening of Parliament yesterday were noted many of the wives and daughters of Senators and members and hundreds of other ladies in the official set and from various cities. Among those present were, Mrs. Quinlen Boyd of Belleville, who wore a Paton model of black satin with brilliant shoulder straps and diadems, Mrs. W. J. Thomson, Tweed, wife of the member of Parliament for Hastings West, was gowned in handsome black satin model with trimmings of lace, and Mrs. William A. Fraser, Trenton, wife of the member of Parliament for Northumberland, wore a lovely gown of black velvet with pearl ornaments.

Christ Church A.Y.P.A. was entertained at Trenton last evening by the A.Y.P.A. of St. George's Church. Members from Brighton were also present and the visitors enjoyed a very pleasant evening. A programme was given by Trenton branch after which there were games and dancing. During the evening Rev. A. L. Geen spoke a few words and refreshments were served before the guests left for home.

Reform in Eating Habits—Reform Figure

It looks as if ole debbie Fashion has it in for the plump girls. She hasn't for many years given them much a dirty deal as she has handed them this season. Look at the dishy frocks! Gone upon those tasteless ladies to the shop windows; you will observe they are nothing more than figures upon which they wear of chiffon velvet and other sheer fabrics could be draped through a knot hole. All length and no width and some with rippling trains to make a woman look taller, only trains don't seem to do anything to the fat bodies.

Except for a small, firm, rounded bust the female shape dictated is supposed to have a curve on it. You'll notice that the fronts of frocks have taken on geometrical designs, squares, triangles, or points made by cutting materials and piecing them together. These style effects require flatness of tummy if they're going to look right.

The abbreviated bodice of the evening robe calls for lovely shoulders and slender arms. When the designers cooked up to present bodice ides, they never gave a thought to the lady who puts a strain on the scales. Mobbe it's just as well, it will make her eat her spinach, drink the oatmeal and the tea cakes. For my money, and not being a woman, her heart must break into forty pieces when she tries on one of those abbreviated bedtime garments that are heap-sikk fashion tricks.

The first need for the reducer, the woman who would detach herself from a certain number of pounds, take off the hip cushions, take your choice.

WOMEN IN FOREIGN FICTION STRESS THE NOTE OF REALISM

Women who are reading the modern French and German novels written by women will find that a new type is rapidly pushing aside the bores their share in the war, had experienced the bitterness, and learned the more bitter realities of life turned to new material for their fictional subjects. Realism is the cry of the day, but the realism now felt is applied to a phase of life not treated so fully recently as perhaps in a former period.

Gyp, Colette, and other brilliant French women writers have made us familiar with Parisian life and the ways and mentality of the Parisienne. The young writers of today are showing us the provincial life of France, the old-world customs, country places and the psychology of peasant folk. L'Academie French calls and the committees who award the "Femina" novel prize are encouraging this new point of view. It is their opinion that such fresh vision and description tend to keep alive the spirit of France.

Through some German women novelists we are getting the country placed to provincial life and men and women who had been Germany's enemies in action, they have not left the commonplaton note out of their pages. But the new note being struck in these war days, for it is the result of experience, is a more tolerant one.

Jeanne Galzy won the Femina Novel Prize in 1926. In a later story by her, "Le Beau Voyage," the setting is the main street of Mont-Pelier, where she shows provincial life and character in a realistic light in a lovely country district. Her heroine, who comes from middle birth no longer young, has had many experiences, and these come to her if she raises a problem frequently used in classics, not unknown to the modern novelist. She is called to deal with much skill and human understanding.

Mixed Blood Tells

In a new German novel Margaret Goldsmith faces a problem not by any means uncommon during the war. The novel "Passage Goes Past," is set in Berlin, and her heroine is of mixed blood, daughter of a German father and an English mother.

The girl experiences post-war complications, including motherhood, revolution, loss of ideals, the sweeping away of former moral standards. Through it all her mixed blood her sympathies are torn, her emotions deeply stirred. She loves deeply, though secretly, the mother who has returned to England. Penance follows her, and in London, after her bring as a journalist, finally qualifies and becomes a doctor. Modern life in two cities is sketched in this novel.

Americans in France

Donald Ogden Stewart (Mme Margot ile Lemoale) won the Prix Femina in 1928 with "Georgia Cheyne," her latest novel, which deals with the problem of a young peasant girl married to her farm laborer. Mlle Lemoale is looked upon as one of the most promising of the younger writers, and her written some eight novels. "L'Epouse," 1922, deals with a young girl married to a man of

Says Good Chefs Hold the Key To World Peace

PARIS, Feb. 5. — Good chefs, rather than the League of Nations hold the key to world peace, says

This is the opinion of Dr. de Fomaine Poszeski, Professor of Physiology of Science at the Pasteur Institute in Paris. War will, therefore, be a thing of the past when he has spread his culinary ideas throughout the world.

Already Dr. Poszeski has made a start by arranging a cooking class for 32 housewives, who will be turned out as potential peace propagators.

"Cooking is only another art, and is therefore based on science," says the Doctor, "I believe that by giving the proper instruction in cooking in war, in oil, coal, steel, cleaning and making the right kind of digestive sauces, I can explain the fundamentals that are an important factor in bringing about a happier, healthier and certainly more peaceful attitude towards life.

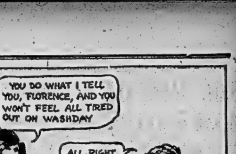
"How many people know what happens when potatoes burn? How to tell a good oyster from a bad? And when the vitamins in carrots are vital when when they are? These are little matters to the layman, but they can fill a strong man irrespective of his importance to the community."

Dr. Poszeski believes that many a wife has murdered her husband unwittingly with a bad meal, and says bill because she failed to know the fundamentals of cooking.

Lady Who Danced With Gladstone Died Last Week

LONDON, Feb. 5.—William IV was King and Queen Victoria Mrs. Bell Armstrong was born; and the Battle of Waterloo had been fought at the week end were born the with interest.

She had a vivid recollection of the wild excitement of the Paris streets in the Revolution of February and June (Mat of December, 1851; she had been introduced at Portsmouth to Mr. Gladstone; and she was believed to be the last woman living to have danced with the King of the Belgians and Palace of Tuileries during the reign of Louis Philippe, Napoleon III.'s reign.



Mrs. Beckell Armstrong, who was born on October 22, 1825, was the only daughter of Lieutenant Daniel Woodruff, R.N. She married in 1855, the late Mr. John Scobell Armstrong, of the Inniskilling Dragoons. In April, 1945, her father being then stationed at Portsmouth, was deputed at the age of ten to present a bouquet to the little Princess Royal when she and Prince disembarked there with the Princess Royal, Queen Victoria, on their yacht en route for Buckingham Palace.

The Incident

The incident was described in the Hampshire Telegraph the following week

Sir E. Bowater entertained the Queen in the train, and on the Princess Royal's appearing, a bouquet of choice flowers was presented to her by Miss Woodruff, the daughter of Lieutenant Woodruff, R.N. (the interesting little child). Her Majesty watching the Princess was evidently pleased, as the two young ladies were gratified at perceiving the graceful manner in which the little Princess received it.

Shortly afterwards, her father having died, Fanny Woodruff was taken by her mother for musical instruction to Mr. Bennett, and her mother's friend Mrs. Gresley, who married three years and became an intimate friend of Queen Victoria. In her life a vivid recollection.

These thick, safe suds give whiter washes!

THERE are all degrees of whiteness. If you want to see the very whitest white that clothes can be—just try Rinso!

Rinso gives rich, creamy lasting suds even in the hardest water. Dirt loosens—soaks right out. Clothes come so white they don't need to be boiled. Even grimy cuffs and edges come snowy with little or no rubbing. Clothes last much longer!

Cup for cup, thrifty Rinso gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—it's so safe, too. And no sofener needed! It's so safe, the makers of 40 washing machines recommend it.

Leavens' Plane is Taken from Bay

Barrie, Ont., Feb. 5—One of the two aeroplanes which landed on Kempenfelt Bay on Wednesday and crashed through the thin ice was salvaged yesterday. The JP-AFD owned by Leavens Brothers of Belleville was last night floating on the surface of the water. Aside from a badly shattered propeller and torn fuselage the plane is only slightly damaged. It is believed no further efforts will be made to salvage the other machine W. Leavens and A. J. Rainey, pilots both of Belleville, escaped unhurt.

At Strabane (Ireland) Lloyping Court recently James Robinson was fined £20 for having in his possession one tablespoonful of illicit spirits.

Teck Hughes Slips Thru' Resistance Point to $4.45 Share

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 5.— Light selling pressure was directed against the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange list in the forenoon today, changes at midday practically all taking the form of recessions from last nights finals.

Teck-Hughes slipped through its former resistance point to establish a new low for the slump at $4.4 and Dome and Lake Shore ad-down around 25 cents apiece. Wright Hargreaves was holding and Oranada regained a few cents to $1.03. McIntyr at 28, was off 8 and Hollinger dipped 20 to $15.05.

Hiscos was a cent up amongst other gold but Kerr-Addison and Oatuo were off one each and Stadacona, and Hollago dropped fractions. Oronelle, control of which has been taken over by Northern Canada, turned in fairly large blocks at 18 cents.

Alex Oil fell to 1 and recovered to $1.02 for a 3-cent loss and Pendersular Petes, a recent feature, was down a cent. Mining Corporation lost a couple while Eldorado proved up a similar amount to $1.30.

Col. Ponton made known to the companions his wishes to be taken home to Canada and after local attention he was placed aboard the Empire State Express and brought to Buffalo and thence to Hamilton. His son Major Ponton of Belleville met them at Hamilton. After the operation for two days he was in a very serious condition. He came through the operation well and is now showing signs of improvement. Major Ponton returned to the city today. Dr. Parry and Dr. McIlwrath performed the operation.

Col. Ponton since the operation has felt great relief and has mentioned the kindness and attention which he received from the New York Masonic Grand Chapter.

Britain Would Eliminate Capital Ships, Submarines

Proposals Before Arms Parley Will Be Indefinite at Present

VIEWS OF OTHERS

BY GEORGE HAMILETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Feb. 5—As the crash of guns still echoes from Shanghai representatives of the great powers are preparing to make their case for disarmament.

Great Britain, France and Germany will be the leaders in the general discussion which opens today a day as the general conference for limitation and reduction of armaments gets down to business.

British wants the greatest possible reduction of armaments she can secure. She favors abolition both of the six gallon gun and capital ships—and of the submarine. But when Sir John Simon, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, presents the British case it is not likely he will submit any but very general scheme. The present British idea is to let disarmaments the most ardent advocates of disarmament fear the conference will result in little more than a restatement of basic principles. Yet the conference is overwhelmed with such definitive urging action. There are so many that the proposals submitted have been grouped into five sections, with a spokesman for each.

Japanese Bomber Shot Down By Chinese Forces

Shanghai, Feb. 5—Chinese guns shot down a Japanese airplane over Chapei today.

The plane was downed when it flew over the Chinese lines for Japanese flags in the battle front fair. The plane had been bombing Chinese positions.

EXPLORATION IS CONDEMNED

Principal Fife Berates Men Who Sell Arms to Make War

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—Exploitation of science by "persons whose desire is profit"—"strange apostles of suicide who are willing to sell armament," and "men who make fortunes out of mass production of cheap implements of destruction" by Dr. Hamilton Fyfe, Principal of Queen's University, in an address at the annual conversation dinner of the Engineering Institute of Canada at the Royal York last night.

Science must now allow itself to be falsified in this manner, Dr. Fyfe declared, for its purpose is to serve the best interests of humanity, and a widening out of scientific education is peculiarly needed now because what we call "applied science" has been applied to human life not enough by scientists but largely by those whose interests are merely commercial.

At the same time Dr. Fyfe urged the broadening of the cultural side of the engineer's education, the development in the schools of engineering of an imaginative sympathy essential to the engineer in his dealings with a man', the need in the ...ilities of applied science "for an attempted synthesis" and the training of cultured engineers, men who can write well and speak well, appreciate beauty in many forms and have a wife opinion on many subjects."

In the past the cultural education of engineers had been weak, he said, because teams and professors of the Faculty of Engineering were indifferent to have such matters to the Faculty of Arts which was the repositu of Applied Science the concerns of the Arts faculty come within the category of bunk." This aspect of the engineers education prompted a meeting of deans and professors from five Canadian universities earlier yesterday to discuss the best methods to follow for that purpose. Brig.-Gen. G. R. Mitchell, Dean of the Faculty of Applied Science, University of Toronto, said last night that although Dr. Fyfe did not attend the meeting he expressed exactly the thoughts and objects of the group of educationists who attended.

OLD SHOPPER FATHER TO 40

J. A. Fetterley Wins The Dollar Day Prize—In His 91st Year

North Bay, Feb. 5—J. A. Fetterley, 130 Princess Street, North Bay, who is distinguished by being the father of 40 children, claimed the $10 cash prize offered by The Nugget to the shopper making the first purchase during the Dollar Days sales campaign on Friday and Saturday last. He will reach his 91st birthday on July 25 this year. The qualifying purchase was made at Palmer's Jewelry, and Mr. Fetterley was at the Nugget office bright and early on Monday morning for the prize.

Mr. Fetterley was born at Marmora, Hastings County, in 1841, and came North at the age of 13 to settle at Bracebridge. A few years later he pushed on to Lake Nipissing and took up a farm section near Nipissing Village, which he operated until six years ago when his duties sustained in a 20-foot drop in a pile of rocks put him on the incapacitated list.

He was twice married, Mrs. Fetterley 3rd still living at the age of 87. Of the second marriage 11 children survive, and seven were born to his second wife. His third family numbers 12 and the youngest is nine years of age.

Despite his years Mr. Fetterley is in remarkable health. Other than for the effects of fractures to his neck, ribs removed from both sides of his chest, and a bullet passed through his chest—all of which resulted from the fall six years ago he is said to be in good physical shape. Were it not for this general shakeup he would still be working on daily rations, he stated.

Mr. Fetterley said the man born during the past fifty years are too prone to give up when illness or injury assails them. His philosophy is "do your yield to illness or injury as long as you are able to crawl." His qualified this by stating that he yielded to the ravages of age and injury which assailed him during the 1st WWar, but only once since been in the other world. And I feel I am ready to go for more years," was his parting shot.

Highly pleased with their first experience with the dollar sale campaign, delighted with Canadian money that is going forward and hopeful of future visits to the Dominion, the Oxford and Cambridge skiers arrived recently from Saint John to Liverpool aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Montclare. The Canadian and British university ski teams will probably be a result of the visit.

Eyes of winter sport enthusiasts are now being focussed on the big event of the season on this continent, the 11th annual Easter's International Dog Sled Derby to be held February 23-24 at Quebec over a course of 122 miles, terminating with the Dog Derby Ball at the Chateau Frontenac. Outstanding dog musters are centered for the event. ... (9.15)

OPEN WINTER RECALLS GREAT SAILING BOAT

Schooner 'Murton' Crossed From Kingston to Oswego in JANUARY 1890

Boat Was Ice Covered But Arrived With Little Delay

(Written for The Canadian Press)

By C. H. Williamson

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 3.—(By The Canadian Press)—This unusually mild winter recalls to old mariners the trip made across Lake Ontario from Kingston to Oswego, N.Y., on Jan. 18, 1890, by the schooner Ella Murton, owned by Saunders and Donnelly of Kingston. The Murton was a typical lake craft of 17,000 bushels of barley at four cents a bushel. It was launched during the seas being heavy and eight inches of snow covered the deck in spite of the old sailing vessel. The insurance companies would not insure the cargo, and the only option was to take a chance with a pair of wind from the northwest accompanied by snow flurries swept the decks and formed into ice.

It was with difficulty that the crew of five men could get the rigging became coated with ice. The sails became like sheet metal and after Oswego sixty miles across the lake was reached it appeared to be run easily. When it became known in the American port that the Kingston grain vessel was coming from the lake on a winter day and at 11 a.m. a tugs with a large crowd congregated along the wharves on the Oswego River to watch the old lower Oswego bridge. None of the tugs in the harbor had made any arrangements to tow the Ella Murton through the bridge and she was compelled to sail into the bridge without assistance.

Every effort was made to lower her sails, but the ice was so thick on the ropes that this could not be done and the Ella Murton, therefore, maintained a good headway. Lines were flung from it to those on shore, but they broke and the vessel continued on towards the old Oswego bridge at a lively rate. The spectators anticipated a repetition of a disaster two years previously when in a vessel nearly as large broke in two, and they scampered in all directions. When the end of the Ella Murton was within 15 feet of the bridge, the vessel struck bottom, but continued to forge ahead, and the ribbons crashed into the bridge, tearing away the iron railing for a distance of 20 feet. This was the only damage done. The schooner was little damaged and was released within an hour.

Captain Saunders stated it was not much of a trick to make the winter voyage, but the old time tugs of mariners declared it was a great feat. The vessel was in charge of Captain Saunders a box of cigars and also gave him a free clearance.

STANDARD HUNG IN ST. PAUL'S

Deposit Royal Standard in Canada's Oldest Church

Halifax, N. S.—Another chapter has been added to the storied and significant history of St. Paul's Church, the oldest Protestant Church in the Dominion. On Sunday morning, January 24, the Society of Royal Standard Bearers deposited the only Royal Standard in Canada, which has been in their possession since Lord Landsdowne was Governor-General of the Dominion. The Standard was hung in the storied old House of Prayer, with the permission of the Rector, Canon Vernon, and was conveyed through the Canadian Dominion Command by Lieut.-Colonel Ferguson.

The right to use the Royal Standard was granted to the Society of Royal British Veterans, whose ex-service men fought in the Crimean war, by Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The Marquis of Lansdowne, then Governor-General of Canada, was Patron of the Society, and was so impressed with its work that, on a visit to the Old Country, with His Majesty's permission to have the Standard deposited in Canada. During her reign it was carried under the Union Jack.

The privileges to use the Standard was rescinded, in the reign of King Edward II, who decreed it could be flown only in the presence of royalty. The Standard, which is the Standard was John Hughes, three years old, grandson of Sergt. Hughes, youthful mascot of the 43rd band, was present at the ceremony Sunday morning.

FIRST STEAMER FINDS FAME UNDER CANVAS

"Lancing" Converted Into Longest Sailing Ship Afloat

FINE RECORD

Had Reputation For Extreme Speed in Cruises

St. John's Nfld.—The longest sailing vessel ever built, the four-mast-ed Lancing, has been laid out of service in Norway after dipping her slender bows in the waters of every ocean since 1886. Reversing the usual order of change, the Lancing is now sailing the seas as a steamship and actually served between New York and Mayo for the French Line, carrying mails and passengers.

Strangely enough, the Lancing was as the Pyrenre in 1886, made her most remarkable records of passage in her line of trade with Rio and Buenos Aires in 1890 and her long decks had been filled with tall masts and a vast sea sails resembling white clouds when she sighted land. She was 405 feet long over-all, the Lancing's masts lifted 200 feet above the keel and provided her with as much sail that several times she surprised the world with her speed feats.

One of her most remarkable sailings was from Buenos Aires to New Caledonia, a distance of 11,068 nautical miles, which the Lancing skipped off in forty-two days, giving her a rough general average of 264 miles a day and a speed average of eleven knots. Her return across the Atlantic early in February, 1916, when she carried a cargo of oil cake from the end of the Argentine Pampas to Hull, England in six days eighteen hours. On a passage from New York to Demarck the Lancing passes the Pentland Firth in the record time of 40 hours and put over her lines in Aarhus on the twentieth day.

Even before the days of present speed record holders, under both names, Lancing and Pereire, she was known as one of the "greyhounds" of the sea and was one of the historic ships of the last half century.

When she was a steamer, Napoleon III sat in one of her cabins and approved plans for the port of Havre. Then about to be constructed. In the last years of her career she showed her heels to many a trim, equipped with engines and mechanical speed.

Among the Lancing's best passages are:

Leith to Valparaiso	90 days
Antofagasta to New York	77 days
Ashrus to Halifax	22 days
Sydney to Melbourne	4 days
Melbourne to Barbados	36 days
New Orleans to Queenston	26 days
Halifax to the Clyde	11 days

STEAM COOLING FOR AIR ENGINES

R.A.F.'s Newest Planes Equipped With New Departure

London (By The Canadian Press)—Before this year is out many of the machines in the Royal Air Force war fleet may be equipped with steam cooling, by the use of an evaporative system, in the place of the water-cooling methods employed in all large number of aircraft engines and practically universal in the motor-car industry.

The new idea, first tried out in the Napier Lion engine, and in the engine installation of the airship R-101, has been developed in two forms and is now undergoing test in the point of suitability for use in aeroplanes. Experiments are being laid daybombers driven by evaporative-cooling engines in a large number of trial and conclusive results are expected in favor of the new system from a fuel saving point of view, besides the taking place, which are engaged, in the Napier Lion engine mounted above the engine, preferably within the fuselage, and the steam condenser. Water circulates endlessly within the cylinder jackets and through a "boiler" tank which is suitably situated between engine and condenser. Here from the tank water flows to the condenser, where it is cooled again by the air stream and returned to the engine circuit.

The advantages are claimed, liquids water is required; the weight saving in a 500 h.p. motor may amount to as much as 100 pounds. The machine would be less vulnerable to gunfire, because the vital life was jeopardized during the 1914-1918 conflict by punctures in the water radiator through which poured out the liquid safeguarding the combustion running of his engine. A bullet in a steam condenser has far less serious results because the difference in the density of steam and water means that only a small escape of steam by weight compared with water is only 1 to 30.

Points of more immediate importance, however, are claimed in the operation of civil as well as military aircraft, are the elimination of anxiety about engine temperature, the greatly reduced risk of freezing when the machine is left in use and the quicker warming up of engines before a flight. The engine runs always near boiling point, and the pilot need not take any steps to regulate water temperature, such as the winding of the radiator in and out of the air stream necessary with water-cooling

Better Business Ahead Says Beatty And Canada is Ready to Move Forward

Canadian Pacific President Issues His Annual Review of Economic Conditions and the Outlook for Future Development and Progress in this Country.

BUSINESS throughout the year, says E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in review of Canadian business for 1931, is considered report of which the review is as follows:

Mr. E. W. Beatty
Chairman and President Canadian Pacific Railway

"Seriously affected by world conditions Canada in any year appears to be, there is no country of the same size and possessing like resources in which the same comparative loss in prosperity is experienced as in world affairs during the past year. The extent to which Canada has been affected is less attributable to any failure of the Canadian people than to the conditions that are prevailing throughout the civilized world.

"The depression has reached in most pronounced stages in those countries more highly industrialized. Therein lies one of the reasons why Canada has suffered less severely than many others, and is in a better position to recover when there is a turn in normal conditions. Having secondary basis and largely in the development of raw materials, Canada has less to lose than countries that have reached the stage of maturity, and there are credible reasons for believing we have gone some distance in that direction. The progress which Canada the year 1931 has been one of re-organization and reconstruction.

"The railway situation has more than its share of difficulties. Canada's most imperative domestic problem is railway consolidation. Reasonable solution opinions are now being formed by a most competent authority which at this time was an act of common sense and justice to the railway companies and the people will present to an interested world. Canada's great natural resources qualities if they give their contributions to railway and asset its suggested solutions with considerations of economic soundness and not political color or preconceived prejudices.

"The nation, its various communities, many of its business institutions and the small number of its individuals have in the past ordered their affairs as though the era of continuing prosperity lay through extravagant expenditures with little or no thought of stability of investment or profitable return. There was a nation we are faced with debts that must be paid. I know of no way of meeting them other than by hard work and strict economy. The wise expenditure leading to the development of new industries or increase of production costs Canada no more than it costs at any time, nor should the railways be blamed too carelessly for the failure to have already prepared their facilities so that future growth in traffic could immediately be adequately taken care of.

"The Canadian Pacific, for its part, has not been content to offer for any of the more recent instances its facilities. Its investments it has made to its services. The Canadian Pacific has built largely to develop a new class of business. Since the end of April next a reasonably good year. The statistics position of cotton is not unfavorable. Since the beginning existing conditions and the need for good times, the buying public in that city is just as great now as when the announcement of the new plan was so enthusiastically hailed.

"The Canadian Pacific moved as these that Canadian development and progress depend upon the original building of the Canadian Pacific had been held up by the depression, and justified its operation Canadian national development and progress depend upon its present position.

"Canada's recent year railways have been more adversely affected by the general trade contraction than Russia and Nova Scotia are meeting with established markets abroad. An important increase in gold production, some improvement in the agricultural situation and increase over the year in the volume of trade, together with a more satisfactory balance of foreign trade, should certainly result in betterment in many lines of retail business are most encouraging factors.

"He would be a bold man who would make any prophecy as to what is going to happen during the next twelve months, but I think it requires neither boldness nor prophecy to say that the assumption that 1932 will, as it progresses, show marked improvement upon its predecessor.

"It is an old saying, of recent years brought much into mind, that one thing greatly to be desired is more business in governments have set laws government in business. The period of economic stress has done more to prove the truth of that statement than anything else could have done, and I think that the present growing number of the Canadian people are accepting that fact as being the basis upon which, in the course of economic events through which we are passing. These stress of war necessities it became the practice to do to properties practically everything economic that was carried on. In many cases it became actual operation. The natural result was that governments and municipalities to look to government for the increased credit which they themselves could have given more better had they carried forward their services on business principles the efficiency of which have been proven through ages of stress and strain.

"The process which attended the flotation of the National Services Loan should be a reminder to Canadians of the sound basis upon which their economic affairs stand and the confidence which exists at large. Readiness with which our people were able to provide the new bond issue established the fact that a large part of the huge amount of Canada's wealth was in liquid form and that the investment habit was the institution in placing it at the country's service. The success of the loan was also remarkably below par in most of the world's money markets and those of world conditions which carries the greatest weight. It is calculated to encourage a more favorable balance of foreign trade. The success of the loan as an investment to manufacturers from other countries in establishing factories within our borders. Since the announcement of the loan new industries from Great Britain and the United States have been established and are now in the process of organization.

"The ultimate result following upon the recent British elections are likely to be favorable to the new relation to Canadian economic affairs. The important extension of our trade with Great Britain seems assured, and it may be that some of the new industries of the forthcoming Imperial Conference in this country will be brought to a new realization of what Canada has to offer in the way of natural resources and opportunity for profitable investment, and the country will step once again into the forefront as a lead towards which the most desirable class of immigration and settlement should properly flow."

Then ...she realized that it meant he liked her and a happy glow circled around her heart. Perhaps he was poor, and in unfortunate circumstances now, but he was honest and true, and when his financial affairs were adjusted, perhaps — but Maurine did not dare to dream of what would happen then.

John did not come in the cafeteria Monday, and she admired him for refusing to put himself more in her debt. At two o'clock, the day being warm, Maurine decided that she would spend her afternoon swimming. She went to her room and got into her bathing suit and walked down to Oak Street beach and swam about for a half hour, splashing in the cool water, then came out to fling herself upon the sand to dry. While she reclined there, watching the passersby along the sidewalk, she saw John Bentley step off a bus and turn to assist a young lady to alight. They crossed Michigan Boulevard and went down Oak Street.

Maurine wasn't jealous as much as hurt. He had lied to her then. He wasn't working. He had just imposed upon her sentimental good nature. Heroically, she ran to her rooming house, her hair flying out behind her. There were tears in her eyes that she mustn't shed until she reached the privacy of her room. When she flung herself across the bed, they poured out in a torrent. Never again would she trust anyone. She was only exactly one dollar and eleven cents. But it was not the loss that hurt as much as the feeling that she had been betrayed. She felt ill and phoned the cafeteria, asked to be excused for the evening.

The next morning she went to work, her eyes tired from a night of sleeplessness. She had bravely conquered her emotions, but her under lip still trembled when her mind reverted, against her will to her disappointment.

As she was setting out the candies upon the casement, she heard a familiar voice say, "Good morning." She turned to see John smiling before her, apparently buoyant in spirits. So he had returned to take advantage of her again. "Can I have some breakfast this morning?" he said gaily. Maurine didn't smile, but nodded rather coldly. She watched him go down the inside of the rail, a pound trayen replacing his empty. Maurine watched him resentfully; a sudden decision reached her.

When she saw John, having finished his breakfast, approach her desk, she signaled the manager who came to her side. "Mr. Grand," she said haughtily, "this man cannot pay his check."

John looked at her in surprise, a hurt look in his eyes. "But, I can," he affirmed, and pulled a roll of bills from his pocket. He laid a five dollar bill upon the counter. Maurine bit her lip in chagrin, her eyes downcast in confusion. He snapped: "False accusation is a terrible thing. I can't have my customers subjected to embarrassment. You are discharged!"

Maurine looked at John, beseeching with her eyes for his benevolence, but he remained silent. Proudly she took her hat and the money the manager offered her and left the cafeteria quickly.

"Maurine, darling," an anxious voice called after her. John caught up with her and walked beside her, staring at her forbidding profile. "Maurine, let me explain."

"There's nothing to explain. I made a mistake and you have had your revenge by seeing me discharged." She walked faster.

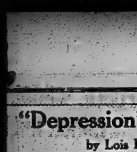
John easily kept up with her. "But, why did you turn against me? It hurt, terribly. You are the most wonderful news for you."

Maurine stopped short. "But where did you get the money? You aren't working."

"How did you know that?" countered John.

Maurine bit her lip. "I—I saw you yesterday, getting off the bus with a young lady."

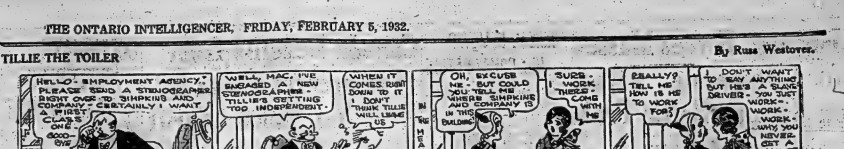
John threw back his head and laughed aloud, "If you'll let me take you where we can talk, I'll tell you the whole story."



Maurine permitted him to take her arm, and restrained her curiosity until they reached the park where they found a secluded bench. "You see," John explained, "my father owns a great many houses, and he wanted me to learn the business. But I wanted to be a writer. He thought he would suppress my ambition by threatening to disinherit me, so I left home. Meantime, while I was hunting for work, a book I had written was accepted. My father just forwarded the story to me with the check for advance royalties. And he told me to come home and he wouldn't say a word about anything. The young lady you saw with me was a representative of the publishing company who is going to put out my book. So now, young lady, do you understand?"

Maurine couldn't meet his eyes. "Oh, I'm so glad for you," she said, "and for myself, I'm glad."

"I will if you promise to be Mrs. John Bentley," suggested John softly.



Maurine raised her eyes and the dimple in her cheek flashed. "Ask me again when you can also use," she said.

For answer, John caught her in his arms and kissed her, much to the amusement of three small boys and a policeman.

Japanese Forces Massed for Desperate Attack on Chapei Battle Front

Will Attempt to Crush Chinese Before Aid Arrives

FORTS DEMOLISHED, Washington Interprets Note as Loop for a New Peace Pact

BY GLENN BABB
Associated Press Staff Correspondent

TOKIO, Feb. 5.—The Japanese Government today ordered a full civilization of the city of Shanghai to the fullest extent, the 5,000 bluejackets who have been fighting it out with the Chinese for a week.

This decision was in line with the Government's rejection of the plea of the powers, including the United States, Great Britain, the United States and France, which called upon Japan and China to cease mobilization and preparations for further hostilities.

A full Japanese army division has accompanied the first brigade, including a regiment of cavalry, a regiment of artillery, a battalion of engineers and a battalion of the army service corps. The total strength is about 11,000 men.

The Japanese reply to the peace proposals submitted by the powers in which two of the suggestions were rejected and which were worded in an officially accepted, was handed to the ambassador of the United States by Foreign Minister Yoshizawa this evening.

In addition to rejecting the powers' proposal that preparation for further hostilities be stopped, it refused to permit mediation by the powers in the conflict with China, especially in so far as that mediation might touch upon the status of Manchuria.

Japan agreed to cease military action in Shanghai if China would assured the Chinese would do likewise, according to the reply, for the mutual withdrawal of the warring forces, and agreed to the creation of a neutral zone in the Chapei battleground.

Expect Another Solution

Authoritative Japanese quarters appeared confident that before diplomatic attempts to settle the Shanghai issue would bear fruits, a solution already would have been achieved through other agencies.

Use of the western section of the Chinese Eastern Railway to Manchuria for Japanese troop movements from Tsitsihar to Harbin was discussed by Alexander Troyanovsky, Soviet ambassador to Japan, and the Japanese foreign minister.

It was understood the Russian ambassador pointed out that a further agreement would have to be completed before the Japanese might utilize the road. Russia already has conditionally agreed to the use of the Changchunharbin spur for Japanese military purposes.

The foreign office did not construe the new representations as Russia to be a protest.

Washington, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Japan definitely left the door open for further negotiations in delivering to the ambassador of Great Britain, the United States, France and Italy at Tokio its refusal to accept two of five British-United States proposals.

In a message to the United States Department of State accompanying a digest of the Japanese reply Ambassador Forbes said Foreign Minister Yoshizawa told him Japan will be glad to consider further proposals from the powers which are understood to be acting about peace in Shanghai.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson will not formulate a reply to Japan tonight, and probably not even to-morrow, as it will be necessary for him to confer with other interested powers and make a thorough analysis of the digest of the Japanese reply before preparing any counter-proposals.

The terms of the reply were made public in Tokio yesterday. Consequently through the press despatches the State Department had the essentials of the Japanese position.

Both the State Department and Mr. Debuchi, the Japanese ambassador, expressed surprise today that an arrangement has been affected between the commanding officers, of the various defence forces in Shanghai whereby British and United States marines will replace Japanese who were defending Japan concession while in the British and United States sections of the international settlement, and thus bring to an end the Chinese fire directed against the Japanese.

CANADIANS DID WELL IN OPENING OLYMPIC EVENTS

Win Three Places in Five Hundred Meter Final

'PEGGERS WINNERS

Show Supremacy in Hockey Over United States

(By Wallace H. Ward, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 5.—Canadian competitors got a good account of themselves in the opening events of the third Olympic winter games tournament which opened here yesterday morning.

The Canadian hockey team came through with a victory over the United States in their first game of the tourney leading to the world amateur hockey crown. The winning margin was one goal.

Canada's lone entry in the 500-meter speed skating event, Alex Hunt, finished fourth in the final of the 500-meters event, which was won by Jack Shea of Lake Placid, Remi Bynaun of Norway was second by a yard, and Hunt was practically neck-and-neck with Evensen.

Frank Stack, Winnipeg flash was fourth and Bill Logan of Saint John, N.B. last Canadian finisher, finished fifth.

Stack and Hunt both won their preliminary heat and Logan was second in his heat to Remi Bynaun. Leo Sylvester of Montreal faced in the same heat as Logan and Bynaun, but the turn proved too much for the Montreal boy and he finished last.

Aged Couple Defy City to Oust Them

Halifax, N. S.—Secure in their snug quarters at 969 Barrington Street an elderly man and woman have for two weeks successfully defied the City of Halifax and the owners of their property to oust them from their home. Besieged on every side, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Squires have remained firm, according to them, in the belief that Board and owners that the house will be torn down over their heads unless they decamp.

That was the story told at the regular meeting of the health board this month. Some time ago the house was condemned by the board and the owners appointed a contractor to proceed with the work of demolishing the building. But the Squires decided they were quite comfortable where they were and had not the slightest intention of moving.

"They must be out at the end of the month. The place must be demolished by then," explained the health board secretary. "They refuse to get out so apparently there is nothing that we can do."

"They will move fast enough when the contractor starts to tear down the building," said one of the aldermen, and it was decided to end the siege by razing the strongbox.

CEREAL RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought New Health

Every one who has suffered from constipation should read E. F. Sy Fisher's letter:

"For many years I suffered from constipation and could get relief, all kinds of laxatives. After a few days' treatment, I would be only where my condition the same as before and at times worse.

"Some time ago I started to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly, once a day as directed. Since doing this, I have found that I do not need any other medicine to procure the needed result, and it keeps me in very healthful condition."—Mr. F. M. Fisher. (Address on request.)

Constipation is caused by lack of bulk things in the diet. Fluid to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN supplies both—and also iron for the blood.

The fluid in ALL-BRAN is much like that in lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the wastes.

How much safer this is than risking the shock of strong, often harmful. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases, with every meal. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Equally tasty as a cereal, or used in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

ONLY MIRACLE SAVED LIFE IN HOLD UP

Lunch Room Owner Attempted to Foil Gunman

SOON ARRESTED

Taken by Police in Hotel Room with His Wife

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 5.—(By the Canadian Press)—Attempting to foil a gunman, who entered his lunchroom early last night, Tom Trout was shot in the face at close range, and a few minutes later, Jack Allen, who claimed shooting was in self defence, was arrested in his hotel room, nearby, on charge of attempted robbery with firearms.

According to Sourarian's story, the gunman and a taxi driver, Joe Trout, entered his lunch-room short before two o'clock and after ordering a light meal started for the door. The cab driver, who was waiting for a trip, made his exit first and when the man approached the door he is reported to have drawn a gun and ordered Sourarian to stand back. The Desperado then started toward the cash register and when Sourarian refused to make way for him he fired a shot which struck Trout. The latter dived on him, raising his gun, the robber fired, and Trout fell dead, Proprietor Sourarian's chest.

The gunman then leads the hold-up man fled along King street and up a back lane. Two police officers saw him, however, and when they found him in a hotel-room with his wife. Both were taken to police headquarters, where Allen was charged with the gun in his St. Catharines a few days ago.

At a local hospital where Sourarian was treated doctors explained it was nothing short of a miracle Sourarian escaped with his life. The 38-calibre bullet had struck his lower jaw and then stopped.

ATTACKS MOVE

Colleague Publicly Dissents at Protection Plan Presented

BY THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The National Government's long-awaited tariff, or "trade bill" before the House of Commons, taking the first step in its plan to end Great Britain's century old policy of free trade with the rest of the world, general ad valorem duty of 10 per cent. on all imports to the United Kingdom with certain exceptions.

Members packed every seat on the floor of the House and overflowed into the galleries, already crowded with spectators who numbered among them with the Prince of Wales, Duke of York and Prince George, as Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, rose to deliver his speech outlining the Government's tariff policy.

Mr. Chamberlain's enumeration of the Government's tariff policy contained six main points. They were:

1. A general ad valorem duty of 10 per cent. should be levied on all imports in Great Britain except as such articles as are subject to duty already.

2. A free list should be established which would include wheat in the grain, meat, cotton, tea and fish which may be caught in British waters, wool, raw materials, ores and coffee.

3. A superstructure of additional duties, above the general tariff, should be levied on non-essential articles which are the subject of luxuries and on such articles as can be produced in the Empire.

4. Duties would be imposed by order of the Government in connection with the Board of Trade, but the selection of dutiable articles would be made by an independent advisory committee of a chairman and from two to five members, who would be paid salaries proportionate to their standing and to the judicial attitude which would be expected of them.

5. The duties recommended by the advisory committee would be ad valorem or specific, as circumstances permanent.

6. The committee would also have the power of advising establishment of drawbacks to the tariff schedule, Chamberlain declared.

Mr. Chamberlain made it clear that measures of the tariff bill which the Government hopes to put through will be kept parliamentary procedure by Easter, and into operation by March 1 so as to apply to Canada or to any other of the Dominions at least until after the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference, which will be held starting June 21.

He also made it clear that existing duties are to be preserved for a period of 33 1-3 per cent. on automobiles, known as the McKenna duties, the safeguarding duties and duties imposed under the Abnormal Importations Act and the Anti-Dumping Duties Act would remain unchanged by passage of the bill, and that the additional duties would be levied against goods listed under the provisions of those measures.

Benefit to Canada

Canadian manufacturers, millers and farmers saw in the preference granted by the British tariff bill a definite opening for increased trade through the preference is considered at Ottawa Empire parley, they read an industrial benefits to come.

From the farmers' standpoint, the proposed duty of 10 per cent. preference on butter and cheese were the most disturbing, officials of the United Farmers of Ontario told a reporter last night. Britain imported butter from other countries, Canadians were said. The tariff would be a definite step of advantage to the Canadian farmer in meeting the keen competition of Denmark.

Some doubt existed among millers whether the 10 per cent. preference would apply to durum flour. If it did, it would make a tremendous difference, they said.

All lines of manufacturing for the import trade might be assisted, an official of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said. A great deal depended on the development of the permanency of the preference.

Old Man of Mountain Gone

Halifax, N. S.—"The Old Man of the Mountains", familiar landmark 45 miles north of Halifax on Cape Ann Shore Road, has gone. A huge boulder decided to take its place. Tons of rock, weighing from 200 to 300 tons, he was considered a menace to vehicular traffic, and on the morning of January 28 he was blasted into the sea. For many years the huge boulder was a milestone for motorists. Years ago, before the road was widened, cars and carriages passed under a projection from it that, extended over the highway. It was destroyed at the order of the Nova Scotia Department of Highways after an extended debate in regard to what should be its fate.

Youth Held After Companion Stabbed

OWEN SOUND, Ont., Feb. 5 — Willard Miller 18, Hanover, is in a very grave condition in the hospital with a punctured lung as the result of an attack allegedly to have been made on him by Leonard Marwith a large pair of scissors yesterday. Young Martin is under arrest in Owen Sound jail, and will be charged with attempted murder.

The two young men were employed in the same factory and the stabbing is said to have occurred following an argument.

HYMNAL IS PRESENTED

Miss Mary Callery Honored on Eightieth Birthday

The Monthly Meeting of Camillus W. M. S. was held on Tuesday, Feb. 2nd in the home of Mrs. Fred Gilbert, instead of on the regular day, Thursday Feb. 4th, so that the meeting could be held on the 80th celebration of the 80th birthday of one of the society members, namely Miss Mary Callery.

The programme was in charge of Group 2. Mrs. Harry Twiddy, president. Readings were given by Mrs. Harry Twiddy with "Call", and Mrs. Merrick "What did you do, my Lord Day?" and Mrs. Fred Gilbert with "The Macedonian Beneficence." Solos were interspersed by well rendered numbers on the gramaphone. There were 35 members and visitors present.

Following the programme Mrs. Joel Brenton, speaking on behalf of the members and friends assembled, referred to Miss Callery's long term of faithful membership and loving work and then presented her to the members.

On behalf of the members and friends, Mrs. Merrick presented Miss Callery with a beautiful New Hymnal, bound in red leather, with a gold lyre on the cover, and a suitable inscription, also being the occasion of her birthday. Both Miss Callery and Mrs. Calley thanked the members and friends for their kind remembrance.

Mrs. Hammond of Campbellford and Mrs. Calley also made very appropriate references for the occasion which were very much appreciated. Rev. Mr. Merrick closed in the congratulations and spoke very highly of the true Christian character of Miss Callery. Very dainty refreshments were served by the guests of honor with other old friends. At six o'clock and after all were seated at a table especially decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Joel Brenton occupied the seat at the head of the table and poured tea and coffee. The birthday cake made by Mrs. Maguire adorned the centre of the table.

The Pastor, Mr. Merrick, moved a very hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Bert Gilbert for the most cordial reception extended to the members and friends, also for the splendid and dainty refreshments, especially for the outstanding success of the tea. Bert spared no effort to make the event a joyous one, in concluding, Mr. Merrick paid special request and with Mrs. Merrick, a Hymn, out of the New Hymn book just presented to her.

MUST PAY DAMAGES

London, Feb. 5 (C. P. Cable).—Damages of a shoe endurance on New Year's Eve have been paid to the statue of Eros in Piccadilly Circus. COLLEGIATE SUFFERING SAYS REPORT

Inspectors Say Principal's Hands Tied By Teaching

MORE TEACHERS?

Principal's Value Lies in Administration The State

Extracts from the reports of Inspectors I. M. Levan, A. J. Husband and W. A. Jennings, who recently completed their visit of inspection of the Collegiate, terminating on December 4th and comprising December 3rd and 4th, reveal some interesting facts. The report which was read at the meeting of Education Wednesday evening was certified by the Deputy Minister of Education as follows:

Discipline:—Mostly satisfactory.

Attendance—Boys 284; girls 381; total 665.

Fire Drill—Once per week.

Remarks:—Equipment varies from fair to excellent. Almost all of it is good. Rooms that are working very hard this year on account of large attendance.

The school building is a splendid building, well equipped for the purpose of secondary education, but there is a serious drawback in the insufficiency of room for recreation." The ratio of pupils is 37 to 1. As might be expected, some of the classes are inordinately large. In the two Fourth Forms there are 100 pupils. "Teachers find it impossible to give the proper attention to those who need it in many of the classes. Furthermore, the number of teachers is actually too much and it is also necessary to have pupils in the class room unsupervised by any member of the staff. "This condition was frequently noticed during the two days' tour of inspection. The amount of study that is done in the rooms is very little indeed.

The principal is also teaching or supervising a class during the day. He has no time to supervise the work of the teachers and is of the opinion that he is free to attend the general meetings of the school. It is as an administrator and leader that a principal is of most value. He cannot properly perform these functions under the conditions that obtain here. They are unparalleled in any school of this size in Ontario.

"We have no hesitation in saying that the progress of the pupils is suffering. To give the principal the required time and to bring the number of pupils per teacher down to the maximum permitted by the regulations, at least four additional teachers would be necessary. Two fatrness to the teachers here, at least two should be appointed, at once."

Public School Report

This report made by the Inspectors and read to the Board was referred to the School Management Committee. The following is the report sent in by Inspector of Public Schools, Mr. Clarke, dated February 3rd. This was the annual report for the year just ending, and a copy was compiled and sent to Toronto as per regulations. Salient points of the report are outlined below: The fact that too many pupils were transferred from one school to another during the year resulted in a duplicate of registrations. It would be difficult to say exactly how many did attend school during 1931, but the approximate number of the daily average attendance was 17163, which is the largest daily average yet attained, in spite of the fact that two large schools were seriously interrupted from early June until well on in September, which materially reduced the average.

The legislative grant will be approximately $4461.92 less than amount obtained at Toronto to cover 3% per cent. of salaries of teachers which are deducted when making payment, and is an integral part of the grant. The total amount to about $1230.60. Not materially different than that received in 1931.

No child in school this year will have to submit to an examination for promotion to a class outside his own school except such of the High School Entrance candidates as are not sufficiently recommended by their teachers to receive the approval of the High School Entrance Board. All these have to take the Departmental Examination.

The purely public schools promotions will be made entirely by the teachers, subject, however, to the grade teachers concerned. "It is highly desirable that consultation" stated Mr. Clarke, "that the teachers of the different grades confer on their work in order that there may be uniformity in the standard of study required in the different grades."

Y.P.A. HAS AMATEUR NIGHT

rrying Place Members Enjoy Splendid Program, Monday

rrying Place—On Monday evening the regular meeting of the P.A. of Carrying Place was held in the Parish Hall, with Rev. E. E. ower acting as chairman in the ence of the president, Miss Hel- MacDougall. Owing to the crisp weather of the evening the at- dance was not as large as usual, the programme was of its us- fine quality. After the business the evening had been concluded, members presented a series of bers, musical, oratorical, liter- and all amusing, only one item being called at a time to show or her talent. It was "amat- night" and was painful in , but most acquitted them- e nobly.

Community League

large crowd attended the first eting of the recently organized mmunity League in the United rch on Thursday evening. The eting began with the singing of hymn. Scripture reading by Mr. elder, Mr. A. H. Narrington and prayer by Rev. Mr. Cook of Consecon. In his address at the commencement of the programme, Mr. Narrington pointed out the value of the league not only to the individual but to the community.

After the reading of the minutes by Miss L. Brigle, the secretary, plans were made for the next meeting. Miss Nora Hennessey outcommencing the programme, gave a very amusing recitation entitled "How Uncle Josh Took his First Toboggan Ride". Miss Bernice Davis, violin specimens, gave an illustrated talk on Pumpis Plants. A short song by several girls provided amusement, and was followed by a most interesting talk on present day financial conditions by Mr. Chrile Wisefall. After a song by Mr. Alec Greig, each of the four vice-presidents, Miss Elsie Pitchett and Messrs Bill Latour, Bill Hanthorn and Arnold Weese, spoke a few words.

The last number on the program was an informal debate on the resolution "that young people had more real fun 25 years ago than now", proved by far the most enjoyable. The debaters, Mrs. Weller and Mr. Erle Weller, her son plunged heartily into the discussion, although Erle in his enthusiasm, went a little to far in his statements. However the audience howled with laughter and the applause seemed to give the young people the decision. The meeting closed with the members repeating the Mizpah Benediction. The next programme will be under the direction of Miss Elsie Pitchett and Mr. Bill Hanthorn.

The sudden death of Jockey "Bud" Dainty in a car accident early on Monday morning has thrown a gloom over the whole community. "Bud" was a favourite everywhere, and his friends who saw him so cheery a few days ago, can still scarcely credit the fact that he is gone from among us. Hewill soon be forgotten.

Mrs. F. C. Courneya of Peterboro spent Thursday and Friday here with her sister, Mrs. A. H. Narrington.On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Narrington and Mrs. Courrya motored to Peterboro for the week end. Mr. Narrington returned early Monday morning, but Mrs. Narrington who has not been well recently, is remaining in Peeboror for a week's visit.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Dusenbury spent Monday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Latour.

Mr. W. E. Weese is at present employed in the orchestra of Mr. S. Nesbitt of Brighton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Latour and Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Dusenbury motored to Mount Carmel Church on Thursday evening to attend an old fashioned tea meeting. Both the food and the programme were excellent.

Miss Lela Black, and Misses A. Narrington, E. Quackenbush, and E. Green attended the weekly class in French at T.H.S. on Monday evening.

Miss Lavina Weese and Mr Colin Lain of Wellington spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese.

One case of measles has been reported in that community but at present no other cases are known, although in Trenton the disease is prevalent.

A number from here attended the hockey game between Lindsay and Trenton at Trenton Areas, Monday evening.

PRESBYTERIAL IN SESSION

Executive Officers Meet in John Street Church

An executive meeting of Belleville Presbyterial Woman's Missionary Society was held in the parlour of John Street United Church, Belleville on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 2nd 1932 with an attendance of seventeen. The meeting was called to receive the reports of the secretaries before they were passed on to the Branch officers.

The President, Mrs. S. C. Gay, opened the meeting with a solemn prayer for guidance. Four of the Vice-Presidents, Mesdames Farnworth, Dafoe, Rose and Hooper, gave very encouraging reports. They have forwarded membership and "Kingdom of God Movement" cards to auxiliaries and have also visited several and gave addresses, as well as sending out many personal letters. It was decided to hold the Presbyterial in John Street Church on Wednesday and Thursday, April 6th and 7th and the schedule will be mailed at an early date. All auxiliaries are asked to send in nominations for Presbyterial Officers to Mrs. George Finlay, R.R.No. 7. It is hoped that for this year, the annual Branch meeting will be dispensed with, which will save considerable expenditure as the finances are below normal.

Reports were given or sent in by all departments secretaries excepting C.O.I.T. groups, and from them pass on the following:

Belleville Presbyterial has a total membership of 2,063 and this year remitted $20,400 to the Branch. Thirty-five auxiliaries present Circles than stewardship at each meeting. Mrs. Gordon Jell they should have 233 associate helpers and 23 of them have been active members. Although the finances are down there has been a wonderful growth spiritually. A few auxiliaries are having difficulty to find a president and all are urged to pray for new leadership. A wonderful amount of cheer and comfort has been given the needy by bales of clothing and the supply allocation for 1933 will soon be sent out. Many lonely hearts are being comforted as well as the bereaved by the stranger's secretaries. Forty-five mission bands have 942 paid members and contributed $1,290.14. Bloomfield Band will receive the banner. The literature department is reaping a harvest from the extra work expended upon it by the secretary and great enthusiasm is being shown. There were 1,436 subscriptions to the missionary monthly. Thirty-six auxiliaries have linked up with the Temperance course and many periodicals are being studied and prayer for the cause is also urged.

Sixty-three press reports have been received and nearly one thousand items of missionary news has been published. All the officers were disappointed that more reports from auxiliaries had not been received but hope they will be forwarded at a very early date otherwise they will not be reported at the Presbyterial. Reports of special auxiliary meetings are to be sent at once to the Press Secretary of the Presbyterial as well as being reported in the local press.

Members present were—Mrs. S. C. Gay, Pomboro; Mrs. R. Farnsworth, the extra work expended upon Madoc; Mrs. J. L. Ross, Bloomfield Mrs. F. U. Hoover, Napanee; Mrs. E. L. Fraser, Trenton; Mrs. George Switzer, Napanee; Mrs. R. J. Corbill, Napanee; Mrs. H. W. Sweet, Napanee, R.R.11; Mrs. W. S. Gordon, Tweed; Mrs. A. H. Howe, Deseronto; Mrs. O. S. Reddick, Napanee; Miss Alice Hume, Stirling; Mrs. O. A. Ferguson, Belleville; Mrs. (Dr.) Marbee, Odessa; Mrs. C. S. Sharpe, Belleville; Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Stirling.

Tickell Front Street Property Sold to Local Hydro, $25,000 is Paid

Belleville Commission Follows in Line of Other Local Boards

FINE PROPERTY

Negotiations Have Been Proceeding For Some Time

The Belleville Hydro Electric Commission will announce in their annual report which will be issued in the near future that they have purchased from the heirs of the estate of the late Mrs. George S. Tickell the property which is occupied by Tickell and Sons Company at 273 Front street. The purchase price was $25,000.

Tickell and Sons Company have been carrying on a furniture business at the above point for the last fifty-five or sixty years. The main building on Front street was built by a Mr. Chisholm as a home and the store and when Tickell and Sons Company took it over they fitted it for a furniture store, later adding additions to the rear where they carried on a business in upholstering and upholstering.

The land in the transfer is slightly over an acre. It has a frontage on Front street of 207 feet 6 inches, a depth of 263½ feet and a width at the rear of 68½ feet. The lot has a frontage 9 inches in width taken off the ground floor of the main building and it is understood a right-of-way from the property to Pinnacle street is provided. The main building is of brick construction and is three stories in height. There is also a two story and one garage approximately 33 feet square. It is likely that the Commission will demolish all the ground floor portion of the front of the building and that the upper portion will be for rent.

Early Negotiations.

The negotiations for the purchase of the property took place some months in 1931 but the fact that the lease on the property now occupied by the Commission did not expire until November of 1931 and it was necessary for the Commission to secure a renewal of the lease prior to three months of its termination so that Commissioner Gill could get after Mr. Tickell properly but were later able to come to an agreement with the Kresge Company, who are the owners of the property, that the Commission now occupy, for a short term renewal of the lease. The lease as renewed will expire in December of this year and as the Commission take over the Tickell property as of July 1st it will give them ample time to make the necessary alterations prior to their occupancy.

Continued Growth.

The Belleville Commission in making the purchase are following out the policy which has been followed by most of the Hydro Commissions. In the growth of a city, business property and this policy has been approved by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario. Just recently this policy has been carried out by Toronto and Hamilton. The Public Utilities Commission of Oshawa built a building at an authorized expenditure of $60,000.00 and the Hydro Commission of Portland also built a new office building.

The property which the Commission have just purchased is well located, being approximately in the centre of the city, and while a new building would have been preferable it is felt that the present building can be well adapted to the requirements. There is plenty of yard room as well as a driveway and the access to Pinnacle street from the rear of the property will be most useful. The addition of the Commission's offices to the east side of Front street should improve the business advantages of that part of Front street as the very great power in the city makes use of the Hydro office and with an improved front appearance of the section will be better.

DARTMOOR PRISON UNSUITABLE FOR PRISONERS OF DANGEROUS CLASS

London, Feb. 6—Ancient Dartmoor Prison, the scene of a recent serious disturbance, is unsuitable for prisoners of a dangerous modern type, a report of the official enquiry printed today said.

Herbert Du Parcq, chief investigator, said he believed there was a real danger. Attempts to deliver the prisoners might be made with outside help. The last enquiry into the prison was in 1863. The prison administration and the prisoners had no substantial grievances.

Ragged Stray Cats or Dogs Only Life in City of Dead

Chapei, Once Home of 200,000 People, Now in Ruins

LOSSES MILLIONS

(BY MORRIS J. HARRIS)

(Copyright 1932 Associated Press)

Shanghai, Feb. 6 (AP)—The riddled Chapei section of Shanghai, once the home of 200,000 people and the apple of the tourist's eye, today was a city of the dead.

For eight consecutive days and night Japanese aeroplanes and big guns have poured shells and bombs into the closely congested area, leaving a scar which time is not likely to erase.

The "innocent" have suffered with the guilty. The sentiments of the sector's defense. Thousands of people many of them knew scarcely what it was all about, have lost their homes and many of them have been killed by fire and bursting shells. Ranking military estimation is a mass—8 months, riddle by bombs and razed by fire. The Crews Alexandra 2; Doncaster R. 0.

Chapei, however, is crushed. It is now a waste land. To escape from it into the settlement, where people live without rifles and bayonets, and where cleanliness still prevails, is like stepping from one world into another.

The only living things in many parts of Chapei are forlorn and ragged stray cats and dogs.

ICE 9 INCHES IS CUT IN BAY

Several Dealers Try to Harvest Crop Though Sun Shines

Making hay while the sun shone had a parallel in the city this morning when the icemen went to work on the bay, and while the warm sun shone down were busily engaged in cutting the ice which still remained thick and cold. Several loads were observed on the different streets this morning of large cakes of ice which, when measured on an average of eight and nine inches in thickness.

While the men connected with this branch of the local industry hold out some hope for heavier ice later on, and are quite convinced that there is a fair crop of ice coming up of the bay the same as in former years, no doubt a report will be made by them on the matter and all ice which is cut from the bay will be harvested as fast as they can handle it. While it may not be as thick as it has been in the past there is a lot of good quality and clean; the thickness of the ice does not materially matter as more of it will be cut to make up for it. The ice that does remain is that comprised of the ice which has not left the bay since the first real cold snap about a month ago. The very cold weather experienced yesterday, when the mercury hovered around the zero mark for a short while further consolidated it.

SEVEN SHELLS IN AREA

Washington, D.C., Feb. 6.—The exclusion of seven shells from Chinese anti-aircraft guns in the marine regiments area at Shanghai was reported to the United States Navy Department.

EX PREMIER'S SWORD GIVEN TO OLD REG'T.

Evelyn Bowell McCarthy Presents Sword of Sir Mackenzie Bowell to ONE TIME MAJOR.

At the monthly meeting of the Officers' Mess of the Argyll Light Infantry last night, Lieut.-Colonel Keeler and his fellow officers were recipients of a gift from Mrs. G. W. McCarthy, 214 Bridge Street, of this city. This was a sword of her father's, the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C.M.G., who was for some time a Major in command of No. 1 Company of the old 2Y, Battalion, and presented to him by his company sixty-five years ago.

Major Alford in accepting the gift, as president of the Mess, expressed the appreciation of the officers of Mrs. McCarthy's thoughtful and kindly act.

For some time the Argylls have been collecting mementos, articles and anything associated with the earlier activities of the unit and are gradually acquiring a museum which in time will become one of the city of interest but of value to those who follow in the regiment.

Lieut.-Col. Keeler has asked the Ontario Historical Society for a letter accompanying Mrs. McCarthy's gift to his battalion.

The Officer Commanding and Officers of the Argyll Light Infantry,

From verbal and newspaper reports, I have noted you are endeavoring to secure relics of the early regiment, with the idea of preserving them for future generations.

I am sending you a sword of my father's (Sir Mackenzie Bowell) which you will see from the inscription on the blade, was presented to him by No. 1 Company of the 49th Battalion (2Y), which, evidently, he relinquished command of it.

Trusting this may find a place in your collection, and with kindest wishes for the continued well-being of your battalion,

Sincerely,

Evelyn Bowell McCarthy.

CHINA'S ARMY VERY YOUNG

Boys of Fourteen in 19th Chinese Army at Shanghai

Shanghai, China, Sunday, Feb. 7 (AP)—China's troops, reinforced by the best units in the land in a better position early this morning to withstand the Japanese artillery barrage.

The Associated Press correspondent, touring behind the Chinese lines, saw the new men coming up in a battle zone steadily pouring out. For the past few days the men who have been holding the lines have withstood a terrific bombardment and they seemed ready and eager.

The 19th Chinese army is supposed to be the best trained unit in the country, but to western eyes they seemed definitely untrained and certainly they lack much in equipment.

They carried guns of a dozen varieties, some of them antiquated. Many had no bayonets and some of them rifles long outmodeled. A few of the men were obviously recruited from the Japanese, but most of them looked like farmers.

The most impressive thing about them was their extreme youth. Many of them certainly were not more than fourteen years old.

U. S. MISSIONS ARE ATTACKED

Japanese Bluejackets Force Way Into Buildings

(By Morris J. Harris)

Shanghai, Feb. 6 (CP)—Two United States mission houses were attacked by Japanese bluejackets soon while a fleet of aeroplane bombers circled overhead, searching for the second time the flattening sector of Chapei.

Japanese blue jackets forcibly entered and ransacked the Presbyterian mission house on the north Szechuen Road, well within the area occupied by the Japanese. They forced their way into the building in spite of an official notice of the United States Consul which was nailed up on the entrance to the property.

Signatures by Millions for Peace are Presented

Impressive Scene as Five Groups Appear at Arms Parley

CANADA THERE

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Feb. 6 (CP)—The great assembly of sixty nations today heard the voice of an outside world clamoring for peace and disarmament. Today was the special day set aside by the disarmament conference for the reception of petitions and signatures came by millions from every continent. So numerous were the organizations represented they had to be divided into five groups. Repre sentatives of women's organizations alone with 8,000,000 signatures, from every corner of the earth stretched the length of the assembly hall into the corridors outside.

Four Canadian women resident in Geneva carried the volumes of Canadian signatures and deposited them on the table before the president of the assembly. They were Mrs. W. Peel Riddell, wife of the Canadian advisory officer on international labor to the League; Mrs. Eastman, wife of Dr. Eastman, the Canadian Labor League office; Mrs. Rasminsky, wife of O. Rasminsky of the League Secretariat and Mrs. Fellows, daughter of Mrs. Huestan, of Toronto.

As volume after volume of the women's petitions were presented to the assembly, there was applause and there was special applause when the signature of Japanese women were deposited with the rest.

Exacting the same applause were Mrs. Frank Stewart, Winnipeg, Alex Hurd, Hamilton, Ont., Irving Jaffre, Ed Schroeder, Manitoba Farmer and Ed Wedge of the United States and the Norwegian sea, Bernt Svensen and Ivar Ballangrud, qualified again today for the finals Monday of the 10,000 metres Olympic championship

The two heats, first four in each to qualify, were ordered raced on today After a series of protests and disqualifications yesterday.

Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 6.—Canada gained undisputed possession of the top rung in the Olympic hockey standings by her admirable work in 4-1 defeat to the rugged, but less experienced Germans, which added earlier in the series had chalked up a victory at the expense of Poland.

The Winnipegs, far fleeter and better stick handlers than their adversaries, scored twice in the first period and added two more in the second before the Germans had the defeated squad in the competition but a big threat to the end.

The Germans were something of a surprise to the Canadians. They put up a hard and desperate game, and their persistent back checking spoiled many a Canadian attack and drive.

Walter Monson scored the two opening Canadian goals, both assists from Vic Lindquist. The two plays were practically identical and came in the first period.

The Line-ups:

Canada—Hirsch, Cockburn, defence, Sutherland and Hinkel; centre, Simpson; wings, Monson and Mather; goal, Lindquist, Monson, Rivers.

Germany—Ball, Leicher; defence, Heinrich and Romer; centre, Ball; wings, Herkin and Jaenche; goal, Hans Heinrich and Strehl.

Referee—Lou Marsh, Toronto, and Donald Munro, Boston.

Summary.

First period—

1—Canada, Monson (Lindquist) 1:45

2—Canada, Monson (Lindquist) 12:30

Penalties—Sutherland, Romer.

Second period—

3—Germany, Ball-y (Sutherland) 4:10

4—Canada, Wise (Malloy and Sutherland) 10:31.

Penalties—Hinkel.

Third period—

5—Germany, Herker (Korff) 13:58.

No penalties.

The Germans scored smartly in the last period, catching the Canadian defence down the ice. Korff sent a shot into Cockburn's pads and Herker batted the rebound into the net. The Canadians rallied, but and here tomorrow as their next Olympic appearance.

Northern Volcano in Violent State

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 6—Reports from Spurr Steam Harbor, 156 miles east of Unimak Island, in the Aleutian chain, tell of the violent eruption of the volcano Shishaldin, one of the highest peaks in the chain.

Its spectacular outburst, described in radio reports, is more violent than it has been in years. Over the rim of its crest crater huge rivers of molten lava are pouring down its unshielded slopes and the force of the eruption is throwing live ash far out into Behring Sea.

Lake Placid Jottings

Two Injured

Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 6.—The Belgian four man bobsled, practising for the start of the Olympic competition Monday, crashed on White Face Curve today, injuring two members of the team slightly.

Max Houben, steering, took the sled too high on the massive ice wall of Whiteface, tipped the top, and broke a runner. The sled tumbled into the track.

Houben's left shoulder was sprained and Jean Pelleve, another, suffered a cut over the right eye. Jacques Maus and Theo Maris, also on the sled, were uninjured. All are expected to be able to race Monday.

Same Eight Qualify.

Exactly the same eight speed skaters, Frank Stewart, Winnipeg, Alex Hurd, Hamilton, Ont., Irving Jaffre, Ed Schroeder, Manitoba Farmer and Ed Wedge of the United States and the Norwegian sea, Bernt Svensen and Ivar Ballangrud, qualified again today for the finals Monday of the 10,000 metres Olympic championship

The two heats, first four in each to qualify, were ordered raced on today After a series of protests and disqualifications yesterday.

Baby Carriages First in Wood Using Industries

Ottawa, Feb. 6—The making of baby carriages is still the "most important" single item of production in the miscellaneous woodusing industries, says a report from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

It is evident, of course, that some consumers have been penalized for, without yielding first place, the industry was not called upon to supply so many in 1930 as in 1929. Baby carriages to the value of $279,403 were manufactured, and children's vehicles priced at $246,650 at the factories.

That was a total of $526,052 as against $773,812 in 1929. Apparently the old perambulators in many cases have had to do duty for the next arri- le.

RECALL OLD NEW YEAR'S

Twenty Years Ago Today Chinese New Year Abolished

Today, twenty years ago, would have been New Year's Day in China but with the change of government to that of a Republic on January first at that time, Dr. Sun, the father of the Chinese Republic, abolished the old lunar calendar and in its place substituted the Gregorian calendar.

The Chinese New Year is now commenced on January first the same as is the custom with all modern nations. As a result of this change, the National government in its enthusiasm to carry out with all customs that savored of the monarchic government abolished the celebration of the New Year's Day, which has been observed Strehl.

Now the "old" New Year's Day is observed by only a small percentage of the older people who are not prepared to give up them in a very quiet manner.

Most of the Chinese men in Belleville have adopted the new time the change was made and their knowledge regarding the old regime is limited. There are, however, a number of the Chinese people in Belleville, who remember that today, February sixth, was at one time the New Year's Day and are observed January first is New Year's Day in them.

ROUTINE MEETING

Montreal, Que. Feb. 6 — The Board of Directors of the Algoma Steel Corporation met here yesterday at the offices of the late Sir Vincent Corporation. Following the meeting it was announced that only routine business was transacted.

CIVIC RELIEF FUNDS BEGIN RUNNING LOW

Nearly $7,000 Expended to Date on Direct Relief

STATEMENT

A general meeting of the Belleville Unemployment Relief Committee was held last evening in the City Hall with a good attendance of all committees and chairmen thereof, including G. A. C. Weir, chairman of the finance committee, F. V. Tilley, chairman of the supplies committee, Lorne Green, chairman of the employment committee, George Reid, chairman of the Male committee presided and representatives were present from the Women's Christian Association which has to do with the direct distribution of relief.

Reports were presented and much business transacted. Considerable sums have been spent upon food and fuel while some rent had to be paid to prevent evictions, and the reports disclosed that the funds have been subject to a severe drain and approach exhaustion although two months of winter remains to be taken care of Receipts to January 31, including government payments, totalled 27,277.12. Expenditures to January 31 were 20,277.12 leaving a cash balance at January 31 of $7121.01 Expenditures for the week ended to date total $855.63, including government grants.

January expenditure was high, but as bills from grocers and others are not done monthly the amount can only be estimated, the whole amount including food and fuel, for January being $4360.00. The February bill is approximating, estimated to come from government, but the cash on hand will leave a cash balance of $3234.

AUXILIARY HOLDS WEEKLY AT-HOME

Another large crowd present on Memorial Hall last evening testified to the popularity of the usual weekly dances and euchre parties held by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the War Veterans' Association. Nearly one hundred people attended the entertainment provided. In the fore part the various tables of progressive euchre occupied the evening, and in the latter part, after refreshments were provided by the ladies in attendance, the evening was given over to dancing to the music supplied by Miss Helen Darrah and her orchestra.

Prize winners for the card games were: — Ladies' Mrs. Boyle, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Wilson; gentlemen — Mr. J. Simpson, Mr. Pointer and Mr. McDonald.

SALVATION ARMY HELD SUPPER

As part of the celebration of the founding of the Salvation Army in Belleville forty-eight years ago, a supper was served in the Army Citadel on Pinnacle street Friday evening. About seventy-five and fifty persons attended; several merchants entertained the members of their staffs at the supper and on every side expressions of praise were heard for the many good things provided by the energetic women of the Army.

Among those present were the many officers from Trenton.

RECONSTRUCTION OF MESS BUILDING

Rebuilding of the two storey frame mess building which suffered fire damage last January 16th, is contemplated by the Department of National Defence, R.C.D.Lieut.-Col. F. G. Desbarats, Deputy Minister.

NO ICE TO BE CUT FROM RIVER

The Ontario Department of Health has notified Dr. D. Thomson, Medical Officer of Health, for Marmora Village, Marmora township and Rawdon, that the ice for storage purposes must not be cut from the Crowe river south of the dam in Marmora Village, and Marmora Herald. The Department rules that the water in the river is badly polluted and that with the high water all the water south of the dam is likely to be affected. It is likely most of the ice for the village will be cut at Crowe Lake.

FALLS ON STICK RECEIVES CUT

Lé Vernaine Paul, while playing hockey in the public school league at the Arena this morning, received a nasty gash about the mouth, when he fell on a hockey stick of a team mate during the warm up period previous to the league game between King George and St. Michael's schools. The game was won by King George by the score of 3 to 2.

The second game, between the Prince of Wales school and Queen Mary School resulted in a win for the latter, when the "north hill" team ran in three goals in the final period to win the game 6 to 3.

These public school games, which are played every Saturday morning at the Belleville Arena, are creating quite a lot of public interest since the town as a number of adults are seen weekly attending the games, when Queen Victoria School are the league leaders.

FILL VACANCIES OF TRUSTEES

At the meeting of the Board of Education, Thursday evening last, the vacancies in that body for trustees from Sidney Ward were filled by the appointment of L. E. McLean and Harold Monteith to act in the place of F. H. Henry and F. E. Houston who had resigned their office. The new members being appointed under Sec. 7, Chap. 327 of the Boards of Education Act of Ontario.

Mr. Henry tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Education on November last.

POLICE COURT

Four minor cases were presented before Magistrate Mikel this morning. Daniel Marwen who pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor in an illegal place yesterday was remanded for one week. But in this case was granted although the accused had pleaded guilty.

A local young lady appeared on a charge of vagrancy and the Crown asked for one week's enlargement with bail being refused. Another case of non-support was also laid over for six days.

An early order this morning Constable Taylor arrested a youth of 18 coming out of Dickson's and Son gangway. The lad could not give a very good account of himself and he was taken to the police station. He was arraigned before His Worship this morning, in Children's Court, charged with theft of a small amount of money from a local business place. As the boy was under the age of 16 years he was placed in the custody of the local Children's Aid Society, where he will remain until the trial of the case, which is to be one week from today.

CITY MARKET

Under the spell of a warm and bright winter's sun, Saturday's local market was very largely attended by both vendors and purchasers. The weather conditions were ideal for outside purchasing with the result that considerable business was transacted during the morning's trading.

With the exception of butter, which sold as low as 23 cents a pound, prices remained about the same as last week. Butter ranged from 25c to 26c a pound, while eggs sold at 16c to 20c a dozen. Many fine fowl were offered at from 7c up according to the size and weight.

The cuticle market was a hive of industry, when considerable business was in evidence. The prevailing prices were in vogue when pecks, carrots, parsnips and turnips all sold at 5c cents a peck. An individual squash brought be each, while Indian squash sold for 3c apiece. Green onions (bohouse variety) sold for 5c a bunch, and bole-bunch rhubarb brought 10c for two bunches. Potatoes sold for 50c a bag, while celery brought 10c a large bunch. Many fine specimens of apples were seen and sold at the prevailing prices, which have been in vogue all winter.

Meat, both fresh and cured, was in evidence and sold for $5.00 to $6.00 a hind. A number of pigs were offered at from $5.00 to $6.00 a pair. The market, in general, was a very interesting affair, with more trading shown than in some time.

Obituary

LATE ALEXANDER J. WARD

The funeral of the late Alexander James Ward took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence at Holloway, the Rev. W. Wright officiating. Interment was made in Holloway Union Church cemetery being in charge of the service.

The deceased for a number of years was station agent at Holloway and was for a time at the late Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Ward.

The bearers were all friends of the deceased.

MRS. MARY CROCKERS

Mary Clement, beloved wife of Guilford Crockers, of Scarboro Road, Toronto, passed away suddenly at her home on Friday. She was born in Belleville, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clement and for many years resided in this city. An adherent of the Anglican Church she leaves to mourn her loss, one son Harry Clay, Toronto, two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Chard Hamilton, Mrs. A. Quinlan, Belleville, and two brothers William Clement, Toronto, and Stephen Clement, Kenora Falls, N.Y. The body will be brought to Belleville to the home of her sister, Mrs. A. Quinlan, 7 Fahey St. tonight from where the funeral will be held on Monday. Mrs. Crockers was well known in this city and her sudden passing will be a shock to a wide circle of friend.

BIRTHDAY PARTY OF O.E.S. IS HELD

Presentations Made in Presence of Many Visitors

The annual birthday party of Belleville Chapter No. 93, Order of the Eastern Star, held last evening in the Oddfellows' Temple was one of the most successful functions sponsored by the Chapter. Guests in large numbers were present, many attending from the latter chapters in the district, and Palmerston, Ottawa, Toronto, and other widely scattered points.

The members were welcomed by Mrs W. D. Embury, Worthy Matron. During chapter work an impressive memorial service was held in memory of departed members of the Chapter from its institution to the present time. The service was solemn and beautiful, as the names of those who had passed to the Grand Chapter above, were read and their memory reverred.

After the closed session of the Chapter, a beautiful three-storey birthday cake, which occupied the centre of attraction in the room, was cut. A pretty little ceremonial was observed. Past Matrons and Past Patrons of the Chapter with the presiding Matron and Patron, formed a circle around the cake, each blew out a candle. Then Mrs. Anna Boyd, Worthy Grand Matron, cut the cake and presented the knife used, a handsome silver cake knife, to the Worthy Matron as a gift from one of the members of the chapter, to Mrs. Embury.

A buffet lunch was served and the social committee deserved the highest praise for the delicious menu provided. During the evening Mayor George O. Tice, who gave a brief and interesting talk presented Mrs. Boyd with a lovely bouquet for which she thanked the members in a charming manner. Dancing was enjoyed for the rest of the evening.

ONE THIRD OF CITY READERS AT LIBRARY

Adult Circulation of Corby Library Increases

WORK OF YEAR

At the annual meeting last evening of Corby Public Library Board, the report of the year's work at the library showed encouraging increase in the various branches. Circulation increased 14,264 and it is interesting to note that the circulation of non-fiction is growing steadily.

The members of the library board include:

Chairman—M. P. Duff.
Secretary-Treasurer—H. J. Clarke B.A.
Chairman of Finance Committee—C. N. Bolman.
Chairman of Book Committee, F. Conklin, A. C. Wilkie, B. J. Black, F. D. Diamond, C. Walters, Geo. C. Thor.

The report of the librarian, Miss White follows:

Membership

During the year 1176 names were added to the number and 210 were withdrawn. We have now 5535 borrowers, which is considerably more than one-third of our population.

Books Added

1068 volumes were catalogued and added to our shelves during the year. Of this number 1056 were by purchase and 12 were donated. We have now in the library 13,802 volumes.

Circulation

In 1931 our circulation totalled 130,045. This number of books were from the adult section, 18,875 from the children's room and 5,306 reference volume were consulted. Our increase over 1930 was 14,264. It is gratifying to note that the non-fiction reading done by our adult borrowers is steadily increasing. This is due to the personal efforts of the staff in helping patrons, and to our weekly reviews in the Ontario Intelligencer, to which paper we are indebted for generously in the matter of library publicity. Circulation of children's books while advancing is still small in proportion to the borrowing patronage. Last summer we arranged a travel contest for the children which stimulated their interest and increased the circulation for the months of June, July and August.

There is a great deal more that may be done in this way to encourage children to read. We believe, also, that we should go into the matter of giving the Saturday morning story hour. This month, we are planning expeditions to the schools, where short talks will be given on the different classes. The importance of guiding and encouraging children to read cannot be over-emphasized.

The Reference Room is continuing to function in a satisfactory manner. A number of new and valuable books have been added during the year and 1932 will see a further increase in our stock. On request the Dominion Government sent us their issues of the Canadian Patent Office Record. The Library now has a complete file for the past eighteen years, which is the life of a Canadian patent. These files may be consulted by library patrons at any time. We have indexed most of our pamphlet material, but the increased circulation does not allow us much time for this work. What has been made available, however has been used a great deal, and we shall continue to build up this service, as well as the picture collection.

Staff

Miss Ethel Adams was appointed to the staff in September to take the place of Miss Grace Jackson, who left to be married. Miss Adams is an excellent worker, and we are fortunate in having her services. Miss Kathryn Gallagher, a member of the staff for the past three years, is continuing to give valuable work. Alfred Woodhouse, caretaker, is to be commended for his work and the very favorable appearance of the library building and grounds. He is filling the place made vacant by the death of John Howard.

May I take this opportunity of thanking the board for erecting the fire escape on this building. It gives us a feeling of security, living as we do on the second floor. The fire escape also serves as a safety measure for the children's room, located on the first floor. Other work done on the building during the year, includes painting the woodwork and varnishing the floor on the main hall, also painting the Reference Room woodwork, repainting the roof and installing light brackets in the children's room.

In my annual report of last year, I outlined some changes to be made in the ground floor section. You are all, I believe, familiar with the plan for these changes. Action has been delayed by actually accomplishing anything, due to the fact that some of our meetings were postponed, and also, we were unable to get estimates on the floor work.

We have the estimates now, however, and I hope that work will proceed as soon as possible, as the congestion in that section is becoming most acute, with our increased circulation we (more than 1,500 books pass across that counter in one day, it is little short of remarkable if we are able to bring any sort of order out of the chaos. On Saturday night, the staff is literally falling over itself, and occasionally one of the public gets trampled underfoot. I can assure you that borrowers of the library will appreciate the efficiency and service that will be made possible under the new arrangement. This is the most imperative change needed at the present time, and until it has been accomplished, we cannot consider that our library is in line with others of its size and potentialities in the province.

I should like to thank each member of the Board for the kindness and consideration which he has shown me during the past year. It has been a pleasure to work with and for you for the common good of the library, that we are doing a very worthwhile work, especially during this time of unrest and unemployment, I think we all realize.

I am, sirs,

Yours most faithfully,
MARGARET P. WHITE,
Librarian.

FALLING ICE FILLS BASKET

Woman Marketing Has Narrow Escape From Ice

A warm sun shining on the gable of an uptown building loosened a large hunch of snow that has been hanging precariously over the walk below shortly after seven o'clock this morning.

A lady had been walking underneath with full market basket around the impending fall, but, ed upwards just at that instant, and sidestepped just in time to avoid the brunt of the load which flattened itself on the walk with a thud right at the feet of some of the following streamers of people. Boated more slowly and reach pany the main body of the snow. While the fall was large it was quite heavy and was impregnated with several smaller icicles which had been formed on the edge of the roof. Had the object hit her it might have injured the lady but beyond the fact that her market basket was filled with bread, butter and cost was also sprayed, no harm was done. That makes the second incident of its kind to happen this winter.

Sir John Simon Cuts Visit to Shore Due to Situation

ALL ANXIOUS

Chinese Gain Slightly — Japan's Bombs Are Deadly.

LONDON, Feb. 6. — The British Government, acting in harmony with Washington, sent an added protest to Tokio against the Japanese use of the International Settlement as a base for attack against the Chinese. The protest was sent verbally through the British Legation, the British Ambassador to Japan. It probably was not couched in such vigorous terms as the note which, it is understood, was sent from Washington today to the same effect.

Foreign Minister Sir John Simon left this afternoon for Geneva, where he will address the Disarmament Conference Monday, returning to London one or two days thereafter because of the Shanghai situation.

Britain Treck Maintained

"The dark clouds overhanging the Far East," he said, at the moment of his departure, "make it a special duty for me to return to Downing Street as soon as possible." Even during his brief absence Sir John will be in constant touch with the British Cabinet and the Foreign Office.

The Foreign Office was engaged today in conferring with the Governments of the United States, France and Italy through the British Embassies in the various Capitals, in an attempt to reach a common understanding as to the character of the joint or separate replies Japan's reply will send to the Japanese note declining to accept the second and fifth of the proposals recently forwarded to Tokio. Japan to Land Bluejackets

To-day's news from the Far East that an entire Japanese army division is to be landed tomorrow in the neighborhood of Shanghai, confirms the British fears that the very significance of the bombarding of the Woosung forts was to facilitate the disembarkation of a large land force when it became apparent to the Japanese that they could not accomplish their full objective, whatever that is, with their bluejackets.

The landing of troops gives a much more serious aspect to the whole situation. It is held here, considering an outright invasion, which cannot possibly be justified on the score that it is necessary for the protection of Japanese lives and property in Shanghai. It is not expected in London that these land forces are to be used in Shanghai itself, but rather that they will be marched against the Chinese north of the city.

Gen Matsui on New Year's

Shanghai, Feb. 6. — New Year's Day, the most important holiday in the Chinese calendar, was greeted this morning by the boom of heavy artillery and the tattoo of machine guns along a line stretching from the Chapei section of Shanghai down the Whangpoo River to the Woosung forts. The Chinese reopened the engagement that has been raging around Shanghai for the last week from somewhat better positions. Foreign military observers agreed that in the hard fighting they have proceeded in making a few dents in the line of the Japanese defenses. On the other side of the ledger the Japanese chalked down a successful bombing raid. Their airplanes, circling high above the ruins of Chapei, spotted a troop train filled with reinforcements for the Chinese. Bombs were rained on it. A direct hit was scored on one car, shattering it and causing many deaths. This correspondent counted 18 bodies about the wreckage of the car.

Intensive fighting was going on in the Hongkew section of the International Settlement, which has been taken over by the Japanese Armed Forces. Hongkew said responsible for this phase of the action. The Japanese dead was estimated at 300, and it was said that an equal number of snipers had been slain.

Desperate Effort Foreseen

Much appeared to depend today upon the contact with which Japanese reinforcements are brought in from the homeland. The Chinese were reported to have added to their manpower during the night. Military observers looked for a last desperate effort to drive the bluejackets out of Shanghai.

RAFT BRINGS WORD FROM DESERTED ISLE

Letters Set Afloat on Lake Reach Picton People

MESSAGE BROADCAST

Marine Officer Asks Help and Promises Investigation

Picton, Feb. 6—Letters set afloat from Main Ducks Island in Lake Ontario on January 18th were delivered to local people Friday. Main Ducks is fourteen miles from Point Traverse, Prince Edward County; forty miles west of Kingston, and about the same distance from Rochester, N.Y. The letters stated that the writers had constructed a raft and were sending out some letters, hoping that they would be picked up and forwarded. No description of the raft was given, but it is presumed a box covered with oilskin was used to protect the letters, which arrived in perfect condition. The raft had floated to the nearest mainland, taking twenty-one days.

Sign of Distress

Winter residents on the islands reported they had noted lights on Galloo Island, about fifteen miles away, burning for several days, apparently signals of distress, but were undecided if there was trouble there.

Residents on the Main Ducks and Galloo Islands have no means of communication with the outside during the winter, but can receive radio messages. On Main Ducks are Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cole, Ernest Zimmerman and another man. The island is owned by Claud Cole and used as a fishing colony in the summer, and has also a lighthouse and radio beacon. The question has been raised here whether the unknown residents of the Galloo Islands wish to attract attention.

May be an Island

On December 18 last, Jack Pearson of Syracuse, and a companion, of Ivy Lea, near Kingston, set out in a small boat from Kingston, for Ivy Lea, and have not been heard from since. An aeroplane from the Kingston Flying Club and a tug of the Pyke Salvage Company, Kingston, visited the Main Ducks Island, but found no trace of the men. It is not believed here that the Galloo Island could be searched, as the men may have drifted there, or, if the weather were bad, they might have decided to head for the mainland instead of continuing the longer trip to Oswego, and landed on the island instead.

Claud Cole usually makes a trip by aeroplane to the island during the winter to see if things are satisfactory, but it is understood he will not do so this year, as the letters advised him conditions were good.

Ask Radio Broadcast

E. J. Mills, Dominion Inspector in Toronto for the Radio Branch of the Department of Marine for Ontario, last night expressed the greatest interest in the information contained in the above dispatch. He believed that the parties on Galloo Island could be rescued only by a radio broadcast, and The Toronto Globe, in its regular newscast on Thursday night, sent out a message to that effect, giving the location, regarding what had been seen from Main Ducks Island. When he received all the department's notes were tied up, he felt that the Marine Department would undertake some immediate steps that will clear up the mystery of the continued burning of the lights on Galloo Islands. In the meantime, maintains a lighthouse and wireless operator until the close of navigation in December. The last tug sent out to bring in the buoys picked up the message. The paper was informed by Inspector Ellis.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Gerald Morris of Picton, was committed for trial at the next court of criminal jurisdiction following a preliminary hearing in police court before Magistrate J. S. Calnan. Morris is charged with attempting to court money from a prominent Picton citizen, and whom he had made serious charges.

The ancients regarded the number seven as lucky because they counted seven sacred planets, seven days in Creation, seven days in the week, seven divisions in the Lord's prayer and seven ages of man.

HON. G.N. GORDON TO FACE INQUIRY

Former King's Minister May Lose Privy Council Status

OTTAWA, Feb. 6.—Expulsion of Hon. George N. Gordon, K.C., from the Privy Council was rumored today as one of many possible outcomes of the case of which Hon. Hugh Guthrie, on behalf of the Government, gave notice today in the House of Commons.

Mr. Guthrie's motion call for the appointment of a Select House committee of seven members to investigate charges against Premier Bennett and Major and Mrs. W. D. Herridge which, according to newspaper reports, Mr. Gordon recently made to addressing a Liberal meeting at Hamilton.

This move on the part of the Government came as a surprise to many members on both sides of the House. It was regarded in the inner circles, however, that it was but the first step in a plan which, granted it is proved to the proposed committee that Mr. Gordon did make these charges may have far-reaching consequences as far as Mr. Gordon is concerned. Following last night's subsequent retraction the Government decided to take a very serious view of Mr. Gordon's statements which, it is held, are not only untrue but scurrilous and beneath the dignity of a Privy councillor.

Mr. Gordon will be called before the special committee when it is named. The naming of the committee, on Mr. Guthrie's resolution, undoubtedly will call for some discussion in the House in which Mr. Bennett, as the aggrieved party, may take part. It is also clear that far the Liberals will carry any objections they may have to the appointment of such a committee. All parties with the representation on the committee which, if the usual custom as followed in congress four Conservatives, two Liberals, a Progressive, with one of the Conservatives acting chairman.

A resident of Peterboro, Mr. Gordon is a former Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons. For a few months during the election of 1925 he was Liberal for West Peterboro from 1921 to 1925. In 1925 he was defeated at the general election.

Newspaper reports of Mr. Gordon's speech at Hamilton and his subsequent statement at Lindsay are recited in the resolution to-day, it does not mention, however, his later statement at Oshawa.

Accidents Occur On The Highway

William Minnie, a teamster on the highway, was struck by a large stone yesterday during blasting operations and was rendered semi-conscious for some time. It appears that a large stone was thrown in the air and Minnie, who was three hundred yards away, was struck on the chest and was badly bruised. After receiving first aid treatment, he was taken to his home. Dr. Dales is in attendance. Minnie will be unable to return to work for some time.

Tom Wilson, employed by The York Construction Company was brought to Tweed on Monday night suffering from a wound in his cheek which was penetrated by a piece of steel. Wilson was at work with the drill when the accident occurred. After the metal had been removed, he was taken home. Stevie Barrow is carrying his arm in a sling these days as the result of another accident on the highway. His right arm was fractured at the elbow when a bank of earth and rock gave way. Russell Dafoe was also injured but not seriously by falling rock, both men were taken to Dr. Dale' office for treatment.—Tweed News.

Gold produced in Alaska during 1931 was valued at $343,000 an increase of about a million dollars over the previous year's production.

Letters to The Editor

Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,—I noticed in the paper recently where our Council had decided to level off our island and build a permanent roadway thereon. Well they say "coming events cast their shadows before." I hope in this instance they presage the advent in the near future of the best located and best summer resort on the continent, not the largest of course. The mineral spring in connection therewith will just set it off beautifully and just think also of its proximity to beautiful Belleville with her beautiful Sagoumaka bridge and the two finest counties in Ontario for grandeur and historic background on our doorsteps. Then boy with its most excellent fishing and sail boating or yachting races and etc. Won't it be wonderful and surely such a vision must stir the blood of both old and young alike of all the people within a radius of 50 or 100 miles of this beautiful land, and I have written this up before This is a wonder I can't understand. The hotel could be kept open partially the year round for winter dances and festivities.

Yours truly,
ANON.

MILLION ERROR IN ASSESSMENT

Toronto Has Narrow Escape From Loss of Taxes

Toronto, Feb. 6.—Thorough investigation of the assessment department of the city of Toronto was asked yesterday by the Board of Control, following discovery of an error of $1,000,000 in the report of Assessment Commissioner W. George Farley on the total value of rateable property in the city. The Board asked Sir Thomas White, former Dominion Minister of Finance, Thomas Bradshaw and O. T. Clarkson, all of this city, to undertake the investigation.

On learning of the discrepancy, the Board of Control asked Mr. Farley to furnish an explanation, together with reasons why he should not be suspended.

Failure to detect it would have meant the city would have been about $35,000 short of taxes by the end of the year.

Wild Bull Holds Up Passenger Train

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 6. — A wild bull held up a passenger train and corraled a posse of men in a cross-country run before being cornered and shot near Stamford yesterday.

Awaiting in a barn to meet its fate at the abattoir, the bull escaped by crashing down the door. He was next reported debating the right-of-way with a train, which had been brought in a halt when the animal refused to budge. Puffing of the locomotive was matched with snorts by the animal and defiance in its eye, but it finally took to its heels with fright when the engine whistle unleashed its fury. It was shot soon afterwards.

Syncro-Mesh Shifting and Free Wheeling ""

THE new Chevrolet Six is the lowest-priced car with both Silent Synchro-Mesh gear-shifting and Free Wheeling . . a combination that makes driving amazingly easy, simple and safe under every road and traffic condition. With Syncro-Mesh transmission, you can shift gears quickly, easily and with absolute quietness . . from low to second, second to high, and high back into second. When descending a steep hill, you can shift rapidly from high back to second and gain the safe braking power of the engine. In free wheeling, of course, you can shift gears without touching the clutch pedal. Chevrolet's free wheeling is not the ordinary complicated type, but an advanced, simplified kind. To "free wheel", you depress the clutch and push in the handy control button on the dash. Then you glide along, free from engine "drag", whenever you remove your foot from the accelerator.

TERSE TALKS on TIMELY TOPICS by

Sam Cobb's Little Plumber

Fellow Citizens,

Does you wife want you to play bridge, too? Well, then, here's my hand. I don't mean any of my bridge hands. I wouldn't be mean enough to hand any ma that. I mean my sympathy. I suppose there are as many men now learning to play bridge as there are learning to cuss, and one is no blame for the other.

I have nothing against the game of bridge. I believe it is more sinned against than sinning. I guess it is a good game, but not as I play it. But it is the only game I know of to which the game rules apply. They want you to play it as bad in the summer as in the winter, and they ought to be satisfied. You do.

One of the principal bridge players besides my wife, is a man, named Work, and it seems appropriate. It is one of the few games that needs a two-man crew to do the shifting and the dealing. One shuffles while the other deals. It's a good idea, that keeps you busy anyway, from auditing the score and telling the bookkeeper where he's wrong.

There are several books of rules for playing bridge, one of them on the living-room table, one of them on the bed table, one of them in the bedroom, and one in the bathroom. I distinguished said to me the other day, "Bridge is a wonderful game—you can't get away from it in any old way you like, not in our house anyway.

Hot there is a difference that Mr. Work and Mr. Whitbread left out of all the books they have scattered around our premises, or rules. That is a set of rules regarding playing bridge with your wife ought to be never to play with your wife for a partner. The second rule ought to be never to play unless she IS your partner. Your wife often sighs and says, "My, I wish you'd play a little game of bridge"—but try it some time.

Try it some time when she sits on your right or left, or east or west, or whatever it is, and the hostess has hung up a perfectly good 30-cent daily for first prize. Before she gets through she will be sitting not only on your coat or left but all over you.

But here's how to square yourself. Have that odd plumbing job attended to immediately. You know the one she's asked you and asked you about. This will make her so good-natured that you will come home singing like a lark, and even bridge can't make you sore. Cash Dobbs will take care of your plumbing needs for you. Call us now.

Yesterday yours,

LOSING THEIR SKILL

Ringing shovels were a familiar sound on Friday morning as Bellevillians turned to the ancient mystery of clearing the snow off their walks.

Really it is a good thing that snow does not come to stay for a whole season for most of the experienced shovellers of Belleville would lose their skill. A look at the walks on Friday morning and noting the change in the season has already tended to spoil the stalwart Belleville citizens. Some evidently hope for the rain to fall and this will shine and make the snow disappear off the walks in that way instead of by manual labor.

CANADIANS FIRM

Canadians have their muscles taut and their minds firm in this present world crisis in finance. Oversubscription of the National Services Loan and of the Provincial Loan demonstrate the solidity of the people's faith in their country. An adverse trade balance has been changed in the past year into a favorable one and unemployment works have been proving very effective. There is evidence, it was pointed out in the Speech from the Throne at the opening of Parliament on Thursday that there is a gradual improvement of conditions.

Canada is to follow a program of rigid economy. That means "pulling in the belt" and setting the belt for the period of emergency which may arise. Rigid economy in expenditure during the coming year is something for which the people have been looking.

The railway problem is one which will occupy the attention of the Parliament at Ottawa. The Royal Commission has completed its hearings and will present its report to the House. This one is the greatest problem before Parliament is of particular interest to the towns and cities along the front, such as Kingston, Belleville, Trenton and on and the effort to find a solution will be regarded with the closest attention by not only railroaders but every citizen of the Dominion.

The St. Lawrence waterways project is to be further taken towards a decision with the United States. Canadians will watch with keen interest the progress of these negotiations because of the many political and financial implications bound up in this proposal.

TAKE UP NEW DUTIES

Belleville Board of Education has taken up its new duties first of all, organization, and later the usual type of problems which face trustees.

In the choice of Mr. Allan R. Schryver as Chairman of the Board, the trustees picked a younger man than usual for the chair and one now entering upon a residency over the meetings to his wisdom and act. That Mr. Schryver will make an admirable successor to the line of Board chairmen which ended lately with Mr. William Harvey is the confident belief of he trustees.

One of the questions which is bound to arouse much interest is the report of he collegiate inspectors, who affirm that rincipal MacLaurin is hampered in the erformance of the duties of administration by having too many classes to teach, with the ridge that additional teaching staff is required to bring the school from the unusual position which it occupies among the collegiate institutes of the province. More will doubtless be heard of this in the meetings to come, for the inspectors affirm that the school is suffering as a result.

Other matters coming before the board indicated very fairly that there will be plenty of discussion ahead because of the needs of the hour and the general conditions of the world.

NEW OR OLD

Spelling bees seem to be all the rage a Prince Edward County.

Are these the signs of the times? Has the inventor of modern pleasures run out of ideas or thoughts? Or is there a coming return to simplicity because the world has seen that money is a sly and fleeting will o' the wisp and when spent does not help the soul enjoyment that is the thing of the heart bring?

Whatever it is—the people are looking back to the nineties, those days when things were not very interesting, to the idea of the present generation. But the generation of the nineties and eighties had their kick out of things and that kick was healthy too.

For instance words are not dead things because a generation known as the seen. "Here as I am, majestic, like the sun as powerful—they are the only vehicle thought today as they were many years ago. They are living moving things.

February is setting up for a new record in gloom or at least lack of sunshine. It is always a fairly dull month but with the bear and the groundhog falling to see their shadows, it looks as if there will be few shadows except the one overcovering shadow of dull skies.

OF GRIEF

By Aline Michaelis

Grief wears a sombre dress and so men turn
Away when she draws near,
The things she has to teach they would not learn,
Her truths they would not hear.
On flying feet they haste from her with dread,
With her they would not share
A portion of their daily drink or bread,
Or grant a fireside chair.

Yet every door must open to her touch,
With all she finds a place;
Oh, you who fear her coming overmuch,
Look well upon her face!
See there her gentle beauty, see revealed
Her strange, majestic grace!
There hides her solemn raiment long concealed,
Once known, your fears will cease.

For you will find how tender grief can be,
What friends come in her train;
With unmoved heart, then, you can never see
Another's grief again.

WHO'S WHO and What's What in High Society always occasions quite a ripple of interest in all social circles, consequently metropolitan newspapers give considerable space to what they call the 400 or less are doing. Society reporting would seem to be a woman's job, but Howard White of the New York Sun has disproved that. Howard is assisted by a staff of three including one woman. In the winter he visits Miami and Palm Beach. In the summer he is in his paper and in the summer he visits northern vacation resorts to keep track of Society's 400 who flock forever on their move, up and down the country, or across the ocean. As society editor Mr. White is an accident. He was writing hockey and sports generally when drafted for a society function, on account of the sickness of the one designated to cover the assignment. He did the assignment so well that he drew another of the same kind and kept on getting them, as he introduced scoops to the society page. Incidentally Howard White is a Brockville boy who stormed Lil' Old New York with a knowledge of shorthand and ability to put a typewriter through its paces pronto, obtained at the local business college. He became private secretary to Cuniffe-Owen, foreign editor of the New York Tribune, and son of Sir Phillip Cunliffe-Owen, his mother being the Baroness von Reitzenstein. Cunliffe-Owen knew all the high society of Europe and had entree into their homes, hence was a busy guy in the social world, so he was afterward made society editor of The Tribune. In 1913 Cunliffe-Owen left The Tribune and was succeeded as society editor by Howard White, of Brockville.

WHAT IF LIFE WERE STARTED OVER AGAIN?

Each Individual Has Opportunity to Start Again

(By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.)

Famous Authority On Health And Psychology

Every now and again one meets a person who bewails his fate, says he has made a mess of his life, and wishes, ever so strongly, that he might have a chance of starting his life all over again.

Well, supposing such an opportunity were actually presented? Suppose all these people who think their existence up till now has been one big mistake, suppose they began life all over again? Is it not true that probably they would end up exactly the same?

LOUIS E BISCH asks same way? With the same hereditary background, the same childhood training and environment, the same associates, ideals, ambitions, loves, etc., what else could happen?

To be sure, if we could apply the lessons we have already learned to another life that should be quite different. But then we would be adults as children, and would we miss a lot of the innocence and lightmindedness of these glorious early years? Or we would be grown-up, sophisticated and wise; I say wise because I suppose we would enjoy the experience of starting life under such circumstances.

All of which wishing and regretting and hoping is, of course, quite unnecessary. For each and every one of us has the opportunity in this very moment to start all over again!

Yes, it is never too late to begin afresh and to make a new and prosperous, and new, life. Never is the time actually past and gone when we cannot start over. Never is the moment and hope revitalized and buttressed by new opportunities, new ups and downs. Many have been able to accomplish this, but many more have allowed life to down them. And in the second try, so to speak, they have often accomplished what their fondest expectations.

Take, for example, many and content a person may be there is no doubt but that the same individual has had many failures, made many mistakes and suffered much misery. Indeed, the person has actually made a mistake in life simply doesn't exist.

Some individuals seem to be luckier than others. Some seem to be more unfortunate. Yet, by far and large, the life of everyone is not a smooth, even way studded with rose petals. There are thorns and bitters aplenty for most people. In that we all share.

Why therefore to crowd two lives into one! Make believe that you have begun life over again with the wisdom of your present years already developed. Don't forget the past or the lessons it contains, but has meant to you and particularly what you have learned from it and let it turn out differently.

Yet it is amazing how little we do profit by the lessons of our past no matter how much we talk about it. Few corners in our modern society are only a handful of men and women, prepared to do the impossible, stop themselves from making the same mistakes over and over again.

Take gambling, for instance, or excessive drinking. These two misfortunes are the curse of humanity. Yet how many actually reform no matter how often the truth of their faulty living is brought home to them.

For you see we all of us harbor weaknesses. Nobody is one hundred per cent strong. First of all it is not always willing to admit such weaknesses to ourself, and secondly we do, it is so much easier to let things slide by and depend on a bit of least resistance than it is to fight our weaknesses down and conquer.

Yet it can be done!

Poet's Corner

THE DWINDLED HOST

At morning comes a shining host
With hungry dogs in full cry.
How faintly now a silver ghost
Blows lonely music sly.

At noon in azure robes they pass,
The sun-god's banner a gift.
But all their eyes are hard as brass
When lowered beneath a cliff.

At dusk the dwindled company
Bear shields of tarnished gold;
They pour the wine, but leave with me
An empty cup to hold.

At midnight every shape has passed
The sacred ash beside the spring.
But one alone, that turns at last
In silence—with a sword.

RADIO AND READING

The radio excites wonder because it is a new aid to arts of writing and printing produce no similar effect because they are old. But essentially the radio is at least as wonderful as the other. That the latter have come to be carried thousands of miles without the use of wire is no more marvelous in essence than that human thought can be expressed in such a manner as a white page and preserved for thousands of years. As space is compressed in the one case, to use the customary exaggerated phrase, time is annihilated in the other. As one links new London with old London, so other links bind ancient Athens. The silence of a great library, the absence of any noisy machinery, is apt to make one oblivious to the fact that it is one of the crowning triumphs of civilization.

Many who listen to the radio are readers of books or of the more solid and instructive parts of newspapers and magazines. It is possible that broadcasting will create an appetite for information which can be supplied more fully by the printed page. Librarians report that the reading habit, instead of declining, has grown in recent years. Unemployment has given the leisure for books which will strengthen the foundations for permanent reading his living—London Advertiser.

NEWBISHOP OF ONTARIO

Archdeacon John Lyons of Prescott, the new Bishop-elect of Ontario, succeeds Bishop Mountain, now of London, brings to his new task ripened experience and ability. He is not only a native of his diocese, but he has carried on pastoral work in its various fields. He first served in the two rural parishes of Pictou and Stellarton in the northpart of North Hastings, and later Prescott. He has been active in missions along the St. Lawrence, also in the city of Belleville. He has been for many years Rural Dean of Prescott.

In early life Archdeacon Lyons studied medicine at Toronto before deciding to enter the ministry. He was ordained in Ireland and enrolling as Trinity University. This broad experience should be expected of value to him in his administrative work.

Archdeacon and Archdeacon Lyons may come as a surprise to the Church people of Ontario, but that is known about him outside his own diocese. Many people know him as a man who minds his own business, does his job, and does it advertise. He is known to be quiet in manner, but companionable, and has made many friends with his flock.—Toronto Globe.

MR. BENNETT AS A PRACTICAL PHILANTHROPIST

Few men are more free from the vanity of self-advertising than the Premier of Ontario. He has come out quite accidentally in a way that illustrates what might never have been known that for many years he was a consistent worker in the field of charity, where his home. Similarly few people were aware that for more than 20 years past he has been president of the Belleville Humane Society, a Society, attending the monthly meetings regularly, and giving kindly, practical attention to the problem of homeless and neglected boys and girls. Many of the cases that fell to its existence the society worked out successfully, and not a few waifs or children's receiving home, was established largely through the voluntary efforts of the committee. From the minutes of the County Council it appears that Mr. Bennett's son Henry addressed the session in January, 1909, and secured a promise of a substantial grant. On the following day Mr. Bennett's son later—Mr. Henry, now Premier, appeared before the Council to ask for a grant in aid of the work of the lafayr work and greater need. Mr. Bennett was also a member and president of the society was R. F. Ponton, K.C., and the latter was followed by Horace D. Ramsden and that on his death, William Keith, of Bowmanville. Mr. Bennett and Mr. Keith was advanced to the management. Dr. R. Little, of Scarboro, the present superintendent, took over the management. The reception home, located at Lansing, is known as "York Cottage" in honor of the late King. It is a kind. Taking the past as a guide, it is reasonable to expect his interest in this noble work for many years to come.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

WEATHER FORECASTING

"Some meteorologists," states Professor Alexander McAdie of the Blue Hill Observatory, "hold that the circulation of air 3,000 to 9,000 metres above the earth controls the path and perhaps the movement of the surface cyclones." Using Sir Napier Shaw, former Director of the British Meteorological Office in a recent address at the Scientific Apparatus Makers' Association, predictions "built upon maps of the upper air, have already become a great help. Of the lacker method, at present practiced, he said:

Most people know that our maps show a series of pressure curves which look rather like contour curves on an ordinary physical map. The closer these curves of equal pressure, or isobars, are, the stronger should be the winds, blowing tangentially to the isobars. But the isobars are, in their details, only guesswork. We have to look at the curves as best we can, especially over the ocean.

In his judgment isobars should be raised to a level of 2,000 feet. The day before he made his address an airplane was sent up at Dunstaffnage, and the air at 2,000 feet was found to be much colder than the air at the surface, which altered our calculations of pressure and hence of winds."—New York Times.

DRASTIC ACTION IN BEAUHARNOIS SCANDAL PENDS

Prime Minister Makes Pointed Retort to Mackenzie King's Jibe

REAL CLASH

One Effect of Meighen's Appointment to Senate is Forecast

Ottawa, Feb. 5—Will the Bennett Government take steps to expel from the Senate the three Liberal senators who were condemned last session by the report of the Beauharnois committee?

A plain indication that this extreme punishment of Senators W. L. McDougald, Donat Raymond and Andrew Haydon is not outside the range of the Government's calculation was given yesterday in the House of Commons by Premier Bennett.

Mr. Bennett's declaration came during the "question period" near the end of the afternoon's brief session. He said it was for Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, to say what he would do with the appointment of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen to the Senate as government leader there.

"What this double-barrelled leadership of the Conservative party is going to mean," said Mr. King, "I am not prepared to say."

Mr. Bennett jumped to his feet. "Before the hon. gentleman has senators at an early date," he remarked.

Coming with a few days of a general election campaign, this was called to determine what action shall be taken with regard to the three Liberal senators, was taken by the latter's unequivocal assertion set the tone of the latter type. Five minutes before the session adjourned, Mr. Bennett, Minister of Justice, and Hon. Hugh Guthrie, K.C., Conservative House leader, had made this statement.

Bennett-King Clash

The exchanges between Premier Bennett and Mr. King came during the "question period" when Conservative by-election cabinet changes which Premier Bennett had already announced formally in the House yesterday. In giving Hon. E. N. Rhodes the finance portfolio, said Mr. King, the Premier had done what the Liberals had advised all along. The same was true with regard to Hon. W. A. Gordon's appointment to the labor portfolio, left vacant by the retirement of Senator Gideon Robertson.

"I am afraid," said Mr. King, "that for the most part the task of the Prime Minister will be in making much of the mischief which my Rt. Hon. friend has done. Had he done during the time he has been at his monopolized the offices of Government."

The fact that Senator Robertson's health had given way under the strain of supervising unemployment relief was proved, Mr. Bennett's opinion, of the truth of his contention that the portfolio could be administered not by a minister but by a commission.

Mr. King then took up the premier's announcement of the appointment of Arthur Meighen as former Conservative premier, Mr. Arthur Meighen as former Conservative premier, Mr. Meighen's outside business connections, parliamentarian and his exceptional qualifications for leadership in the House to which he has just been appointed.

Made for Bennett, Meighen

The Liberal leader then proceeded to draw a contrast between himself at both Mr. Bennett and Senator Meighen. "I must say, Mr. Speaker," he said, "that yesterday when I heard the announcement in connection of the opening of Parliament I thought that I could think of a curious twists and turns of which public life gives so many evidences that the hon. gentleman, leader of the Conservative party, the former Premier, should be contemplating assuming a position to the left of the Conservative benches in the Upper House, when I knew that his colleague, Dr. Little, of Scarboro, is more closely associated with the House of Commons."

Derisive laughter broke out on the Liberal benches at this quip.

"I am not prepared to admit," he continued, "that the right of the Government to be represented in the Upper House, which, if I am not mistaken, is one time had ambitions leading to the Upper House, which would, I think, be prevented from realizing because his leader of the day would not give him the appointment. That, I suggest to him, was another outburst of laughter from the Liberal benches.

"What this double-barrelled leadership is going to mean," continued the Conservative party is going to mean, I am not prepared to say at this time."

Mr. Bennett was on his feet in a trice. "It will mean," he asserted, "two or three fewer Senators at an early date." Again the laugh quickly that many in the galleries did not catch it.

"We shall hope," Mr. King came back, "that it will mean that this is the only effect it will have. I had thought that as far as the political shades of the Conservative party were concerned, there was not room for more than one big gun. However, we shall see."

The leader of the Opposition referred to his remarks as a "pious" sentiment which Mr. Bennett has not found possible to take in that spirit. He added that the Premier would welcome evidence of the strengthening of the ministry.

Heard On The Street

A somnolence lay in the air, and a quietude prevaded the building—not much time it had been a few days ago w cu every one had been rushing around trying to wait on two people at once, and listen to the complaints of four more or less between, so now they were attuned to the point of resting as it is possible to do so when working for any store. It happened to be the radio department of one of the large Front Street stores. A few days before that there had been a sale; radio clerks had been busy, customers had been varied, inquisitive —some hard to please, others not so hard to please—some wanted demonstrations of the sets on the floor of the radio shop, others wanted one of each model demonstrated in their homes. Some had a "try" for just one particular set and would try no other, but some frankly didn't care what they wanted. They were unlike a few who favored the one kind, and if that kind suited them they would write out a cheque for it—that's the one that would do. The customer this story is about was one of the latter type. He knew what he wanted, and he wanted that particular set delivered to his home. Two days later, if the set gave good satisfaction, he would pay cash down for it and be satisfied. But it had to be delivered that day. He was told it would be delivered, hooked up and ready to play by the time he got home from work. Fine. The set was tested, it was checked, loaded on the delivery truck, the driver was given the name of the street and the number of the house on that street, and he started off.

x x x x

Ten minutes later he stopped with a squeak of brakes, a flourish of snow and a shout, and leaped out of the truck and into the house which was the number corresponding with the figure which had been written down on the piece of paper he held in his hand. He let down the rear of the truck, unloaded the ropes holding the set, unwound the cutting which covered it, laid heavy hands on the machine and stumbled in right through the front door of the house which was being proceeded to kick cheerily until it was opened and a head popped out to enquire the cause of the latter type. He knew what he wanted, and he wanted that particular set delivered to his home. Two days later, if the set gave good satisfaction, he would pay cash down for it and be satisfied. Tuesday morning the telephone bell of that store rang asking for the manager of the radio department. Trouble seemed to hang in the air. The phone was rectified in a few minutes, and the manager, to which delivered in spite of the fact that the promise had been made almost on bended knee and every guarantee had been given. "Are you sure that it wasn't delivered?" the manager asked. "Do you know you're going to be sued?" The question was sure, but the answer was a question. The manager began to boil, but pleasingly has won more wars than cold steel ever did, and he is farther than that. The manager has also been more than the manager. He was the delivery boy, the truck driver, the shipping clerk, the receiving clerk, the manager—but a moment while I verify the number. Was that number ——? Yes, that was the number. Then it was that man himself who had been hard hit in the bookcase behind the books, or maybe he just shoved it under the sofa. That's one of the things that happens around Christmas. The last few words were said in a very sarcastic tone of voice, so the manager felt naturally that things were getting hot. "Are you sure you've looked properly?" Once more a car stopped in front of the house and a worried looking manager hurried in. No radio was in sight. The manager looked at the number again was matched. But again it showed the same total—the numbers matched and still things seemed to be getting worse. Finally not only the numbers were matched but the street was checked. There was the difference. The manager was on the wrong street. He was on the wrong side. The worried look disappeared; the sun again came out of the clouds and once more sunshine beamed down upon the world. The manager left, whistling somewhat of a joke but who was relating the story to the accident somewhat of a joke but who was relating the story to the accident somewhat of a joke but who was relating the story to the accident

Pete Morgan Scores Winning Goal Within Minute of Time to Defeat Frontenacs 4-3

Play Fast and Clean With Ice in Perfect Condition

ONE PENALTY

Teams Play as if Championship of League Depended

To cheat the patrons, of the game out of a sure over-time match, Pete Morgan skated through the entire Kingston defensive last night to score the winning goal of the night with but one minute more to play in the final period.

The game was played on lightning fast ice and plenty of speed was demonstrated on both sides during the hour's pastime. Just previous to the starting of the game both the Kingston players and referee Mitchell stated, that the sheet of ice at the Belleville Arena last night was one of the finest they had ever had the pleasure of playing upon, and they certainly lived up well of the ice plant and Belleville Arena.

Cunningham Good

To pick an outstanding player for the night would be out of the question as nearly all the players worked and played as though in a league title was at stake. Cunningham, Kingston defensive star forward, gave the fans an exhibition which they will not forget for quite some time. The lad, although but 20 years of age, is a veteran of the game and after time to beat the local marksmen when they were right in command of play. Another player was Frank Bellinger, who quite in evidence when he broke away from the defence and Frank Bellinger opened up in the clear and when he finally got away he skated through the entire Belleville team to open the scoring in the second frame. Tommy and Bellinger played good hockey although Murray was handicapped by a bad stick high at times. Tommy Boyd, Munhimer and Ferguson also put in excellent accounts of their evening's endeavours. The game was one of the cleanest seen in Belleville this year with only one penalty being meted out by the officials and that being for a minor cause. When Murray, literally threw Campbell into the boards he should have had a penalty but Referee Mitchell was watching the puck and Archie was forced to retire box de combat.

Methods and Style

For the locals there was no outstanding star of the night although Les Tice did turn in an excellent account of himself. Wee Jack and Gordie McKeekin both plays banging hockey but Bob Scott and Archie Campbell did not click as they were until Coach Holway used them on the defence where they excelled themselves. It might be added that both of these boys would be much better on the defence than they did on the forward line. Pete Morgan and Jack Marshall were also well but could not seem to crash the visitors' defence often. Doug Hull played his usual steady game as did Morral and Dennis.

The Play

When the game started there were but 500 fans in the arena. The play opened fast with Campbell setting Cunningham right in the clear first off. The visitors "turned on the heat" and for the first period it was a fine exhibition of skating, combination and individual rushing. Alex Weir and Jack Marshall combined through the entire Kingston team only to be robbed each time by open net, when he shot. Both goal tenders were called upon to make many sensational stops this period and midway through the frame Buck took a perfect pass from Muchmore to beat Tice for the first goal of the night. Tice had a chance to save. The locals seconded the count and the game sped up to such an extent that the fans were howling for the visiting counties. Three minutes later Bob Hull evened the count when he shot Cunningham's rebound right from Johnnie Leachman. Only one penalty was handed out during the game and it happened in the period. There was no further scoring this period, although the visitors tried time and again to break through the Belleville team. The period ended one to one.

2nd Period

Kingston opened the second period with plenty of speed and the locals met their onrush aplenty. Campbell registered second on the defence and Frank Bellinger opened the scoring exactly one minute after the play had started. Right after this Tice was to heights to beat Marshall, who was right in on top of him. The visitors were skating the locals dizzy all showed up on the forechecking and Bob Scott evened score when he took a body hound pass from Alex Weir. Nothing in the line of scoring happened for over ten minutes, but, there were plenty of thrills for the fans as both teams continued to skate like players possessed. Just before the end of the frame Bellringer carried the puck through the entire Belleville team to give Tommy Boyd a perfect pass right in front of the net. Tommy made sure of the goal, thus making the score 3 to 2 for Kingston when the period ended.

3rd Period

When the final period opened Gordie Jackson and Campbell combined to test Cunningham, who had played a stellar game so far. The locals were bombarding Cunningham at a will, but, their shooting was terrible and the result that no scoring was in evidence. Once when the locals were rushing Cunningham, Bellringer and Boyd broke away and tore in on Tice for what looked like a sure counter. Tice was quite steady and slid out to intercept Tommy's shot and saved the situation. Alex Weir grabbed the disc and skated all by the entire opponent's blue line to drift a long shot past Cunningham for the tying goal. The game then developed into a series of rush rushes with the fans part of the game with the result that plenty of fast skating was seen. Bob Scott and Gordie McKeekin terrified in Morris's place on the defence and were more than a match for than in the first period, as, the combination rush was much easier to their liking. Just as the patrons were sitting back ready to enjoy an overtime session, Pete Morgan picked up the puck behind his own net and skated the length of the ice for the rink to win the game for Belleville. Tice was right in the play the next as he fell when shooting. The game ended 4 to 3 for the locals.

Line-ups were as follows:—Kingston—goal Cunningham, defence Murray and Bellringer, centre Munhimer, rover Boyd and Thurlby, subs Muchmore, Boyd and Ferguson.

Belleville—goal Tice, Defence Morris and Weir, centre Leachman, wings Campbell and Scott, subs, Morgan, Hull, Leachman and St. Denis.

TWEED ENTERS WIN COLUMN

Defeat Stirling 3 to 2 in Fast and Clean Game

(Special to Ontario Intelligencer
Tweed, Feb. 6.—Tweed team broke into the win column in the Hastings county league at the expense of the Stirling team here by a score of 3-2. Campbell was the outstanding star for Tweed, counting two goals. The game was particularly clean, few penalties being handed out by referee Leo Barrett of Belleville. Alex Geraldi, Hashe, and Harry all showed up well for the homesters while Ingram, G. Wallace and Adams got in some useful work for the red and whites.

Madoc play the next game of the league at Stirling on Saturday night of this week.

1st period.

Play was even for the first part of the period and finally Ingram broke through to miss the open net with teams skipped into it and gave the small crowd some excitement for a short time. Terry, a high school boy playing for Tweed, shot from the corner and the puck struck Adams and was deflected into the net. There was but one minute left to play when he counted.

Second Period.

Campbell on a beautiful effort left-handed shot his way through the whole Stirling team to score the second goal for Tweed. He dupicated this feat in the third period on a pretty shot.

Maguire and La Fountaine were penalized and Ingram got the gate for roughing. Geraldi broke through alone and got Stirling's first goal, Wallace counted for Stirling on a drifter from the blue line.

Fox saved on A. Geraldi's pretty shot and Cunningham for the tying goal. The game then developed into a series of rush rushes with the fast part of the game with the result that plenty of fast skating was seen. Bob Scott and Gordie McKeekin terrified in Morris's place on the defence and were more than a match for than in the first period, as, the combination rush was much easier to their liking. DUFFERINS WIN CLOSE GAME

Old School Rivals Battle at Hockey in Trenton

TRENTON, Feb 6.—(Special)—Dufferin Public School played College Street school a game of hockey last evening, the latter losing out 4 goals 3 to 2. All the school children turned out with a will to cheer on their respective teams. There was no hesitation at all in anything they had to say.

The game started with P. W. Fairman, former principal of Dufferin School, and Miss Cole, the present head of the school, face off. The both teams started off with a bang and the play was the best of the play sdid what energy these fans and O.H.A. men put into the game.

Young Thompson was very good, despite the little bit there was of him. Smith of College street was perhaps the best they had. Young Anderson in Dufferin adds some nice scores for Dufferin while College street goal did nicely. Jones scored the first goal of the game for Dufferin, Roberts then tied it up. Thompson goes through just before the end of the period and scores one for Dufferin period ending 3 to 1 for the locals. In the second period Smith scored another for College on a rebound which Goalie Jones conceded to go through for another putting them one up on College.

College Street scored hard through out the rest of the game but could not tie it. Dufferin is the proud owner of the two points and it is in these two points that we look for our future hockey players.

Current Sport

By The Observer

Although the Belleville intermediates are out of the O.H.A. running there is more than the usual interest being taken in the game between the locals and Queen's on Monday night. Both teams will be playing full strength and are out to win the game irregardless as to the championship. Queen's always intend going through the season without a loss in their games, if possible. The locals feel that they have been cathoked during their recent slump and intend showing the natives that they can beat the Students any old night. The game will be watched with interest.

But more important to the sport fans of Belleville is the game with the Trenton juniors at the local Arena Gardens. If the locals take care of this through this series with a win they meet the Kingston Frontenac juniors in the next round. Coach Thompson will handout a new face to the public tonight in the person of Eddie MacGuire of Tweed. Coach Thompson is more than pleased with the showing he has made to date. He has all the qualifications of smart hockey player. All of the fans in Belleville will be ready to enter the fray and tonight is the night.

Judging from the enthusiasm shown at the meeting held by the Belleville Thistles Thursday night, baseball is on the road to a successful year. It was pleasing to see and hear the many ideas that were undertaken by the business men of the city. Mayor Tice was the next speaker to address the gathering. The annual meeting of the O.B.A. is being held in Cobourg today.

Will they or won't they? This tangle over the Stanley Cup series has now raised quite an argument between the two major leagues throughout Canada and the United States. The Stanley Cup trustees have accepted the offer from the National Hockey League and now President Calder of the National League claims that the Stanley Cup will be won by the winner of the so-called outlaw winners of the American League. Then along comes the Canadian-American League "peep" and he chalenges on behalf of his league for the honor of competing in the Stanley Cup series. Now the question arises will the National League accept the offer of these challenges and accept the other. The result will be watched with interest by all hockey enthusiasts in both countries.

The National Baseball league playing season opens on April 12th and close September 25th, leading the shortest baseball season since 1918. After the opening series in the east, the statistic teams will travel to the mid west, starting on May 5th while the western league will open their first jump eastward on June 1. This passing of baseball by Pittsburg makes the third big league owned by a man who has made a name for himself in the game. Comiskey, Wm. Wrigley and Barney Dreyfuss pass on. The National and American League have lost another owner who never can be rep'aced in the personage of Barney Dreyfuss. They were a credit to the game in which they have been identified to build up to its present standard.

There is an agitation afoot to try and make the "little world's series" a three league affair once again. Such a move at present includes the Pacific Coast winners, now.

We are of the opinion that the Canadian Olympic hockey team would have been more successful in refusing to play the exhibition games which they are called at upon to participate in at Lake Placid. The main thing in question is whether they are going there to win the Olympic hockey games or play exhibition games? Of course we could not expect anything else as all the American sportsmen think of is commercializing any sport.

Even though nothing was at stake last night's game was a thriller. The fans are crying for fast skating and the climax, provided by Pete Morgan was one to be long remembered. After the game Referee Mitchell and the Kingston players both stated that they had performed on a perfect sheet of ice. Especially we might mention the fine sheet of ice. Indeed there were more than pleased to have the opportunity of playing on such a fast sheet of ice. According to their statement they do not experience this privilege quite as often as the locals. This is quite a boost for Belleville's Arena, we might add.

The six-year-old Clydesdale stallion Lochinvar, owned in Saskatchewan, which recently won the championship of his breed at Toronto, Chicago and Guelph, has won 15 grand championships

IT'S THE AMAZING RANGERS, NOW.)

For quite a long time, the New York Americans in the N.H.L. have been dubbed by sports writers as "the amazing Amerks". This was probably due to their amazing reversal of form from game to game. Well they have no right to that title any longer, for their own home town opposition has taken away from them the title of "the amazing Rangers." For Lester Patrick's section—sending team have shown the way right from the drop of the hat, and show no signs of slumping yet. And all this after the so-called experts claimed before the season opened that Patrick's team would probably be one of the two teams to be left out in the cold when the play-offs came along. One reason for this statement was the fact that the Rangers had lost Taffy Abel, their star defenceman, over to Chicago. But trust Patrick to keep his trick or two up his sleeve. Acting on the advice of Conn Smythe, especially for the defence, And Taffy has never been missed. Coach Patrick let his ant as hard, and score as many, if not more than what he was ever able to do. And of course, the team has been strengthened. Cook now strengthened with Cecil Dillon, has never called anyone but opposing teams any worry. Thomson now might should see a good game when Seibert and Abel meet at Madison Square Gardens with the Rangers entertaining Chicago. It will be interesting to see what happens when the young Ranger defence star meets head on with his predecessor. And incidentally, it might be worth remembering to call Rangers to win, or does it?

JUNIORS ENTER THE PLAYOFFS

Will Need at Least Three Goals For Game in Trenton

Tonight at 9 p.m. the local juniors enter into the play-offs when they meet the Trenton juniors on the first game of a home and home series with goals to count in the total. The locals travel to Trenton on Monday night and the locals need a win by two goals to take into the town at the mouth of he Trenton River.

The visitors always play better on the road than they do at home and the local arena and is will keep the locals more than busy tonight in order to defeat their opponents in order to have a substantial lead to take to Trenton on Monday night. Backed by their pepper-pot line of Wilbur, Wilbur and Wilbur, a large delegation of followers to Trenton tonight will be goal champions, defence, Bonter and Hall, the Wooler speed merchant, centre Gold, wings, Willis and Hallet. The subs will be picked from Dolan, Jordan, Richards, Milligan and Corbett, the latter number of Centennians are following the team to Trenton tonight.

Fresh from their Thursday night's victory over Trenton the local Cubs feel that they can rise to the occasion and defeat their rivals tonight. Coach Thompson does not under estimate the ability of his visitors as he well remembers their recent visit to the Belleville Arena. He has drilled his charges into the locals by playing them on the ice for the most part of the game.

TWEED WINS FROM NAPANEE

Score 4 to 0 Making Good Start For Tweed in Group

In the Intercollegiate League game played in Napanee last night, Tweed High school team defeated Napanee Collegiate team decisively by a score of 4 to 0. In common with the other teams playing in the circuit, Tweed had not been favoured with good ice but little fault could be found with the ice surface when these two teams met. Tweed and Murphy for Napanee stood out above their teammates and gave Tweed by a big Tweed goal several anxious moments, but as the score indicates the Tweed boys were the more adept. The skating and stick handling of Murphy made him a dangerous man whenever he uncorked one of his rushes down the centre of the defense. Hearns in goal for Napanee played a good game although he permitted two long shots to find a resting place in the twine. His work, however, was partially obstructed by his defense, and he had little chance.

Tweed Team Steady

For Tweed every man played hard. Shorey in goal was unbeatable. Fountain, Tweed's captain, a husky defensive pair and gave Napanee's forward division fits. Fountain showed a tendency to shoot more than rather than to pass and receive, which is penalties for charging the opposing puck carrier, but he was never penalized for same. The regular front line of McGuire, Reynolds and Casey played "heads-up" hockey all the way and time and time again carried the play across attacks by Napanee before they got goal centre ice. Terry and Morris of Napanee were also noticeably weaken the team while Murphy was the only one to show energy on the part of Tweed boys throughout the game. Tweed's regular goal play; good combination attacks and fast skating characterized as they should have been. Only one penalty was the result of combination play, the referee, Bill Hamilton officiating, two being scored from Napanee's side.

First Period.

The game started off with a bang and C. Reaboite and McGuire were banished for the first offence. Murphy tried a shot on Tweed goal which Shorey turned aside. Reaboite and Murphy in a nice little combination and Ryan missed Napanee's first chance. Fountain to C. Murphy and Card made some nice passes but Hearns was right on Shorey. Moore's rush forced Hearns to make a nice save. Play ranged up and down the ice with neither side having any particular advantage.

While La Fountain was serving penalty, Reaboite tried to take advantage of this situation to score but Hearns was there. For a moment it appeared that Napanee's goal was in danger when players skate ground hill head as to lay puone upon the ice.

A bit of combination play caused two minutes before the end of the first period. Reaboite and Ryan fast in the Napanee goalie's pads on C. Reaboite's shot. Murphy took the puck fell to the ice just outside the goal. Ryan and Reaboite also followed in on his shot tried to shove it into the goal with his stick but Shorey was there and punched him in the face. The attempt to score was disallowed and soon there was a miniature war on. Reaboite, Ryan, Shorey, Hearns and the time-keeper's bell, however soon settled matters.

Third Period.

Reynolds and Casey started Shorey several times but the opening minutes of the second period had elapsed before Napanee had their first chance of the game on a pass from Moore to Murphy. Shorey was there. Both teams were playing a fast game and Napanee's chances later C. Reaboite scored second goal on a shot from the blue line which Hearns never saw. Right on the ice, Hearns' view was obstructed by the defense men. Score Third Period

The concluding three-man combination opened third period from the Napanee end. Moore, Murphy and Card forced into corner, Tweed was forced in their own defensive area and Reynolds relieved by the efforts of play Archer and La Fountain. Reynolds, however, was thrown out of his goal and fell on the puck. Tweed's second goal was a fluke. Terry scored the fourth goal for Tweed from the left home centre ice which Napanee goalie Hearns never saw a puck sailed the twine behind him.

Tom Hamilton of Tweed, handled the duties of the referee in a capable manner and gave satisfaction to all.

Napanee—Goal Hearns, defence Thompson and Richardson, centre, Moore, wings Card and Davy, Subs Murphy and Archer.

Tweed—Goal, Shorey, defence, Archer and La Fountain, centre, C. Rashoite, wings, McOuire and Reynolds, subs, Terry, L. Rashoite, Merwa and Cottier.

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

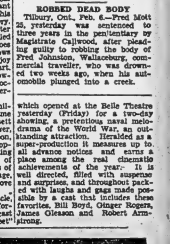
At The Belle

"FRANKENSTEIN" IS REAL GREAT DRAMA

Do you want to sit tense and breathless on the edge of your theatre seat for more than an hour? Then see a terrifying, grotesquely fantastic and macabre mystery-drama unfold before your eyes! That's visit the Belle Theatre, where Universal's all time version of Mrs. Shelley's classic thriller "Frankenstein," the story of a man who created a monster, opens a three day engagement, commencing Monday, matinees daily at 2.30.

During its sensational three weeks' run at the Tivoli theatre, Toronto, recently, 141,784 saw "Frankenstein" and it very clearly evidenced that picture-goers liked to be thrilled and shocked. And no one was disappointed.

"Frankenstein" is so horrifying that its very horror fascinates you. It is the great metaphors and "Dracula" is just buttermilk in comparison. With electrical science, mechanics and scientists a fiendishly created being, eerie settings and a couple of murders are some of the harrowing details.



Boris Karloff is the terrible creature as the monster and his makeup gives you cringes. Colin Clive is convincing as the scientist. Mae Clarke as Elizabeth and Frederick Kerr can be thanked for some welcome bits of comedy and John Boles appears in the cast.

The story centres about a European scientist who collects bodies from graveyards and the gallows, hoping to find the secret of life. He is being to which he will give life thru' the means of a powerful electrical ray. His humbleck assistant Fritzel is also involved in the monster from a doctor's laboratory. In the original version the monster's brain is the creator and killed him. The table, however, does away with the monster and allows the scientist to live and to enjoy his wedding with Elizabeth.

Before the monster is killed, however it tears up everything in the way tor and tries to carry away the heroine.

Bing Crosby, favorite of seven million radio fans appears on the same bill with "Frankenstein" in a delightful comedy, "Dream House," a clever, amusing Mickey Mouse Cartoon, Pox News and another of those popular "Screen Snapshots" revealing amusing and interesting events of Hollywood stars, reviewing scenes of silent movies of the 1907 vintage, will be exhibited with the above feature "Frankenstein."

A thrilling action, colorful spectacle, a strong story and sterling performances by an unusually good cast combine to make "Suicide Fleet" which opened at the Belle Theatre yesterday (Friday) for a two-day engagement, a splendid action melodrama of the World War, an outstanding attraction. Heralded as a super-production it measures up to all advance notices and earns a place among the real cinematic achievements of the year. It is well directed, filled with suspense and surprises, and throughout is packed with laughs and gags made possible by a cast that includes these favorites, Ben Lyon, Ginger Rogers, James Gleason and Robert Armstrong.

A scene from "Sherlock Homes' Fatal Hour" now at the Capitol.

At the Capitol

ENGLISH ACTOR AS "SHERLOCK HOLMES"

Today is the opening day of "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" at the Capitol, and in this drama packed with thrills and ingenuity will be seen one of the finest and most finished pieces of character acting imaginable, associated with it, Arthur Wontner as George Arliss, Ronald Coleman, Martin Harvey and Forbes Robertson. The man responsible for the portrayal of the famous Holmes is Arthur Wontner, veteran of the English stage, and in his portrayal we have the exact personification of the created character of the immortal Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, beauty of thought, speech and deed emanating from a master-mind—a foolish sensationalism but comprehensive conception of what we may expect from scientific reasoning.

Without doubt "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" should be seen by everyone because it presents the most unique characterization as one can rest on, entirely in a theme apt at the commencement and be almost thrilled to a standing position by the time it is through.

This picture is heartily recommended.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Danny Warns Nanny

By Thornton W. Burgess

By self alone no one can live;
As he receives so he must give.
—Old Mother Nature.

Danny Meadow Mouse sculled along his little homelook with a face as long as a last as his short legs could take him. He was in a hurry to get home. He was in a great hurry. It seemed to him that he never would get there, and all the time he was thinking of Nanny Meadow Mouse.

"I hope she is home. I hope she is home," he kept saying over and over to himself. "I do hope she hasn't gone seed-hunting up above." He had reached the surface of the snow. "If she has I may never see her again. Oh dear, I hope she is at home."

Nanny was at home. "Why, what's the matter?" her funny squeaky little voice as Danny arrived quite out of breath at the door. "Are you mad with you? Has some one been chasing you?"

"No," panted Danny. "No one has been chasing me, but I was afraid you would be caught before I could get here to warn you."

Nanny looked puzzled. She was puzzled. "Who did you think was going to catch me?"

"I don't know," confessed Danny. "Are you crazy?" demanded Nanny Meadow Mouse. "Are you crazy? Are you crazy? Are you crazy?

BEARS PUSH MARKET DOWN

Inter. Nickel is Outstanding Trading Issue

Toronto, Feb. 6.—Stocks worked lower again today and the market finished for the week under the influence of bearish forces. International Nickel was the outstanding trading issue this morning, while Distillers and, Dominion Motors, spectacular action this week, were only moderately active and quite restricted in price fluctuations.

Nickel improved some towards the close but the bulk of transactions occurred at 8%, which is slightly under the price at which it closed last night. Both Noranda and Teck-Hughes were down a few cents.

Small losses were registered by Loblaw "A" and Ford. Page-Hersey made a new 1932 low at 53 and closed with a net loss of 1 point at 54.

Brazilian was firm at 13¼. Toronto Elevators up a point at 12, Walkers firmer at 3, Cosgraves up ½ point at 3. C.P.R., Consolidated Bakers, Hinde and Dauche and the Oils were steady.

Mining Exchange.

Teck Hughes broke during today's short session on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange and the weakness in this issue unsettled the gold group. Teck dropped to 4.50, a new low for the current reaction, before selling support which carried it up slightly to 84.23 where it was 12 below the close last night. Lake Shore dropped back 20 cents and Hollinger eased 10 cents. Among the cheap golds, Vipond was a weak spot, dropping 6 points to 30. Sylvanite and Kirkland Lake were off a couple of cents. Sisco, Moss and McLeod River made small gains.

SECOND, THIRD FOURTH PLACE TO CANADIANS

Jack Shea Repeats His Victory of 500 Meters in 1500 Meters

SHUT OUT

Murray and Taylor Jockey to Give Shea Clean Break For Taps

LAKE PLACID, N.Y., Feb. 5.—By Wallace H. Ward. (Canadian Press Staff Writer)—Speed skaters from Canada again were in the spotlight of the winter Olympic games this morning, as Alec Hurd, of Hamilton, Ont., Bill Logan, Saint John, N.B., and Frank Stock, Winnipeg, Man., finished second, third and fourth respectively in the final of the 1,500-metres event, which was won by Jack Shea. Lake Placid speed marvel, by his victory duplicated the distinction of being the first double champion of the present winter games. He triumphed in the 500-metres dash yesterday.

The 1,500 metres was the only event on the Canadian contingents programme for the morning and four were entered. They went through the heats in leisurely fashion, saving their strength for the final. Frank Stack was second to Taylor of the United States in the first heat, and Logan trailed Shea to the line in the Canadian Ace-Herb Frack of Toronto was outdistanced by Ivar Ballangrud of Norway in that heat and finished fourth. Ballangrud also failed to qualify for the final. Alec Hurd trailed Murray in the third heat and finished second to qualify.

Logan led the pack for two laps in the final and then fell back with his compatriots. The three Canadians were content to follow the pace makers until the six-rounder had turn out of the back stretch on the last lap, when Logan, Stack and Hurd back and shut out the Canadian sisting with a clear break for the stretch to the taper.

Taylor, who finished nearly upset Stack, Logan and Hurd had to swing wide almost to the outside of the track before they could open their sprint to the finish line. Shea broke the tape a full two yards in front of Alec Hurd, who came up the stretch like a whirlwind. Logan was third and Stack beat the other two United States competitors to the line for fourth place.

Vertebrae Fractured

X-ray pictures revealed today that Pvtis Cran, German hod clad Captain, suffered a fracture of the fifth vertebrae in his spine, when his sleigh crashed on the Olympic run yesterday.

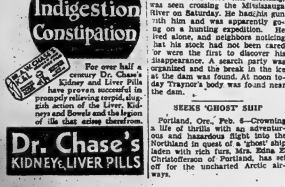
As soon as can be moved, he will be put in a plaster cast, hospital authorities said, and kept there for several months. He also suffered from a fractured shoulder, and other injuries.

Will Protest

Members of the Norwegian, Swedish and Finnish speed skating delegations called a meeting today at noon to decide whether they will withdraw from the 10,000 metres preliminaries today and protest the North American manner of executing the Olympic speed skating events.

Sixies Win

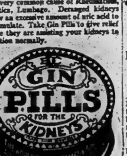
OLYMPIC STADIUM, LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The United States team defeated Poland 5 to 1 today in its second appearance in the Olympic Hockey Series.



Johnny Beut and Jack Bookman, members of the same Yale forward line two years ago, were the outstanding stars as the United States got back some of the loss sustained in yesterday 2-1 defeat by Canada. Between them they scored all three goals. John Garrison counted the last goal.

Poland now has lost both games, having yesterday to Germany.

Bent took a pass from Garrison in the heat Stopowski, brilliant Polish goalie, and give the United States a lead in the first period. In the second Cookman, in a pair of furious scrimmages in front of the Polish net, stole the puck and flipped it home.



Garrison scored his counter near the end of the match after Adam Kowalski, early in the period, drove a hard shot at goalie Farrell at the side of his skate and glanced into the United States net.

18 LIVES LOST IN EXPLOSION

Body of Mess Boy of Tanker Bidwell Taken From Ruins

Marcus Hook, Pa., Feb. 6—With the mess-boy of the oiltanker Bidwell still missing, authorities today listed 18 lives as the toll of explosions and fire which made a blackened hulk of the ship and threw this community into a uproar.

Seventeen bodies have been recovered from the decks and holds of the tanker, stricken by four successive blasts early yesterday but A. B. Selch, of Houston, Texas had not been accounted for. He is believed to have perished in his quarters or been hurled overboard and drowned.

Three men and a woman are in hospitals critically burned.

Coroner Wilfred Lewis, the local coroner continued their investigation in an effort to determine the exact cause of the disaster.

JOSEPH LABEL PAYS PENALTY

Hanged at Three Rivers Today For Murder of Two

Three Rivers, Que., Feb. 6—Charged with the murder of an aged Nicolet farmer and a young girl Georgia Lebel, alias Michaud was hanged this morning in the jail yard. The trap was sprung at 8:01 a.m. and Lebel was pronounced dead at 8:08 a.m. Lebel was captured in Edmonton following a manhunt that extended throughout the province. J. B. Bellerose and his niece Antoinette Bellerose were found brutally murdered near Nicolet on May 22. Lebel was arrested a month later.

Eight Bodies Lie in Burned Plane

Los Angeles, Feb. 6—Wreckage of the Century Pacific airliner, which carried three women and five men to their death last Friday, was found late Thursday. It was established that the occupants either died in the crash or were burned to death when the wreckage caught fire.

An airplane which flew low over the mountains, 14 miles west of Palm Tr3on, near the Ventura-Kern County boundary, first sighted the ruined ship. The observation pilot returned to make the report while a ground searching party went out to investigate.

Actual discovery was made by Paul Bernhard, a member of a party from Deputy Sheriff E. Lynch, at Sandsprings, on the Ridge route He indicated that all the bodies had been partly burned.

The ego fore the plane was found is not far from Lebec in the Tehachapi mountains. The ship had been seen Friday bucking a blizzard en route to Los Angeles from Bakersfield.

Prints Lead to Drowning Scene

Peterboor, Feb. 5.—Footprints terminating at a break in the ice in the immediate vicinity of Scott's mill dam, and the finding of a pair of mitts, led to the discovery that Joseph Traynor, missing since Saturday last, was drowned. Mr. Traynor who resides on the Government Road, at Rockcrest, according to word received here this morning, was seen crossing the Otonabee River on Saturday. He had the gun with him and was apparently going on a hunting expedition. He lived alone, and neighbors noticing his absence, a search party was organized and the break in the ice at the dam was found. At once the day Traynor's body was found near the dam.

SEEKS 'GHOST' SHIP

Portland, Ore., Feb. 6—Crowning a life of thrills with an adventurous and hazardous flight into the Northland in quest of a "ghost" ship laden with rich furs, Mrs. Edna E. Christofferson of Portland, has set off for the uncharted Arctic airways.

3 AVIATORS SEEK WATER

Men Lost in Desert Appeal by Radio for Drink

Oran, Algiers, Feb. 6—Three French aviators lost in the heart of the Sahara desert, pleaded for water by radio, but were unable to tell military airplanes searching for them just where they were.

The three flyers, Jean Reginaud, Robert Lenier and Joseph Tougy, were lost last Monday when a sandstorm forced their airplane down and obliterated the caravan trail they had been following through the shifting sands.

Working desperately, they managed to get their radio operating and into communication with Oran and Paris. Help was sent out at once but no one knew where to look; since all the stricken flyers could say was that they were lost somewhere "near the heart of the desert."

Their water supply came to an end five days ago and to-day their thirst had become intolerable. From the radio message sent out at short hourly intervals she, authorities learned that their sufferings for water, while they were communicating with Paris, had become so acute as to dull their judgment for only Lenier stayed at his post to operate the radio.

In the distance, Reginaud and Tougy saw waving palm trees, indicating the presence of water, according to messages from Lenier. They also saw camels and threw to get water.

Authorities said they were afraid the two flyers had been led astray by a mirage and redoubled their search for the trio.

Meanwhile an air patrol of five planes took up the search from Colomb Bechar, Colonel Vuillemin, commander of the air force, then.

"Burn your oil; make a smoke signal," he wireless to Lenier.

But no smoke appeared. Late today, was the wide expanse of sand.

RECORD OF 111.2 M.P.H. CLAIMED

Car Wood Speeds Over Indian Creek at That Speed

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 6—Car Wood claimed a new world's speed record today with a two-way average speed of 111.3 miles an hour on the Indian Creek course here with his Miss America IX.

He was clocked at 112.434 miles per hour on a southward run over the nautical mile, and 110.989 miles per hour on a northward run. The average of the two runs, as required by United States Yachtsman's Association rules, gave him the average of 111.712 as compared with his old record of 110.243 held by Kaye Don noted British sportsman.

The Indian Creek course was in perfect condition for the run today. There was only a slight breeze, and the placid water appeared almost without a ripple.

The speed was checked with electrical timing devices.

Fruit Men Meet in Convention

Cobourg, Feb. 6.—The Central Ontario Fruit Growers are assembled in Trinity Hall, Cobourg, to discuss the better growing and the difficulties that are experienced from insects and disease, relating where spraying is not done during the early growth. The president, D. J. Phelan, gives a strong appeal to all growers for a greater amount of study in the fruit trees, and stated that if this was carried out as followed by the experienced fruit men, a better class of fruit will be the outcome and far better prices will be received. Other speakers addressing the convention this afternoon and evening are: C. W. Baser, of Hamilton; P. W. H. Odgetts; J. P. Howell, Professor L. Caesar, Professor D. A. Kimball and Dr. Brailey, St. Catharines.

Breach Widens Over Tariffs

London, Feb. 6 (Can-Press)—The National Government's programme of protective tariffs ending Great Britain's century old policy of free trade today came into opposition which although not considered serious in itself, was seen as threatening to widen the breach in the cabinet occasioned when Liberal members of the Ministry refused to sanction the measures for imposing a general 10 per cent ad valorem duty on imports.

EXCEED ESTIMATES

Wellington, N.Z., Feb. 5 (CP)—Most items of New Zealand's budget estimates will not be realized, said Downie Stewart, finance minister, stating today the fiscal year's expenditures will probably exceed estimates.

The issue of treasury bills and treasury bill rates have exceeded anticipations, and the unemployment subsidy is also likely to exceed estimates.

The danger of making public service duty honorary is that it eliminates the man of small means but great ability. —Sam Street Hughes.

RESTFUL SLEEP

for

FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

. . . with Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is uncomfortable. It may be an overloaded stomach, a starting cold, a little fever.

More often than not the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. He needs need help—mild, gentle help —but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives.

Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. And children take it without coaxing. They like its taste.

Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then come relaxed comfort and restful sleep! You'll know genuine Castoria—by the name Chas. H. Fletcher on the package.

BLIZZARD HITS NEW ENGLAND

Rips Down Power Lines and Clogs Highways

Boston, Mass., Feb. 6—A real old fashioned New England blizzard swept in from the northeast today to rip down power lines, cripple communication in the outlying districts and bring heavy seas off the coast.

Lightning flashes and clinging sleet tore down wires and drifting snow clogged highways and made automobile driving impossible in many sections.

Dozens of communities in various parts of New England were without electricity or telephone or telegraph service today. Street car service in Boston was blocked and train service was badly crippled.

Radio stations were temporarily put out of commission when a bolt of lightning, a freak of the storm, struck the power plants at Squantum.

Appoint Committee For Investigation

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 6—Appointment of a special committee of seven members to investigate charges and allegations said to have been made by Hon. George P. Graham, of Peterboro, "Reflecting upon the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister" will be moved for in the House of Commons by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice The charges and allegations referred to are set out in detail in a series of articles appearing today on the order paper of the House.

Barney Dreyfuss Pirate Mgr., Dies

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 5.—Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Baseball League died today in Mt. Sinai Hospital at 11.40 a.m. following an operation for a glandular trouble. He would have been 67 years aldo his next birthday.

Capital investment in mines, smelters, refineries and other mineral industries in Canada totaled $287,430,859 at the end of 1930.

"I'M going, anyway"

THE modern Miss needs no "time out" for the time of month.

If you've ever taken Aspirin for a headache, you know how soon the pain subsides. That is as effective in the relief of those pains peculiar to women!

Don't dedicate certain days of every month to suffering. It's old-fashioned. It's unnecessary. Aspirin will always enable you to carry-on in comfort. Take enough to assure your complete comfort. If it is genuine Aspirin it cannot possibly hurt you. Aspirin tablets do not depress the heart. They do not upset the stomach. They do nothing but stop the pain.

Headaches come at inconvenient times. So do colds. But a little Aspirin will always save the day. A threat so sure that you can hurriedly swallow is made comfortable with one good gargle made from these tablets. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Rheumatism. Pains that once kept people home are forgotten half an hour after taking a few of these Aspirin tablets. So are the little nagging aches that bring fatigue and "nerves" by day, or a sleepless night.

Genuine Aspirin tablets (not a new kind) act with speed. They relieve quickly. They like its taste.

Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then come relaxed comfort and restful sleep! You'll know genuine Castoria—by the name Chas. H. Fletcher on the package.

CHINESE RAISE OVER $1,000 FUN

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 6.—China residents of Brockville and district have already raised over $1,000 for Chinese sufferers from the flood relief fund and plan to continue collections. Every Chinese in this district will be 5 cents richer than at least $5.00 per month towards relief work, the committee in charge continues as long as Japanese occupation remains in force.

Ten Timely Advertising Tips

A successful retailer who has spent the best part of his advertising appropriation in good and newspaper copy gave ten points which has helped him to become a successful business man through advertising. The ten points:

1. I advertise regularly. Every issue of the paper takes my story to its readers.

2. I make every ad look like mine. Years ago I adopted a distinctive style, and I have stuck to it. I use plenty of white space; my ads are never hard to read.

3. I put into newspaper advertising a definite proportion of the gross sales which I fix at the beginning of the year. My rule is to make it three per cent. of the previous year's gross, with more if special conditions justify it.

4. I briefer my ads with frequent illustrations, either humorous or practical. This costs me little, as the up-to-date newspapers supply these.

5. I am careful never to over-promise. Then, when I really have an unusual bargain, people believe me when I "whoop 'er up a little."

6. I think advertising all the time, I buy goods that will advertise myself, sometimes I buy goods just for their advertising value.

7. I get good display for my ads by seeing that the copy is in the newspaper office in plenty of time. I aid this by having a definite hour to write the copy.

8. Whenever possible, I carry the nationally advertised goods that are advertised in my own home paper. I feature them. Sometimes they give me a smaller margin than fly-by-night concerns, but I find I sell faster and make more money in the end, besides pleasing more customers.

9. I always plan my window and counter displays to link up with my newspaper advertising. Each helps the other.

10. My salespeople back up my advertising. They often help me with suggestions for it, and see to it that they always read it.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

CHAPTER I

A milk wagon rattling along Pine street brought Ellen Rossiter wide awake. The Rossiter apartment was five floors above the street, but Ellen thought irritably even the mechanism of waking that the clanking below was sufficient to wake the dead.

It was going to be another scorching day, the pink face, rose from sleep, was faintly damp and her thick silvery hair was live and beautiful with heat curls. She was conscious only of discomfort as she flipped it back and rolled over hastily to look at the clock.

Only 20 minutes to seven. Twenty blessed minutes more. Ellen stretched luxuriously, amazed herself that the alarm was set for seven, and snuggled down again. As she was closing her eyes she noticed that the clothes line on the back fence had adjoining bed was empty. Myra had already risen and slipped quietly from the room. Ellen had sleepily decided that her sister intended to bathe before leaving for the library when she heard from the kitchen Myra's voice raised high in expostulation. Something was wrong again. Ellen did not know quite what, but that particular note in Myra's voice always meant trouble.

And trouble in the Rossiter household meant inevitably a difference of opinion between Myra Rossiter and Molly Rossiter.

Ellen shifted toward back the sheet and in one leap was out of bed. She grabbed a green cotton negligee and dressed for the bathroom door was locked. Michael aged 16 was inside. The one male of the family, the adored and spoiled little brother, he had special prerogatives and was not timid in enforcing them.

"I'm studying," he called out.

"On the bathroom?"

"In the tub".

His added plaintively, "I'll get out if you want me to. Only its so cool in here and I'm always being interrupted no matter where I go."

"All right, darling. Stay where you are for 10 minutes. But after that I'll have to rout you."

Ellen Rossiter was three days past 30 on that morning in late July—three days past 30 and already beginning to be afraid that the wild and careless dreams of her teens would not be fulfilled in her twenties. It was motley, of course, The Rossiters had more than their share of good looks, from Molly Rossiter who had once been Molly O'Reilly, the prettiest girl in the whole of County Cork, to baby Mike, but they had nothing else.

The three children—Myra, the eldest, and Ellen and Mike—had from their father their thick copper hair and wide, thick-lashed blue eyes, and from their mother their creamy skin. The milder, arresting way they walked and stood, the nervous movements of their hands, the confident, arrogant ease with which they faced the world—all those were Rossiter ways. Molly, who was a Rossiter by marriage, held up against the unconscious air of distinction that was shared by all of them was from their father, too. It was Charles Michael Rossiter who had given them an unmistakable look of race.

There was no denying that the young Rossiters were unlike the young Blacks downstairs, or the young Riordans in the basement, or the Shluzenbergers who sprawled through the two floors above. They were different, and expected. Ellen had often reflected bitterly, as people always are who have a past and no future.

But Molly Rossiter, an incurable optimist, had never once admitted the secret fears of her two daughters. Even when she had her cry-spells she always insisted hysterically that her children were better qualified to move in that mysterious world where doors had been shut to them abruptly when Charles Rossiter, unable to forget green English fields and the country English mornings even in the love of his wife and children, had closed his eyes and died of a common cold.

There once had been money. Myra at 26 could remember surroundings quite different from the down-at-the-heel Brooklyn apartment, could recall in her own heart, remember the glorious years before the failure of death, the anspoken servants, the gleam of cafe-lit-lights and music and "going" since, and rups so deep that all sound of distance was lost in them.

Charles Rossiter had died in Molly O'Reilly on a trip to Ireland. He had married her before his father and mother and many brothers and sisters could rush in to point out the impossibility of marriage between the son of Colonel Richard Rossiter and a tenant farmer's daughter.

They had never forgiven him that. They were, as anyone except Molly herself could see, abominably clannish. Charles' share of the Harmstead estate had been settled upon him at once. The condition was that he leave England. His father and mother had never seen the beautiful bride. And Charles Rossiter, deeply wounded with pride, had been glad enough then to leave England. He had never come back. He had never gone back. He had often longed for England but no one of his brothers or sisters had ever learned that. No one of them had shown the slightest interest in what he might have been thinking during those long years of exile. No one of them except his youngest sister, Myra, for whom his eldest daughter was named, had shown in recognition of the fact that he had left a family. His sister, Myra, perhaps held back by the pressure of her brothers and sisters, had never seen any member of his small family but she did from time to time send boxes of clothing, discarded by her own daughters.

On that August morning Charles Rossiter had been dead 13 years. His death took place three days before his only son was born. He could never have foreseen that his two beautiful daughters would be forced to work, the one as an underpaid job in a public library, the other as an underpaid assistant in a great department store. He had left a sufficient sum to bring up his children in comfort, to educate them, and to provide for the lifetime of his young wife.

But Molly Rossiter dazed with grief, had seen that money slip from her irresponsible hands within two years.

Ellen could remember only as of something dreamed those days when money was not a daily problem, a daily topic of conversation. She had gone to work at Barclay's department store when she was 14. She was still there.

As she walked to the kitchen she wondered a little hopelessly if she would always be there.

When she entered the small, heated room where she had scrubbed linoleum had long since retreated into its corners, her mother turned from the stove. Molly's pretty, faded face was flushed and set in lines of determination. Ellen sighed again. She was afraid that her mother had hit upon another disastrous scheme which would make them all rich.

Myra was seated at a chipped porcelain table, her chin resting upon her elbows, the morning newspaper spread out before her. Her head, with its smooth bralds of hair, lighter and more warmly colored than Ellen's, was bent over the society columns. But her mouth was set and unbecoming and it was plain she did not really see the printed words. Her eyes were full of angry tears.

"Myra and I have about decided on something, mother," Molly Rossiter began timidly.

Myra looked up quickly at that. "We haven't decided anything, mother," she interrupted in her long-suffering voice. "You only suggested—"

Both of them looked toward Ellen. Ellen ground to the stove, relieved her mother of the eggs and began to beat with her furious energy so that the yellow foam leaped up the blue sides of the bowl. Molly had been ready to pour them into the skillet.

Ellen was the one natural cook of the household. Molly's cooking was always overdone or underdone and invariably too highly seasoned. Myra, perhaps in compensation for her mother's lavish —hand, never seasoned enough. Whatever she sent to the table came with the slightly indefinite taste common to second-rate hotels.

In the strained silence Ellen added to the omelet a few grains of pepper, a great deal of salt and a dash of paprika for the looks of the thing She walked to the window to take parsley, chopped the night before, from a box-like contrivance suspended outside and serving as a refrigerator.

"Now what is it?" she asked the comeliness, as she sprayed in the crisp green sprigs of parsley and poured the golden fluff into the hot skillet.

Molly and Myra Rossiter spoke simultaneously.

"Mother spent half the rent money yesterday buying things for Mike that he doesn't need," Myra said. "And now she had an idea for you. STUDY to make up the money working evenings."

M-2 FLOODED, CREW POISONED NAVY BELIEVE

Found Hangar Door and Upper Conning Tower Hatch Open

DIED QUICKLY

Impressive Church Service Held For Brave Crew

Portland, Eng., Feb. 6—Almost at the same hour the navy was holding impressive services over the Channel grave of the submarine M-2 yesterday, three hundred feet below the surface found the submersible's outer seaplane hangar door and upper conning tower hatch open. While the discovery did not completely clear up the mystery of the M-2's fatal plunge with the loss of 61 lives on January 26, naval experts declared it may throw a strong light on the cause of the disaster. The fact that the door and hatch were open, it was believed, may well have meant that the submarine was flooded sufficiently for water to reach her closely-held turbines. This poison gas might have been given off which would have suffocated the crew within a few moments' time. Meanwhile, efforts to raise the helpless craft proceeded. Impressive ceremonies were held aboard the submarine mother ship, Adamant, over the spot where the M-2 made her last dive. Relatives of the missing men and representatives of every branch of the Royal Navy participated.

TOTAL LOSS IS ESTIMATED

Prince of Wales College, P. E. I., is Prey of Flames

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Feb. 6 (CP) —The ocean breaking stone block that house Prince of Wales College and the Normal School, Prince Edward was a mass of flames this morning and it was expected to be a total loss.

Fire discovered shortly after 3 o'clock swept through the building, destroying valuable records and furnishings as it went. Just before five o'clock the walls started to crumble.

Found Unconscious Dies on Train

Sudbury, Ont., Feb. 6—Florence Tierney, aged about 61, address unknown, succumbed yesterday on board an east-bound freight train after he had been found by the train crew lying unconscious beside the tracks near Shead. The body was removed from the train at Holland's Bay and will be brought here, where an inquest will be held.

There were no signs of violence and death is believed to have been due to exhaustion. Both Tierney's hands were frozen.

Premier Mussolini To Visit Pope Pius

Vatican City, Feb. 6 (AP) — Premier Mussolini will visit Pope Pius XI. Thursday of next week, the third anniversary of the Lateran Treaty, it was officially announced today.

The head of the church and the chief of the state will seal the peace which began with the Lateran pact and which was concluded last summer with the settlement of many details.

FEAR FOUL PLAY IN CONSTABLE'S DEATH

Prince Albert, Sask., Feb. 6—Belief that foul play entered into the burning of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police post at Shoal Lake, Rapids in Northern Saskatchewan in which Corporal Brian Burstall lost his life grew yesterday as the police party which left by air, place to investigate the blaze failed to return.

HARE ACQUITTED OF NEGLIGENCE

George R. Hare, 20, Toronto, was acquitted at Picton on Friday on a charge of criminal negligence arising out of an automobile accident in which Jockey P. (Buddy) Daniels, Trenton, was killed last Sunday near Carrying Place. The race was heard in Magistrate L. R. Calnan. The car driven by Hare skidded off the road into a telephone pole and was wrecked.

RAWDON RIFLE ASSOC. MEETS

Mr. Robert Nayler, of Marmora, Winner of Silver Plate

Bonarlaw — The Rawdon Rifle Association held their annual dance on Wednesday evening of this week in the Orange Hall at Springbrook which was a complete success. Charlie Allen, pianist; Clarence McKeown, violinist; and Jack Grant, traps and saxaphone, furnished excellent music for both round and square dancing which was divided evenly, sixteen minutes of each with a couple of minutes intermission each time. Charles Jones of Marmora acted as floor manager and as usual everything went very smoothly.

The committee assisted by the ladies served coffee, sandwiches and cake in the basement of the hall at twelve o'clock.

After lunch those present were delighted with songs by Mr. Ortie Andrews and Mr. Kenneth Bain. Mr. Andrews also did some fine step dancing as did Mr. Titus Hannah.

Mr. Robert Nayler of Marmora, winner of the silver plate, was unable to be present, on account of illness of Mrs. Nayler. Mr. Chas Jones kindly offered to take the trophy to him and the plate was formally presented. In making the presentation, the Secretary, Mr. Baker, explained the conditions under which it was won. Each year some member won a similar prize to which has been donated therefor. The winner is the member making the highest aggregate score at four of the six shoots previously decided upon by the Association, usually the four June shoots. In addition to this prize, special prize money is given at each shoot First prize is $1.00, second prize 50 cts, and third prize 25 cts. For the highest aggregate score for ranges completed at the end of the season to all members who did not realize at least $1.00 special prize money and who attended at least two shoots, prize was given as follows, to the first five $1.00 each, to the next 10, 75 cts. each, to the next 10, 50 cts. each and to the next 10, 25 cts each.

A caretaker is paid by the Association to keep the rifles in good condition, and a target maker prepares the targets. The Government issues 150 rounds of ammunition free for each member, and pays for maintenance of range.

BRITAIN, FRANCE, OFFER ARMS PROPOSALS

Japan Advocates Neutral Zones About Chinese Cities

Britain Favors End of Subs, Gas, Chemicals Would Cut Capital Ships

France Would Fortify League of Nations By Organizing Peace, Tardieu Tells Disarmament Conference Today at Geneva

ONLY DIFFERENCE IS METHOD,

Greatest Attempt Humanity Has Ever Made, Says French War Minister — Britain Demands Effective Action

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Feb. 8 — Great Britain and France today submitted their cases to the world disarmament conference.

Their methods of approach differed. Britain would place a limiting line on armaments. She would rule out submarines, poison gas and chemical warfare, and reduce the size of capital ships and their guns. France, in contrast, would "organize peace." She would back the League covenant with an international force.

Yet the old allies of the war differed only on methods—they emphasized their agreement in the purpose. Both demanded effective action.

"The conference failure would be an unmeasured and immeasurable calamity," declared Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary.

"If we fail," echoed Andre Tardieu, French War Minister, "it will be the failure of the greatest attempt humanity has ever known."

The general discussion will be continued tomorrow.

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Geneva, Feb. 8.—Speaking with unusual gravity Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, today submitted the British case for disarmament before the world convention for the limitation and reduction of armaments.

Customarily Sir John is the picture of a humorous, unemployed squire, his case. Today he pleaded from the tribune the cause of a world demand for peace.

Many peace' conferences before this have been held, he said, and many who are resolved to succeed.

"World Longs For Peace.

"We represent the mass of people in all lands, for they desire fight wars and are hoping even against hope for a wise issue from our deliberations."

And Sir John concluded with a line from the old Latin—Possunt Quia Posse Videntur—Britain would do what she was resolved to succeed.

Sir John's speech marked the opening of general discussion. In turn the great powers are first to have their say.

Two Methods.

Great Britain, Sir John announced, stands for two methods of treatment of disarmament.

(1) Fixing a limiting line in armaments and those which nations will pledge themselves not to go.

(2) Reduction by international agreement from the usu in warfare of certain defined instruments and methods.

Great Britain supports the establishment of an international air armament commission. She is charged with the abolition of poison gas and chemical warfare. She presses for the abolition of the submarine. She urges limitation by agreement of the numbers of effectives. She is ready to co-operate in an agreed reduction of the size of capital ships, of the size of maximum gun calibres. At present the capital ship limit is 16 inch guns, and naval gun limit 8 inches, fixed by the Washington Treaty.

As to the Orient.

Sir John did not agree with the view that the world was rapidly drifting from the far eastern skies and troops were on the move, the power of the league covenant were in jeopardy.

"I do not agree with those who suggest that this paradox makes our meeting inopportune," Sir John exclaimed with emphasis. "Rather I declare these circumstances to urge and reinforce the urgent necessity of understanding and discharging our task.

Defiance Spreading.

Andre Tardieu, French War Minister, followed Sir John and like the British spokesman, he warned the conference of the consequences of failure. "The sentiment of defiance is spreading," he pleaded. "The result of arms, which none wished to hear again, echoes once more. It is all the more reason why we should

WORLD ISSUES FIT THEME OF LENT SERMONS

Pontiff Suggests That Lenten Subjects Be on Problems NEW PAGANISM

Man's Riches Are Become His Thorns, Says Pope

Vatican City, Feb. 8 (AP)—The economic distress, the world unemployment problem and other issues common to all countries were suggested today by the Pope as subjects for Lenten preachers in the Catholic Church.

The divine word that "man shall be punished in those same things by which he sinned" has come true, said the Pontiff, events have shown the "vanity of man" and have decided that "help from the hand of God is indispensable."

There is "a new paganism," said the Pope, "a materialization in all walks of life. Men still think that money is everything. They seek it as a means to enjoyment, to power and to domination. Thus, as St. Paul says, the riches of man's riches are become his thorns."

The world's hopes of conferences on disarmament and reparations are "opposed by affiliation, and there is always greater pessimism," said the Pontiff, urging therefore that the preachers spread "not pessimism but optimism" and seek to "fortify souls".

"In the midst of all the trouble, of conflicts, of poverty, never an eye is turned to heaven," he said.

MANY WEATHER CHANGES FELT

Freezing, Snow and Rain All Features of Weather

A strong north wind sweeping over the city after twelve o'clock midnight Sunday sent the mercury hovering about 24 degrees under freezing and drove before it a fine snow which stung like fine shot the few pedestrians who were brave enough to face the blast so early in the morning, but moderated somewhat with the coming of the morning, and with the diminution of the wind a thaw set in turning the sidewalks and road crossings into a mass of snow and water through which the residents of the city soaked heavily on their way to work.

Later in the day with the increase of the wind another cold snap set in and a fall of snow accompanied with the lowering clouds, however when dawn once again appeared rain fell. Praxil which has been flushing down the river for the past few days has gathered enormous size and weight on top of the surface of the river and the ice cakes some one hundred yards north of the bridge. With a little lower temperature this condition would have set in and would be sufficient to freeze the river all the way across and the cakes sufficient to bear the weight of any who wished to venture.

Temperatures for the past twenty-four hours as shown by observation on the thermometer, yesterday it was 32 high and 20 low; today 48 high and 18 low.

Chunk of Trouser Lost When Doggie Met Man

A situation as acute as any picturization by any of the popular cartoonists in the Sunday comics was experienced by a local resident early Saturday evening, when he had been returning home from work.

On a quiet street this he uses to the course of his daily travels to and from his place of business he observed a large dog. It was a police dog. He observed the dog and the dog observed him. It was a mean looking dog, he related, and one that either seemed hungry or was itching for trouble. He approached it; the dog was a stranger to him and it snarled. The snarl developed into a growl and long white fangs framed tongue that drooled and slavered. He doesn't like dogs and the dog knew it. The dog crouched low and the dog started after him. The man grew into a race by the man and a gallop by the dog. Along Gordon street they ran, both in deadly earnest. The dog caught up to him and seized him by the pant leg; the man attempted to kick free but in his effort to do so the pant leg parted under the strain and left the larger piece of it in dog's mouth. The man again commenced to run but this time the dog did not follow. The game was over and the dog had won. But the rest of the journey was completed by the man through back alleys and back yards

INSTRUCTION IN EDUCATION

Archbishop O'Donnell Refers to Birth Control

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 8.—Call for religious education and advice against mixed marriages, long-deferred marriages and birth control are principal themes in the Lenten pastoral of His Excellency Thomas O'Donnell, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Halifax. He entered from Pope Pius XI's encyclical. The sacred congregation is not ignorant that sometimes circumstances are such that Catholic parents may postpone indefinitely their children's baptism. But this they cannot do unless for an active time have a sufficient reason . . . but all parents who neglect to give their children the necessary religious education, or who permit their children to frequent a school in which the ruin of souls cannot be avoided."

There can be no truce from the Catholic moral teaching, if they are conscientious, cannot be absolved in the sacrament of penance."

SEEKING NEW SOURCES TO RAISE MONEY

Hon. E. A. Dunlop Gives Hint on Government Plans THEATRE TAXES

Electrical Taxes Under Consideration By Government

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 8—Searching for new sources of revenue with which to balance their budget, the Ontario cabinet will likely have placed before them in a memorial, among many, to tax power development, Hon. E. A. Dunlop, provincial secretary, declared today.

"We are searching for sources of revenue," stated Hon. Mr. Dunlop, "and while we have not considered yet the question of rates, I suppose how the tax applies in eight or ten cents a kilowatt hour. There taxes vary from 1-20 cent as high as ½ cent, I should say. Hon. Mr. Dunlop estimated that if tax is imposed on Hydro as well as private power development, there will be over and the government probably $3,000,000. The Hydro has now developed 5,000,000,000 kilowatt hours, and at the rate of ½ cent, the tax estimated the tax here would be over $2,000,000. Private companies are estimated to develop about 500,000,000 kilowatt hours.

Entertainment Cuts

Amusement taxes are to be reshedded, Hon. Mr. Dunlop added. The present scale runs from 2 cents, starting with 25 cent admissions to 26 cents on $2 admissions. The treasurer hopes to introduce the tax to take on the admissions under 25 cents and also provide that a new scale will be one cent on tickets up to 14 cents and 2 cents up to 26 cents. Over $2 no tax will be more than 25 cents, while admissions running as high as $3 will be charged 50 cents. There is to be no tax on meals. The new revenue on the amusement tax is likely to increase the revenue by about $400,000.

No decision has yet been made, said Hon. Mr. Dunlop, as to an increase on the gasoline tax, which now stands at 5 cents a gallon. In some states across the line, he declared, it runs as high as 7 cents. In Tennessee the rate is as 6 cents cents, and the state also had a tax of 4 cents a package on cigarettes.

While the government is planning increased revenues, they are also cutting down on all grants. A special committee of the cabinet will be at work, planning what cuts are to be made in all government grants and cuts are made to various organizations.

Death Toll of 20 in Path of Storm

Paris, Feb. 8.—The storm which struck Reunion Island, a French possession, on January 29 and February 4, left a death toll of twenty, with 200 injured and heavy property damage.

Reports were still hampered by poor communication lines but it was known that most of the buildings in the capital, Saint Denis, were damaged and many plantations ruined. Emergency rehabilitation measures already was in the hands of local authorities.

JAPS PRESS ON

British Marines Stand in Path of Japanese at Shanghai

Shanghai, Feb. 8—British troops guarding the International Settlement boundary near the Chapei North Station today blocked a Japanese flank attack on the Chinese.

Fighting was renewed when the Chinese unlimbered their trench mortars late in the afternoon and began shelling Hongkew. The Japanese replied with their artillery and sent a detachment of blue jackets into action.

The firing kept up for three hours and some of the shells fell inside the International Settlement.

The Japanese moved along Ranger road, trying to get around a British "pillbox." If they had succeeded they could have gone along the Eigin Road and fallen upon the Chinese rear.

LADY FLAVELLE DIES AGED 74

Was Wedded to Sir Joseph Fifty Years Ago This Year

Toronto, Feb. 8. — Lady Clara Elsworth Flavelle, wife of Sir Joseph Flavelle, Bart., died today. She was 74 years old, and her death followed an illness of some time.

Since her marriage to Sir Joseph 50 years ago, Lady Flavelle had become well known as a hostess and as a social worker.

The Flavelle home "Holywood", Queen's Park, is one of Toronto's attractive residences. Lord Byng, one-time Governor-General, was entertained there on the occasion of his first visit to Toronto in his official capacity, the Lieutenant-Governor, the late Lionel H. Clarke, being critically ill at Government House. In conjunction with Sir Joseph she gave $25,000 in 1920 to Victoria University Fund. She was a member of the United Church of Canada.

Sir Joseph, one son and two daughters survive.

TOUGH DIVES ARE DESERTED

Shanghai's Bad Name is Lost Under War Conditions

Shanghai, Feb. 8.—(AP)—The warfare heretofore has taken from Shanghai the distinction of being "toughest town on the China coast". The waterfront dives and the cafe's arcta where tourists used to cut loose are suspended operations for the "duration".

Every where are soldiers and refugees— In the cabarets, the clubs, the public buildings, even in the apartment houses.

In the Majestic Hotel, famous in normal times for its entertainments and its jazz band, a thousand Scottish soldiers have their enormous dance floor to themselves. Another Scottish regiment was billeted at the Cathay hotel and in the heart of the city.

The ball room of the fashionable Columbia Country Club, social premier, was turned over as a company of the Shanghai volunteers.

Vincent Coll, New York Killer, Machine-gunned

Vincent Coll, New York Killer, machine-gunned

New York, Feb. 8—Vincent Coll, 22 and most ruthless of New York gangsmen, was machine-gunned to death early this morning as he stood in a telephone booth of a store.

His assassin, with two companions, who waited outside with an automobile escaped.

The killer, the sub-machine gun under his arm, entered the drug store and told the clerk and patrons to "keep cool and you won't get hurt."

He walked directly back to the telephone booth where Coll was talking to the door, was telephoning. Without a word he swung the gun into position and sent slugs spitting through the thin partition and glass. Twelve bullets entered Coll's body.

The killer, with a menacing wave of the weapon toward the others in the store, backed out, ran to the car, climbed in with his two companions, and was driven away.

ATTEND BANQUET AT COUNCIL HOUSE

Several members of the Belleville Pair Board will attend the annual banquet and dance of the Mohawk Agricultural Society to be held in the Council House this evening. The banquet and dance is an affair that every one enjoys and is always attended by several members of the surrounding fair boards of associations of this district.

CELEBRATES HIS 53RD BIRTHDAY

On Saturday, Mr. W. E. Tummon, M.P. for Hastings South, was receiving the congratulations of his friends on the occasion of his fifty-third birthday. With Mrs. Tummon, Mr. Tummon is in Ottawa attending the ceremonies and functions in connection with the opening of Parliament.

CONSIDERABLE MORE TO BE DONE ON LINE

A smaller number called off on the train usual this week than on the list for the spare water mains in the watering is the fact that the wettest of the morning prohibited the pipe layers from carrying on their job of installing pipe. During the wet weather it is very difficult to pour the hot lead, required for the joints in the pipes, owing to the fact that the least dampness causes miniature explosions of the metal, with the attendant danger of spattering the workers and burning them terribly. A considerable amount of work still remains to be done on the pipe line as the wet weather so far experienced this season has slowed up the progress considerably.

CLEAN OUT VATS AIR PERMEATED

Passersby on the upper end of Front Street Saturday afternoon choked and coughed as the strange, ling fumes of ammonia permeated the air in downy downy clouds. At first it was thought that some accident had occurred to the plant of the Budweiser Brewing Company, where the fumes had been emanating from, but from all reports from the officials of the concern elicited the information that no untoward incident had developed, and it was all in the day's work. Men employed by the company had been busy at their peculiar job of flushing out the pipes and vats with a mixture of ammonia and water, and the door to the plant had been left open for the fumes to escape to the street, where it had been so pitiless able.

BONAR LAW STORE SCENE OF ROBBERY

The general store of Bell and Barlow, Bonar Law, Ontario, was broken into and robbed during the week end and a quantity of goods stolen.

Provincial Constable Bunger of the Provincial district office of the Ontario Provincial Police and Provincial Constable Gray of the Marmora detachment, are making investigations at the scene of the robbery today.

SHANTIES SINK DURING THAW

Two citizens of the east hill, who as a pastime operate fishing shanties on the bay during the winter, were able, after considerable hard work, to save their shanties and bring them safely to shore yesterday afternoon.

During the exceedingly mild weather, and the ice is now only four inches of the roof were showing the shanties, and the other shanty was frozen in just even with the ice and the roof at the high point was about four inches thick. In the inlets near by the ice was even thicker still.

The location of the shanties was on the bay east of Belleville, out from Gibson's crossing.

KEEP IN TRIM FOR PLAYOFFS

Collegiate Girls Defeat Queen's on Large Floor 22 to 18

Belleville Collegiate girls' basketball team defeated the Queen's girls' championship team of Kingston on the collegiate court at Queen's on Saturday afternoon, the score being 22 to 18. Immediately after the game the Bay of Quinte group and Queen's entertained the Belleville girls at the college circles. Since the finals in the collegiate championship series have been engaging in friendly games to keep in practice for the Ontario meets.

Belleville team is to be congratulated on their splendid game and on a floor much larger than the one to which they have been accustomed, and meeting a team in a group above their own. Belleville girls showed outstanding basketball tactics that indicate good prospects for their success in the play-offs at Toronto. Belleville teams seemed much faster on the floor than Queen's, their passes were swift and sure. Although Queen's girls had the advantage of height and size, Belleville players overcame this by their speed in play.

The combination and five-man defense tactics proved most effective and in the last stages of the game the splendid work of Belleville guards held the score in Belleville's favour by a margin of the energetic work of Queen's.

The line-ups:

Queen's—Forwards, Doreen Kennedy, Fay Kimmons, Nora McGinnis, centre, Doris Anderson. Hilda Wright, defense, Ina Galbraith, Jo Pelz, Dorothy Marshall, Margaret Austin.

Belleville — Forwards, Ana Garvey, Esther Moncrief, Marjorie Patterson, centre, Marjorie Hutson, Mary McLean, defense, Ruth Brennan, Jean MacLaurin, Ena Blaker.

Obituary

LATE JAMES ALEXANDER WARD

After an illness of some duration James Alexander Ward, well known resident of Halloway passed away last week at the Belleville General Hospital. He was born in Halloway 63 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Ward. The deceased for many years was employed by the railways of Canada but for the past 17 years has been living a retired life at his home in Halloway. He was station agent and telegraph operator for very many with the C.P.R. and he also served 10 years with the old Grand Trunk and the C.N.R. During this time he was held in high esteem by the officials of the railway and also by his fellow employees. He was a member of the Methodist church, under whose auspices the funeral was held on Friday last. The service at the home were conducted by Rev. W. H. Mutton, and the Sidney Street Choir was in attendance to assist in the services. The bearers were all old friends of the deceased.

MRS. FRANK CRAWFORD

On Saturday last there passed away at the Belleville General Hospital, Barbara Thompson, wife of Frank Crawford, of 143 Pinnacle St. Belleville, after a short illness. The late Mrs. Crawford was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Tomlinson and in her forty-seven years of life was a member of Christ Church, Belleville.

Left to mourn her loss, besides the husband are a son Frank, a daughter, Dorothy, a brother, Walter, of Winnipeg, Man., and three sisters, Mrs. A. Brant, Deseronto; Mrs. Edward Cunningham, Perrytown, Ill.; Mrs. H. Beatty and Mrs. Edward Yates, both of Winnipeg, Man.

The bereaved family will receive the sympathy of a host of friends in Belleville and vicinity.

SAMUEL WANNAMAKER

Sunday, the death occurred of one of Prince Edward County's oldest inhabitants in the person of Samuel Wannamaker at the home of his son, Benson Wannamaker, 24 Moira Street, city. Mr. Wannamaker was in his 92nd year and had been ill for some time at the home of his son and since he had made his home the past eight years. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jake Wannamaker, and a member of the Bethel Church.

Surviving are three sons and two daughters, Fred of Minneapolis, Minn.; Albert of Ivanhoe; and Benson of this city; Mrs. Ida Spafford, Amaker of Madoc, and Mrs. James Hagan, Sidney Township.

MR. GEORGE MORRIS

Smiths Falls, February 8.—A former well known resident of Smiths Falls died in the Smiths Falls hospital Toronto, at 55 years of age. The late Mr. Morris is the father of Mrs. Earl Hogan of Mr. and Mrs. Morris, both of Smiths Falls, who are attending the funeral in Toronto, to this week. The late Mr. Morris was a engineer on the Belleville sub-division of the C.P.R. until five years ago when he was transferred to Trenton when he had since lived. His wife predeceased him ten years ago. He leaves to his sorrow survive Mr. Hubert Morris of Smiths Falls, Joseph Morris of Trenton; Mrs. Earl Hogan of Smiths Falls and a daughter, Dorothy at home. Interment was made in Toronto.

About 12,000 murders were committed in the United States during 1930. This is also 11 times the murder rate of England.

THOMAS BOWIE DIES IN WINDSOR

Clever Scotch Entertainer Was Very Well Known in City

News of the sudden death of Thomas Bowie, a former resident of this city, at his home 1300 Giles Blvd., Windsor, on Saturday last was received with a distinct shock by a wide circle of friends in this district. Mr. Bowie, who died at the deceased was employed by McIntosh Bros. of this city, leaving for Windsor in 1913, where he has continually resided since that time. The late Mr. Bowie will be remembered more especially by the Scotch residents of the city with whom he was deservedly popular. He was a pleasing entertainer at Scotch dances and songs and toured for some years with the late Johnstone Troupe of Dancers. The deceased was born in Kirkcaldy, Scotland, 49 years ago, and a year later his son learned the trade of a plumber. When the troupe went on a tour of England, Wales and Scotland, and the United States and Mexico, Thomas Bowie was an active member of the troupe. He joined the Belleville Rifles Band with which he became a member, but did not make the trip around the world with that organization. In 1910 Mr. Bowie married Lillian Malloch, who survives, also his brother, William Bowie of Windsor. The deceased was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church while residents here and was also a member of Camp Bob Hope, Sons of Scotland. The funeral will be held from Windsor on Tuesday afternoon and will be held from Comstock's Funeral Home at 2.30 o'clock, Wednesday afternoon, with interment in Little Lake Cemetery.

NEUTRAL AREA

bay barricade at the east of the Front Road and closed them off.

It blocked the movement, but it did not stop it. The actual destruction, facing the Japanese in one direction and the Chinese in the other.

Shanghai, Feb. 8 (AP) — Advices from Woosung late today said the Japanese were regarding the Chinese forces immediately after they captured a part of the village of Woosung, a nine-mile area on the Woosung forts was halted. Following the occupation, Japanese destroyers began to shell the village, the dispatches said.

Revise 9-Power Treaty?

Tokyo, Feb. 8 (AP)—The Japanese government, for the second time since its policy in Manchuria and China has been questioned by foreign governments, moved today for a revision of the nine-power treaty of 1922.

Shortly after the first note to Tokyo on the Kwantung developments was learned in Tokyo that the government was considering proposing a conference of the powers to revise the treaty, including a clear definition of the term "administrative integrity." A spokesman for the government then said that at the time Japan signed the treaty it had made a reservation on Manchuria but neglected to act.

Neutral Zone

Under the new proposal made to the diplomats, the spokesman said today, each large commercial center in China would be surrounded by a neutral zone 15 to 20 miles wide, policed under international supervision. Chinese soldiers would be excluded from these zones.

Such an agreement, he said, would recognize that some measure of international intervention is necessary to give China time to restore order. At present, whereas the nine-power pact is based on the principle of avoiding foreign interference in China.

Key centres it would be proposed to demilitarize are Shanghai, Canton, Hankow, Tsingtao and Nanking.

All of manchuria would be excluded from the proposal.

Japan, he said, intended definitely and permanently to demilitarize Manchuria herself.

Distinguishing Characteristics

Facts from the Annual Report (Weekly Message)

As a result of the successful operations of the year 1931, the London Life was able:

1. To increase its policy reserves to a standard higher than that employed by any similar company in Canada or the United States;
2. To cover all shrinkages in its investments;
3. To add substantially to its emergency funds, and—
4. To increase the Free Surplus, which now amounts to $2,811,721 on the Company's own high standards.

"The Statement is of a high degree of excellence which will be uncommon in any part of the world just now. And it is due not to any particular luck in recent years, but to the general policy of economical and cautious, but efficient management, persisted in for half a century."

Purse of Gold Presented to Rev. George G. Wright

St. James Parish, Carleton Place, Bids Rector Farewell

TRIBUTES PAID

The Carleton Place Canadian in its issue of February 4th records a tribute paid to the Rev. G. G. Wright, the new rector of Christ Church, Belleville, on the departure from Carleton Place by the members of St. James' parish of which Rev. Geo. G. Wright, who has ministered to the congregation of St. James' Anglican church for the past six years, was tendered a farewell by his congregation on Friday evening in the parish hall which was filled to capacity for the occasion. Rev. Canon Elliott and Mr. John McArton were joint chairmen and seated with them on the platform were the church wardens and the members of the finance committee of the church.

Dr. J. A. Johnston announced on the opening of the meeting that the new rector, Rev. Mr. Wright, Bowie, was unable to be present owing to the treacherous state of the roads which made driving very dangerous. The speaker thanked all who had assisted in the success of the parish and announced that refreshments were then served at the close of the meeting for any who wished to remain.

Rev. Canon Elliott then announced the first number on the programme, a quintette by Miss Craig, Campbell, E. Jamieson and Messrs. Whitworth and Jamieson.

Brief addresses were made by the joint chairmen. Rev. Canon Elliott noted the gathering was for the purpose of showing the appreciation of the congregation of the retiring rector who has ministered there most acceptably for six years and three months, having come to them in October, 1925. The speaker stated that the parish had made advances under Mr. Wright's leadership and a fine rectory had been paid by the congregation on Sunday afternoon when some 500 were present to hear his last sermon. He noted that the work of the parish had been very active during Mr. Wright's rectorship and he hoped that the congregation would continue to work together and stand by the new rector.

"A solo was then given most acceptably by Mrs. Mervyn Morris.

"At this point Rev. and Mrs. Wright were asked to come to the platform. Dr. J. Earl Hanley read the following address while Mr. Arthur Downes presented to Mr. Wright a purse of gold, and Miss Dorothy Hall presented a beautiful basket of flowers to Mrs. Wright:

"To Rev. G. G. Wright:

"During the past six years it has been our great fortune to have you with us as our spiritual adviser. Your untiring efforts on behalf of this congregation have resulted in much real progress in the parish. We feel that severing your connection here is a great loss to us but a splendid gain for your new congregation. We ask you to accept this address in memory of your excellent work in St. James' church, Carleton Place.

"Signed on behalf of this congregation.

"Church Wardens:
"T. Earl McCaffrey,
"Joseph T. Burrows.
"Finance Committee:
"J. A. Johnston,
Chairman.
I. C. Langtry,
Secretary.
"January 31, 1932."

Rev. Mr. Wright expressed his very sincere thanks on behalf of himself and Mrs. Wright for the generous presentations. He was glad to be able to report a certain amount of progress during the past six years. He knew the congregation to be one of the most loyal and whole souled band of workers he had ever been associated with. During his rectorship careful consideration had been given to all problems presented and he had always had the co-operation of the church wardens. There had always been splendid harmony in the finance committee and the church members. In leaving here it was with a sense of gratitude that the church was making satisfactory progress. He was not going to say good bye as he had an island on the Rideau lake and he hoped to get back there each summer and as this was quite close to Carleton Place he expected to see many from here each summer. He said he also looked forward to the continuous progress of the congregation.

Following Mr. Wright's remarks there was a solo by Mr. H. J. Leigh, with Mrs. Leigh at the piano, Mrs. Ball, with piano accompaniment by Mr. R. A. Gill, a solo by Miss Trudie Mullinger and a chorus by the choir.

"At the close light refreshments were served by the ladies."

Sudden Death of Albert W. Pennock

Ottawa, Feb. 8—Albert Wardlaw Pennock, agency manager of the North American Life Assurance Company and prominent in local financial circles, died suddenly Friday afternoon at his home. He had been home for dinner after the usual week out to the garage to get his car. Some time later he was found in the driver's seat dead.

The late Mr. Pennock started life as C.P.R. telegrapher and rose to be chief telegrapher in Ottawa. He resigned to enter the Insurance business with his father, the late James T. Pennock, then in the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company. Some two years later he joined the staff of the North American Life Assurance Company.

Born in Ottawa, March 10, 1881, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James T. Pennock. He received his education in the schools here and started to work while still a young man in 1898 with Mr. Pennock was a Methodist and for many years attended Wesley Methodist church. At the amalgamation he joined the congregation of St. Paul's-Eastern United Church and was a much steemed elder of that church.

During the late war Mr. Pennock became prominent in political, fraternal and sporting circles and his sudden death has caused a because widespread regret among the many friends he made during him.

Mr. Pennock was a member of the Ark Shrine, the Canadian Club, the Civil Service lodge. He was a charter member of the Ottawa Hunt and Golf Club, a member of the Rideau Winter Club and also the Canadian Canoe Club. A keen sportsman, he took a great interest in golf, curling and hockey and followed the football, and until the Ottawa hockey teams were in Ottawa's colors.

Besides his many friends he will be mourned by his widow, formerly Cryinne Poulin; two daughters, Mrs. Richard Lewis, of Ottawa; Mrs. Jack Hoff, Belleville, Ont.; one son, Albert Richard Pennock, standing McGill University; one stepson, Hunt Lewis of Ottawa; two sisters, Mrs. W. R. Pennock, former city postmaster and R. J. Pennock, Deputy Minister of Public Works and Health; five sisters, Mrs. H. McMatheson, Mrs. Tindal, Mrs. R. F. King, Mr. [illegible]orge Hardman, Mrs. Arthur Hardman, Mrs. Frank Dawson, Montreal; four grandchildren, Albert Richard Lewis, Ottawa; Jack and Eric Hoff, Belleville.

The funeral was from his late residence, 56 Powell Ave., on Monday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. Interment was in Beechwood cemetery.

Church of Today Must Answer World's Criticism

New Rector at Christ Church Knows Not High, Low Church

Rev. G. G. Wright, formerly of Carleton Place, conducted services at Christ Church on Sunday for the first time since his appointment as rector succeeding Rev. C. K. Clarke, now of Toronto. Before the morning service the congregation showed its appreciation of the committee placed in him by the committee and the parish. It had been a very difficult problem to him to secure this connection with his parish. Carleton Place where he was very happy and to leave the district which he had never thought of leaving. Only the thought that this was the will of God led him to decide to come to the Belleville parish.

The work of Christ Church was important in view of the size of the parish, one of the largest in the Dominion and in view of the staff by which the parish is served. Mr. Wright said he was much impressed with the special committee which met with the people, when he had met here.

No High, No Low

"In my ministrations, I know nothing of Low Church, High Church or any of those things. I dislike those terms. I only desire to be guided solely by loyalty to the prayer book," declared Mr. Wright. "So long I hope I shall fit in with the traditions of the parish." He added that he would be perfectly frank and he hoped the parishioners would be likewise, in offering welcome friendly criticism.

At the vestry he and his wife would welcome every member of the parish. The family of the rector would assume their burdens just like the family of every other member of the parish.

Glorious Church

Speaking on "The Glorious Church," Mr. Wright said that this was an age in which the church was under severe criticism, something it had not had in the unchurched and had lost its appeal to mankind. Since of the criticism levelled at the church was true and some of it was unjust, some of it is unwarranted. But the church is called upon to meet criticism, to examine it in its faults and under the eye of God to try and correct them.

There is a disposition to narrowness of outlook, he said. The church is the cornerstone of the incarnation bringing the gifts of grace and health of Christ back to the world and often today. Mentioning that at religious meeting he saw a sign: "Are You Saved?" he commented that religion was not meant to save souls by itself. Man must be saved with his hand clasped in the hand of another. Christianity is a social movement, in one hand the hand of Christ and in the other that of a brother man, one in China or Japan, one in the back street or in a back parish.

Narrowness of Thought

Narrowness of thought is another danger. Of course men and women must have cherished convictions such as that God is and that Jesus Christ was sent into the world, for unless men have these there is not much use of his going to church. For instance "about the only knowledge we have of God is given in Jesus Christ. Now while this is eternal, the application of these truths comes differently to a new age."

Worldliness is a danger which must be watched. He spoke of worldliness as the crowds did not hold the crowds. He held twelve men had these He impregnated with His ideals. "Sometimes we are too anxious for numbers," remarked the preacher. There is the risk of following the popular cry and of listening for the approval of the crowd. "The only thing that does matter is the place of Christ among us. We must realize that to live as Christ would have us live is to give ourselves daily to God so that God may use us," said Mr. Wright.

Question Box

A question box has been placed at the door of the church in keeping with the custom of Mr. Wright in his previous parish. He told the congregation that he felt there were many question which would ee of general interest in regard to the religious life. They do not require to sign their names. Questions received up to Friday will be dealt with the next Sunday evening.

The communion which followed the sermon was partaken by a large number of parishioners, Rev. G. O. Wright officiating, assisted by Rev. R. L. Owen.

Dealing with "The Great Refusal" Mr. Wright at evening said that a man might be strictly moral and yet not have begun to be religious. The words of Christ to the rich man, "Go sell all thou hast" were not the important words those were "Follow Me." The possessions were what was keeping the young man from Christ.

Ever-Present Living Christ

Belief in the ever-present living Christ—that, said the rector, is what the world has to grasp. "He is looking on the young men and women of this age. Our young life today like that of the young man in the Gospel is worthy of admiration. We now speak of drabness which sometimes annoys us is a spirit of wholeheartedness and sincerity that what Christ saw in the young man. But the youth of today must consecrate its talents to God and Christ. It must not let its great possessions of pleasure and comfort and wealth lead to the decay of serving God in Christ.

"So often our young life for whom many things have been given like the church, shake their heads and look away in sorrow for they have great possessions." Opportunity, said Mr. Wright called to the Sunday School for teachers.

The text upon the young man of the text was Lazarus, when later Jesus raised from the dead. Jesus called to the verge of the tomb to rescue men. Thompson, the poet, has called him "The Hound of Heaven," who pursues those whom He would save to the portals of life to match them to Himself. The Christian life has young men and women. do not slacken their pace so that the Church of God may catch up and save them to Himself.

Following the morning service the rector visited the grave of his predecessor in contact with God through Christ.

RENFRET TO RUN AGAINST HOUDE

Ex-Secretary of State Seeks Montreal Mayoralty

MONTREAL, Feb. 8.—(CP)—Hon. Fernand Rinfret, member of Parliament and former Secretary of State in the administration of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, to-night officially announced he would be a candidate for the mayoralty of Montreal in the elections to be held in April.

At the same time, Judge Amedee Geoffrion of the Court of Sessions, who had stated some weeks ago that he would be a candidate, announced that he had decided not to stand.

While Mayor Camillien Houde has not definitely stated he will seek re-election for a third term, it is generally believed he will, with a straight fight between Mr. Houde and Mr. Rinfret, looming as the possibility.

JAP STATESMEN ADVISE CAUTION

Recklessness Might Lead Country to Destruction

Tokio, Feb. 8.—(CP)—A Statement, attributed to two leading members of the House of Peers, that "any recklessness at present might lead Japan to destruction" was issued to-day through the press by newspaper Nichi Nichi today.

It was said priced the two peers referred to are Baron Kijiro Shidehara, former foreign minister, and Hikoichi Motoyama.

The statement, as printed by Nichi Nichi, read in part:

"Japan must proceed carefully in Manchuria, espec because of pending questions regarding Manchuria, and the general international welfare. It is necessary to maintain calmness. Let is an international community where international interest is paramount. We believe our movements in Shanghai should be most cautious. It is unnecessary to talk of our national dignity in connection with China, because China is not really a nation in the western sense of the word."

TABERNACLE W. M. S. HOLDS MEETING

The Women's Association of the Tabernacle United Church held a very successful meeting in the Church Parlors, Thursday afternoon with the President, Mrs. Lent in the chair.

Hymns "What a Friend We have in Jesus" and "I am Thine O Lord" were sung, the Scripture Lesson from 121st Psalm was read by Mrs. Caverly and the President and Mrs. Penn led in prayer. The business had been disposed of and reports from various committees received and passed. A programme was given under auspices of Group 2 of which Mrs. R. Bell is Convenor.

Lovely solos were sung by Mrs. McMullen and Mrs. Clement and short readings given by Mrs Murpoy and Mrs. Hicks, duets by Mrs. Bell and Mrs. Fisher. Betty and Jean Shorey concluded the program with an instrumental duet.

After singing the hymn "Yield not to Temptation" Mrs. McCutcheon closed the meeting with prayer.

Home cooking was sold by members of Group 4 after the meeting and a substantial sum realized.

NEW FLAG IS PRESENTED TO ARMY CITADEL

Col. and Mrs. Miller Also Mrs. Brigadier Calvert Guests of Honor

LABORED HERE

Pastors of Other Churches Join in Service at Citadel

The special service which was conducted in the Salvation Army Citadel Sunday afternoon in connection with the celebration of the forty eighth anniversary of the commencement of the Army's work in Belleville was very bright and interesting. Meetings in observance of this event have been in progress for several days and will conclude on Tuesday evening.

Yesterday the corps was honored with the presence of three prominent officers, who are veterans in the Army's service, in the persons of Colonel and Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Brigadier Calvert; the latter, being the mother of Ensign Calvert, the popular and energetic officer in charge of the local corps. Mrs. Calvert is engaged in active army work in Toronto, where her husband is Property Secretary in charge of all Salvation Army property in Canada East.

Colonel and Mrs. Miller after faithful and successful service with the army in many parts of Canada and abroad, during which time Colonel Miller occupied various important posts, are now living retired in Toronto.

Forty five years ago Colonel Miller came to Belleville as a Lieutenant and a few months later he was advanced to the rank of Captain and stated in charge of the Belleville corps, which position he held for some time.

At the meeting Sunday afternoon the Rev. Dr. Bell, of Bridge Street Church, Rev. Robert Hall of John Street Church, and the Belleville Ministerial Association, and Rev. H. R. Neal of Holloway Street Church were present to manifest their interest in the work of the army and to express their great appreciation of the power for good which the Army exercises in Belleville and in the world generally, Rev. Hall, Chairman.

The Rev. Robert Hall acted as chairman for the gathering in a very acceptable manner and in welcoming the visiting officers he paid fitting tribute to Colonel Miller, referring to the great force which he had exercised during his long service in the Army, for the advancement of Christianity and of the good accomplished by the Army as a whole, Mr. Hall spoke in the highest terms. The work of the local corps he highly commended and of the excellence of the Army band, he spoke in the highest terms of praise.

Rev. Dr. Bell opened the service with prayer and Mrs. Miller, of Toronto, read the twentieth psalm in a very impressive manner.

Musical numbers were given by the Army choir and band in a very excellent manner and added greatly to the brightness of the service.

Prior to the opening of the meeting, Miss Dorothy Mitchell entertained those present with a number of sacred piano selections in a very finished manner; her playing showed considerable musical ability and was greatly enjoyed.

Mr. Miller Speaker.

Colonel Miller was the principal speaker and his address was, indeed, most interesting and informative. In a very graphic manner he told of the great work of the Salvation Army in all parts of the world; the unceasing battle which is being waged to place Christianity everywhere and he depicted the great good which is being done by the men and womanly, sailors and soldiers' homes conducted by the army.

Special reference was made to the wonderful beneficial results obtained through the work of the Salvation Army's Naval and Military league in the English and United States naval and military stations.

Colonel Miller was stationed at Bermuda for some time and the great work done by the Salvation Army there was recognized and highly appreciated by the civil, military and naval authorities.

While stationed at Winnipeg, Colonel Miller had known very intimately the Rev. Dr. Bell, who lived there, prior to coming to Belleville.

Dr. Bell, Colonel Miller said, had been a great friend to the Army in Winnipeg and had helped their work in many ways.

Presented Flag.

A very pleasing and interesting feature of the meeting was the presentation by Colonel Miller on behalf of the local corps of a large and beautiful Army flag to the band. The old flag has been carried for many years and it was with great rejoicing that the handsome new flag was accepted. This flag which bears the inscription, "Belleville Citadel Band", was made in the Salvation Army wearing factory in England.

The red body of the flag is emblematic of the Blood of Christ; the blue border signifies Purity of Life and the yellow star has reference to the Fire of the Holy Spirit.

Upon the top of the standard is the Cross of Christ, which is surrounded with the letter 'S', which stands for Sin, Salvation, Soldier, Sanctification and Sunshine.

The flag was accepted on behalf of the Corps by Flag Sergeant Hugh Reid. A vote of thanks to Colonel Miller for his very interesting address was moved by Deaf and Dumb Mission by Rev. H. B. Neal.

Dr. Bell in making the motion spoke of the work of the army in Winnipeg with which he was personally acquainted. Special reference was made by him to the large and most capably managed maternity hospital, which is conducted by the Army in Winnipeg. In this hospital every year the number of births reach about fifteen hundred.

Rev. Mr. Neal in seconding the motion spoke in words of praise of the work of the army both locally and in all parts of the world.

Rev. Mr. Hall conveyed to Colonel Miller the appreciation of the audience, to which Colonel Miller graciously replied.

S. MODELAND DIES AT HOME

Retired Engineer of C.N. R. and Well Known in City

After three weeks illness from chronic heart trouble, Seward Modeland, retired engineer of the Canadian National Railway, a well known and highly respected resident of this city for many years, passed away early on Sunday at his home, 251 Charles St. Modeland had been in ill health and a few ago was recovering favorably to recovery but a sudden turn developed during the weekend and he succumbed to the end.

The deceased was well known especially among the employees and officials of the Canadian National railway, he being a member of that organization for 47 years, having entered the service when a boy of nineteen and only retired on pension in December 1929. The late Mr. Modeland was born in Brighton 67 years ago, being the son of the late Seward and Mary Modeland. He continued residence in Brampton until he was nineteen, when he entered the shops at Toronto of the old Grand Trunk to take up his life's work. He rose quickly in the ranks and was soon in charge of an engine. In 1910 he was moved to Belleville and until his retirement was in familiar figure about the Belleville terminal. Mr. Modeland was in charge of the engine on the fast Toronto-Montreal express until within a few years ago, when he entered the employ of the Belleville terminal and though not a tallyman, his ore could tell many interesting stories of life on the railroad in the pioneering days. He was well liked by the officials and his fellow employees held him in high esteem.

Forty one years ago, the deceased married Louisa Hawkins of Toronto, the wedding taking place at the opening of the Bay Quinte branch in that city. After moving to the city with Mr. Modeland took an active interest in the social and church life of the city. The late Mr. Modeland was a member of Tabernacle United Church and was active in all branches of the work serving for some years and was at one time a member of the Board of Management of Tabernacle United Church. He took a keen interest in fraternal organizations and at his death was a member of Acis Lodge, A.F. and A.M. Toronto, Quinte Friendship Chapter No. 43, R.A.M. of this city and also a member of East Toronto Lodge I.O.O.F. in railway societies he was especially prominent, being a member for many years of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, also the Locomotive Firemen's Association. Left to mourn his loss is his widow, two sons, Russell of Toronto, Seward of Montreal and one daughter Mrs. S. G. Fisher, Guelph. Also surviving is one brother Thomas of Vancouver and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Trimble of Toronto and Mrs. S. Taylor of Carberry, Man.

FEAR DEATH FOUL PLAY

Officials Holding Probe Into Fire Remain in North

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Feb. 8. Belief that foul play entered into the burning of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police post at Stony Rapids in Northern Saskatchewan in which Corporal Brian Burstall lost his life grew yesterday as the police party which left by airplane to investigate the blaze failed to return.

Inspector C. H. Montgomery, accompanied by a coroner, left two days ago by plane for Stony Rapids and was expected back today if nothing unusual developed. On leaving the inspector said the length of his stay in the north would depend on what the investigation disclosed.

BOMB FROM AIR

British Officials in Shanghai Still Strive For Peace

Shanghai, Feb. 8 (AP)—A fresh force of 2,400 Japanese troops outnumbering the Chinese more than two to one, smashed through sleet, snow and rain today toward the embattled Chinese Woosung forts, and occupied the village of Woosung under the cover of a heavy barrage from the ruins of the warships in the river.

The Chinese offered less resistance as Woosung today in contrast with the gailing fire they poured on the attackers yesterday. Three only a light exchange of rifle and machine gun fire from the Chinese was heard. As the 2,000 Japanese infantry troops, fresh from Japan, pushed on, crossing Woosung Creek after repairing a bridge which had been wrecked by the Chinese, the Chinese withdrew into open country to the west.

Established in the village, the Japanese continued their drive on the battered forts, which have withstood all their attacks for a week.

Guns Silenced

All effective Chinese guns in the forts were silenced.

It was widely commented, however, that in spite of the continuous bombardment and the severe fighting, in which the Japanese used tremendous quantities of ammunition, they made comparatively slow progress. Observers expressed themselves as amazed at the stand made by the poorly equipped Chinese troops against every implement of modern warfare.

The Woosung battle turned virtually all attention from the Chapei front-in Shanghai, already devastated by fire and the fierce bombardment of many days.

Foreign residents of the settlement gathered to see against-Japanese acroplanes today. They advised that the Japanese had been forbidden to fly over the foreign quarter.

There was only desultory machine gun fire over Chapei but fire destroyed a number of foreign-style villas and other buildings on Kiukiang Road in the no man's land to the north of the district. This gave the Japanese an uninterrupted view of the Chinese front and the country toward Klangwan and Woosung. The Japanese claimed the villas were used by Chinese snipers.

A thousand valuable race horses, owned by foreigners and wealthy Chinese were left to face starvation when their Chinese attendants fled from the International Recreation Club at Klangwan when Japanese troops appeared nearby.

A wholesale exodus of Japanese from Shanghai has reduced the Japanese population by nearly 20 per cent. and the Shanghai controlled body, Japanese consular authorities estimated that about 4,500 Japanese have left the city since the fighting began. HYDRO BUILDING

The purchase of a valuable Front Street property at a reasonable price by the Belleville Hydro Commission is an action which the citizens cannot but commend as a piece of wisdom on the part of the commission. This land and the buildings upon it known for many years by the name of the owner, the Tickell estate, have comprised one of the most attractive properties before the public and the Belleville Commission must feel that they made no mistake when they put through this deal. The property is central and the land is extensive with an entrance on Front Street and on Pinnacle Street, while the buildings are large and in good condition.

With this deal consummated the city commissioners will pay no more for rent and will have everything it desires under the one roof.

This is but one part of one year's profits of the system, one of the many proofs of the advantage of local ownership of the distribution system.

The Hydro Commission feels that it is the part of good business to own the property it occupies as it gives a sense of security from molestation.

With this property taken over next summer by the Hydro the long-honoured business of the firm of Tickell and Sons will disappear from the Front Street property. This furniture business was carried on for generations and business men in general to whom the name of Tickell is among the earliest of records in the commercial life of the city will be sorry that the time has come for this firm to go out of business. Tickell and Sons have seen the city grow and they were one of the firms which had faith in the city's future.

WORLD POLICE

France has proposed a world police army and navy as a material means of making effective an arms reduction pact. Cities and states have their police forces. Why should not the nations of the world unitedly depute, the question of world-wide order enforcement to an international army and navy? This is the actual proposal of France.

A real test of the League of Nations in exercising moral and spiritual persuasion over any signatory to the League which does not act in line with the general view of the League is being made at the present time.

The French proposal made on Friday by Foreign Minister Tardieu of France to the disarmament conference at Geneva is so radical as to arouse the keenest interest of the conference delegates. Some believe it is too good to be feasible.

Police are so essential a part of civilized life that even with law and order police are necessary. Civilization has not yet reached the stage when civilian police can be done away with for they are necessary as representatives of order and as exercise a restraining influence in deterring from crime, and because some men and women will break the laws.

Of course no nation would, even if it went to war consider itself in the status of the gangster or criminal. According to old notions of war, the world's nations might have felt itself justified but now there is a tremendous urge towards the new conception of war as the grossest international crime. The world will hope that nations may come to trust themselves to an international guard and in that assurance of peace and security, the world's great age will begin anew.

France has also suggested that new rules of warfare be adopted to protect civilian population from gas, bacteria, and bombardment in any future war. All nations will agree to that but there is, under the present conditions which allow war, always the danger that in desperation one nation may become an outlaw in the use of banned weapons. There seems more likelihood of a world of nations trusting themselves to an international police than there is in the power of a mere pact to outlaw certain methods and weapons of war to restrain a desperate enemy.

PROTECTION AGAINST QUAKES

Earthquakes will take their place with winds, floods, and other forces of nature against which man can protect himself though he cannot control them is the prediction of the New York Times.

"The seismograph of today is a very delicate instrument for registering shocks that may originate hundreds and even thousands of miles away. Place it in the very centre of a disturbance and the pen runs off the paper. Not until an instrument is designed so simple and rugged that it will infallibly record what happened where the earth shook most violently will the engineer proceed with the certainty that is his when he designs a bridge to withstand a known wind pressure and to carry a known live load. It is gratifying to note that seismology has awakened to this need and that the proper instruments are now being developed.

"Severe earthquakes are so rare that it would take a century to gather the necessary engineering facts by that means alone. So the seismologist shakes the earth himself by setting off blasts and measuring the effects. Or he causes miniature buildings to topple under known conditions on mechanical shaking tables. A decade may elapse before he has gathered the facts that engineers must have."

And shadows sleep.

These beads, as clear as honey,
Reflect the sunset's mood rest;
These bits of morn, all sunny,
Should lie upon her breast
Because they mimic faintly
The beauty of her hair;
Because, strung here so quaintly,
Gleam hues her dear eyes wear.

"THE RED NAPOLEON" is a story of the "Yellow Peril" with a tinge of red, in which a reincarnation of the Corsican military genius sets out to conquer the world with modern death dealing weapons including the latest form of liquid fire and quick and sure death gas. The war scourge with red and yellow hordes of millions swept over the earth, New York and London and Montreal being wiped out by aerial bombardment, among other horrible things conjured up in the mind of that man who has seen so much of war that nothing surprises him. Floyd Gibbons author of "The Red Napoleon," and demon radio talker. Perhaps Floyd will see something in this Oriental mixup to corroborate his fiction prophetic or otherwise phantasy of a red-yellow Napoleon. We hope not.

x x x x

Then there was another prospective world war story (fiction) of a far eastern maniac who stumbled across secrets of the ancients hidden for ages, from which he evolved a radio system vastly superior to the one now in use by which he could transmit orders to his subordinates in all parts of the world to plan to conquer the earth by sheer force of numbers and poison gas. Modern weapons were to be rendered useless by infernal machines which exploded every cartridge within a radius of a mile when any electrical current in the neighborhood was turned on, house lights, street lights, or what have you. In this way armouries and arsenals were to be blown up and entire armies detroyed by the cartridges in the soldiers' belts exploding and the ammunition dumps going loco.

Another book (fiction) unmasked a financial genius who was going to make war impossible by controlling all the newspapers of the world, and all the gold of the world, his principal weapon, of course, was gold, and when he had that cornered he told the nations that there was not one ounce for war but all of it was for peace.

And now the disarmament conferences introduces smooth, suave individuals who intend to prove that universal and permanent peace can only come through turning all the swords into ploughshares.

DEFECTIVES DESCRIBED BY CATEGORY

Six Main Groups of Mental Defect is Indicated

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
(Famous Authority on Health and Psychology)

LOUIS E. BISCH

Among defective mental states there is one large group of cases the individuals, though feebleminded, present no striking physical characteristics. In addition to their height, stature and even their facial expression, sometimes, many individuals of this category find nothing is amiss with the thinking mechanism. In another group, however—the cretins—we usually find several kinds of defect, all striking by characteristics.

Hydrocephalus is one of those. Here there is an enlarged head with the skin drawn tightly over it. Indeed, the circumference of the head may run to double the norm. The forehead is high and prominent and the root or base of the nose normal to bulge as though from increased pressure underneath.

Hydrocephalus means literally, of course, "water on the brain," and in reality is but a name for an increase of fluid within the brain spaces or ventricles and between the convolutions of the brain, the meninges. Generally speaking, the greater the fluid the greater the impairment of the intelligence.

As it is opposite of hydrocephalus one must consider Microcephalus here. Here again, the name is descriptive, for it signifies tinybrainedness, so to speak. Sometimes the circumference of the skull may be as little as seventeen inches, normal being about twenty-two. A child after six.

The shape of the microcephalic skull is really more interesting than size. It has been described as "sugar-loaf". The forehead and back of the head are flat, giving the general impression being that of a dome. Quite different from the hydrocephalic one finds the microcephalic scalp to be thick and folded, just as if there were too much scalp for the small amount of space to be covered.

Cretin is startling figures too. They are short and squat. The fingers are thick, mouth large, tongue broad, head square. The condition is rather prevalent in Switzerland, in Burma and Madagascar, in the Himalaya mountains of India and even in certain sections of the Rockies. It is believed that the condition is a deficiency of thyroid secretion—is due to the absence of certain minerals and other substances in the water used for drinking. Strangely enough, in the districts where Cretinism flourishes the dogs are also affected with thyroid trouble.

Mongolians are another interesting type of mental defective. Their name is derived from their appearance, for the Mongolian race, mainly pecan-shaped eyes slanting downwards and inwards. The tongue also is characteristic, being furrowed on it. The joints of these individuals are very flexible, sometimes to the point is popularly spoken of as "double-jointedness".

Amaurotic Family Idiocy is a most remarkable disorder. The term "amaurotic" means blindness and these children are not only blind but also idiotic. Practically speaking, the strange as this may seem—appears to be Jewish race. These children are suffering from the same condition many appear in single family.

Lastly the Idiot-Savants deserve special mention. Females are seldom afflicted with this. Individuals who are highly gifted in some special field such as arithmetic, while the other faculties remain distinctly below par usually. Memory ability is usually marked in these cases.

All the various special types of mental defect are apt to have poor intelligence. Some may belong in the moron class and some in the imbecile and idiot groups.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

If your child is developing tics and habit spasms or peculiarities of speech, etc., don't hope that he will outgrow it in time. Such manifestations mean trouble with the nerves and therefore should be attended to promptly.

A. G. SLAGHT K. C. CRITIC'S COUNSEL

Ottawa, Feb. 8 — Arthur G. Slaght, K.C., of Toronto, will be counsel for the Province of Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission administration before the Middleton Royal Commission it is understood here. Premier G. S. Henry, announced last week Mr. Justice Middleton of the Ontario Supreme Court would investigate two phases of the Commission's activities, the purchase of the Dominion Power and Transmission Company of Hamilton and the payment to John Aird, Jr., of Toronto of $50,000 in connection with the Madawaska deal.

Levy on Electricity Studied by Cabinet in Hunt for Revenue

Two Cent Increase on Gas and Amusement Tax Up
TAX ELECTRICITY
No Provincial Tax and Little Change in Corporation Tax

TORONTO, Feb. 8.—A brand-new levy on generated electricity, the first of its kind in Canada; an increased gasoline impost, and a complete upward revision of the amusement tax are reported to be the three major items in the taxation program which the Ontario Government will unfold at the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

The power tax, if legislated, will apply to all utilities generating electricity in the Province, including Hydro, and will contribute from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 annually to the Provincial Treasury.

Seven-Cent Gasoline Tax?

A one-cent rise in the gas tax is favored, and is good for at least $1,500,000 in additional revenue yearly, but a two-cent jump in the tax which the Government is said to have under consideration—that is, raising its present rate of five cents to seven cents—would double this additional revenue, it is estimated.

From the overhauled amusement tax the Government is said to be banking on $500,000 more per year than it is now getting.

Practically pledged to produce a balanced Budget at the end of the current fiscal year, even after retiring some $5,000,000 in Provincial debt, the Government is rumored to have an extra worry nowadays in the shape of further falling revenues in practically every department of its administration. On top of all this, the Special Committee of the Cabinet that had the 1933 retrenchment program in advisement is said to have reported that the $3,000,000 expenditure slash which was scheduled is impossible to effect if public services are not to be curtailed severely.

Higher Taxes

A stiff taxation program, consequently, is now the order of things, and for the past week the Government has been in session to decide what increases can be enacted at the approaching session. One of the hoodle have arisen rumors that, while the power tax may be still indefinite, the new amusement tax boosts are certainties. From these three, chiefly, will be levied motor-vehicle taxation, which is now in operation, the Government plans, it is said, to get sufficient extra funds to enable it to meet all obligations in ordinary expenditure on October 31, next.

There will be practically no change in the present Corporation Tax Act, it is understood. There will be no provincial income tax, as has been rumored in downtown financial circles. There will be no restaurant meals tax, and no further tax on busses until such time, at least, as the Royal Commission on transportation decides what has reported in findings. The mining tax will remain unchanged, it is understood, and so will the $3 and $1 charges for liquor and beer and wine permits, respectively.

Hydro, naturally, will have to bear shoulder the greatest burden in any power tax, inasmuch as it now pays practically no taxes, and municipal as the privately owned electrical concerns would pay what they do now. Federal, Provincial and Municipal taxes deducted from their assessment under the power tax.

Kilowatt-Hour Impost

No higher rate of tax than one-twentieth of a cent per kilowatt hour would, in any event, be hoped for. This rate, it is understood, would not affect the small consumer's pocketbook. In several sections of the United States a one-half a cent. tax is now in operation.

Under the proposed amusement tax revision a considerable change in the Government's application of seating tax will be made, it is understood, and professional sport — hockey, wrestling, in particular — may be assessed stiffly on its higher-priced seats. The same policy will likely be applied to box-office seats in theatres. There will be a tax imposed, as a matter of fact, on every admission ticket from five cents up, and it probably will be done in a sliding-scale fashion. At the present time the amusement tax is levied on any admissions up to 25 cents.

Expenditure Cuts

The departmental retrenchment program which is said to have been put through by the Government as yet. Rumor says, however, that the Departments of Lands and Forest expenditures on forest-fire suppression are being cut down considerably, with no new equipment being purchased this season. In the Mines Department, one of the smallest spending of the branches of Government activity, the annual geological survey program may be cut appreciably. In Agriculture a considerable saving in grants to fall fairs will be effected, and an almost complete suspension for the time being of colonization and immigration work is likely to be ordered. In Highway maintenance of roads is to be cut extensively, and no new roads will be constructed unless their construction is absolutely imperative. In Health, the county system of health units, as well as a chain of diagnostic clinics, which it was hoped might be inaugurated in 1932, or recently be dropped indefinitely.

Dial Phone Saves 4 Persons' Lives

Toronto, Feb. 8—The ringing of the telephone gave an alarm at 3.20 yesterday morning that firemen believe saved the lives of Walter T. Allen, his wife and three children, who were sleeping in their apartment over their dry goods store at 1001 Danforth Avenue.

Mrs. Edmonds was wakened by the telephone's persistent clamour in the store below and, going down the stairs leading into the back of the store smelled gas.

Returning, she aroused her husband and both managed to collar the investigate. Here they were trapped by dense acrid smoke and were forced to grope their way about the store. When Edmonds got back up into the store he missed his wife. Flashes by this time had cut off any chance of his getting back down the stairs, so running out to the yard, he broke a back window and pulled Mrs. Edmonds to safety.

In this year of great advancement...old standards still hold.....

GREAT advancements effecting notable improvement in motor car performance have been announced this season.

Well ahead of the field, as usual, are the new McLaughlin-Buicks with the new famous Wizard Control, Free Wheeling, Silent Synchro-Mesh transmission, Ride Regulator and many new refinements.

But there is something more to performance than power and ease of control. For instance, Reliability — that ability to continue operating at concert pitch for 100,000 miles and more! Such a quality is the direct result of that integrity of engineering and manufacture that have made McLaughlin-Buicks Canada's favorites for over 24 years. For a great percentage of McLaughlin-Buick owners buy McLaughlin-Buicks again and again. And an increasingly large percentage are repeat buyers.

We invite you to drive the McLaughlin-Buick Eight. No other car can equal its background — and its performance sets the pace for 1932.

Belleville Juniors Gain One Goal Lead in Group Playoffs With Trenton

Score 6 to 5 on Saturday Night But Should Have Been Larger

SLOW CONTEST

Locals Do Not Seem to Check in Approved Fashion

Displaying a brand of hockey very much below their usual efforts the Belleville juniors defeated the Trenton boxers on Saturday night 6 to 5 on Saturday night. As the game was the first of a two game series with goals to count, the locals now have a one goal lead to take to Trenton tonight. The game was one of the poorest exhibitions of hockey that has been seen here. Belleville this season. The Cubs were very weak in defence and had they not played inspired hockey on the offensive the visitors would have taken home a substantial lead. The Cubs are capable of playing much better hockey than they displayed on Saturday night and if they continue to take the Trenton boxers as a joke they will come home on the short end of the total goals tonight we imagine.

Trenton Looks Better

Trentons are not the soft so-called push-over, team which the locals thought were and were demonstrated this fact on Saturday night when they played part of the Cubs most of the evening. For the winners Chalmers, Hall, Jordan and Begin were the out-standing players. Especially young Willie who was a constant menace to the locals all night and the lad was rewarded for his efforts when he scoring two goals and assisting in two other counters. Manager Begin also played good hockey with Rattan and Chalmers featuring the defence. Dolan and Lambert played their usual steady game, although these two boys are capable of playing better hockey than they displayed on Saturday night.

Sherry Is Missed

The locals missed Jack Sherry who was taken to the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday afternoon suffering from a severe case of pneumonia. The acquisition of McGee and MacGregor from Trenton has the great stroke of business for the locals as time has shown, although they gave all they had, were now quite fast enough for the Cubs. Coach Thompson was forced to replace McGee with George Scopa in the first, in the third period with the result that the visitors were held scoreless for the period. Sherry Ethier was carrying the puck much better than formerly and was the star work on the defence was not up to his usual standard. Jimmie Polwell also played excellent hockey but he has a man's sized job cut out for himself in filling Sherry's place. Polwell was about the pick of the locals, however, with the exception of Harry Morgan, Red MacDonald and Johnny Morgan who display about this worst exhibition of hockey that they have played this year. Red and Johnny Morgan did not get going at all. Harry was the pick of the forwards. Nicol, Carl Morgan and C. MacGuire were simply not there at all. Manager Gyorgy played very good hockey as long as he was on the ice. It might have been a good idea to have a sub out longer considering the showing that the regulars were making.

In the return game, which will be played in the Trenton arena, the locals will have to display a much better brand of hockey if they wish to emerge victors. A one goal lead is not quite as much margin as Coach Thompson was depending upon, but he feels assured that the kids will stage a come-back and will present their most ardent rooters tonight.

Locals Do Not Seem to Check in Approved Fashion

The game opened with the Trenton team out-skating the locals and bombarding Hall in the nets but it will it was some little time before Belleville had a shot at the visitors goal and this honor went to Harry Morgan, who tested Chalmers with a nearly scored when he drew Chalmers out of position but the latter was right on the job and could not get into position to shoot. The locals defences missed Harry when they broke through the defence to beat McGee for the first goal of the night. The goal was the result of poor defensive work on the part of the Cubs.

Shortly after this "Shud" Ethier, on a very nice solo rush, beat the entire team to even the score 1 to 1. Both teams "stepped on the gas" and plenty of action was witnessed although not much in the shape hockey was in silence. Shortly before the end of the period Begin took a well timed pass from Jordan to put the visitors ahead 2 to 1. Ethier and MacDonald tried time and again to beat Chambers but he was just too good for the local marksmen and the period ended 2 to 1 for Trenton.

Second Period

The second period saw more goals scored than have been scored in one period in Belleville this season, when the red light was flashed on no less than seven times. Belleville scored four times and Trenton staggered three counters in the twenty minutes of play. Exactly one minute after the period started Harry Morgan scored on a pass from Jimmie McGuire, one minute later Begin and Willie combined to have the former beat Scopa.

Harry Morgan took the puck at the face-off to once again tie the score. Trenton were not to be scored for the next ten minutes as both teams were playing rather ragged hockey. It was not until 15 minutes of the hockey minute was over before Jimmy McGuire put the local into the lead for the first time during the night, to date, when he took a perfect pass from Harry Morgan to beat Chambers. Just after the local things up before "Shud" Ethier and "Red" MacDonald put the locals ahead, but, bne minute before the end of the frame Willie fooled the entire Belleville team when the scoring 5 to 5 as the gong sounded.

Third Period

The start of the final frame found George Scopa replacing McGee in the Belleville net. Kidd had the first shot and was seen to be a man the locals came to life and tried to but enough extra goals to give them a lead to take to Trenton. Not once here again stayed off defeat. Seeing victory within their grasp the visitors "turned on the steam" and literally skated the locals dizzy and only the poor scoring ability of the Trenton forwards kept them from scoring at least two or three more counters. Mid-way through the frame Harry Morgan broke away and with nobody but Chambers to beat put the locals into the lead when he scored the nicest goal of the night. Trenton carried the play for the rest of the game but neither team could score and the game ended 6 to 5 for Belleville. Referee Armstrong handled a real hard game very well. The game was one of those games that keeps the official in trouble all evening and Armstrong certainly worked an exceptionally good game considering the poor exhibition displayed by the players.

The line-up—Belleville, goal Morgan and Scopa; defence Ethier and Polwell, centre MacDonald, wings H. Morgan and J. Morgan, subs C. MacGuire, Nickol, C. Morgan and Geyer.

Trenton—goal Chambers, defence Lambert and Rattan, centre Kidd, wings Dolan and Mattin, subs Begin, Willie, Jordan and Baker.

Referee—Armstrong of Oshawa.

FOUND SUB FLOODED

Portland, Eng., Feb. 8— Divers working on the sunken British submarine M-3 at the bottom of the English Channel found yesterday that the vessel is flooded from stem to stern. It was persistently rumored here last night that two bodies had been found jammed in the submarine's conning tower. Dockyard authorities denied this and they had no knowledge of such a discovery.

FOUR TEAMS IN C. O. B. L. COMING YEAR

Cobourg Definitely Announces Intention to Join Loop

PROBABLY FIVE

Oshawa is Likely to Join League at Annual Meeting

Four teams were assured the Central Ontario Baseball League for 1932, at their meeting held in Cobourg, in the Town Hall, on Saturday afternoon.

The acquisition of Cobourg, who applied for a berth in the loop and their application was received made the fourth team in the league. Although Oshawa were not represented Mr. Wm. Kay, O.B.A.A. representative for Eastern Ontario, assured the meeting that they would be in the league at a later date as he had had that assurance from a number of influential business men in the Motor City. Mr. Kay explained the situation in which Oshawa baseball circles were placed and the meeting felt that they would have a fire team league before the next league meeting was held.

Four Teams in Loop

President R. S. Dellard of Belleville called the meeting to order after which Secretary Weston Thompson read the minutes, which were approved and accepted. In reading the correspondence the secretary read a letter from Mr. R. A. Stiles, President of the Cubs, regretting that he could not be present. A letter was also read from Port Hope, that they could not possibly enter a team into senior baseball this coming season, but, wishing the league every success in its undertakings. A letter was read from Oshawa stating, that although they were not represented they were trying to get two teams in the field for the town for 1932.

Bradford, calling called upon Cobourg and both Mr. Rollins and Mr. J. Hatton stated that the Ontario town would be represented definitely in the C.O.B. League this coming season. Peterboro and Belleville representatives all stated that they would be back in the loop again this season. The meeting then took a very optimistic outlook and thus being assured of at least four teams it was moved and seconded that the league be formed President Codling asked the secretary to get the immediate correspondence with Oshawa and inform them of the result of Saturday's meeting. It was also deemed advisable to change the name of Cobourg of Orono as he had sponsored the team. Previous intermediates last year and he might still be interested in baseball.

Basketball Delegates

Walter Gerow of Belleville moved that Mr. Ed. Scott, Bowmanville and Wm. Kay of Peterboro as a representative on the O.B.A.A. executive committee. Mr. Smith seconded this motion and it was carried unanimously. The next meeting of the C.O.B. League delegates found three months hence, date to be set by the meeting Messrs. Walter Gerow of Belleville and Max Swallow of Peterboro were elected to go to the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. in Toronto. It was pointed out they were welcome at this meeting and Mr. Codling thought that each team present should pay their own way. Mr. Kay made a representative at this meeting, but Mr. Codling said he would attend this year.

The question of the annual meeting and election of officers was then brought up and it was decided to hold the election at the C.O.B. League officers after the O.B.A.A. meeting. Secretary Thompson was instion cordially invited the delegates to Bowmanville for the next meeting in Kingston assuring them of a hearty welcome from the good city of Kingston in making the annual meeting of the C.O.B. League the success it should be. President Dellard, Alderman Joyce, was unanimously elected chairman of the meeting for the annual meeting will be held in Kingston. The next meeting of the C.O.B. League Alderman Joyce explained Kingston's facilities, as to the possibility of two teams entering from Kingston, as far as the citizens were concerned. He also informed the meeting that Kingston would have a new ball park to play on as it was almost finished now and he assured each team present that they would be playing on the finest diamond in Canada, in Kingston this summer. The meeting closed after all voicing their opinion that the outlook for senior baseball was very optimistic in Eastern Ontario now.

The delegates present besides President R. S. Codling and Secretary W. Thompson were, Kingston, Alderman Joyce, Rollins and Jamieson; Cobourg, J. Hatton and Ed. Scott; Peterboro, Wm. Kay, Hamilton, M. Swanston, Wm. Kay and H. Wilson; Belleville, Walter Gerow and W. J. Mills.

MADE PROPOSALS

Geneva, Feb. 8—Sir John Simon, British Secretary of State for Foreign affairs, speaking for the British delegation, proposed to the World Disarmament Conference today the abolition of submarines and poison chemical warfare and the establishment, of maximum figures for war materials and men.

Current Sport

By The Observer

Hockey fans of this district, will have their last opportunity to see an intermediate O.H.A. game tonight when the Queen's Students, the undefeated team in the "Big Six" loop invade the Belleville Arena to play and beat the local intermediates. A large number of Kingston players are making the trip to Belleville as they feel assured of the fact that they "can" and "take" the locals. As the locals intend to win the game, it all depends if it looks like a perfect natural. In the past two years Belleville has beaten the Students five times while the Kingstonians have beaten the locals on three occasions. So deciding game looks like a toss-up which no sport fans should miss.

After the rather poor and disgusting exhibition that the juniors made last Saturday night, in their game with the juniors of the Trenton juniors, it is hoped that they will redeem their life and play up to their capable form tonight, in the return game at Trenton. Although the Cubs have only a one goal lead to take to Trenton tonight, they should, if they play any kind of hockey at all, come home with another victory to their credit.

Coach Thompson's two new players, McGee and McGuire, of Orrell, did not live up to their advance notices as they were a disappointing lot. We regret to hear of the illness of Bill Sherry, Ethier was taken to the Belleville General Hospital with pneumonia case on Saturday. The local Cubs sure missed his hard hitting game on the defence, Saturday night.

Four teams for senior basketball in Central Ontario Charlie League for 1932 was the result of the meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Saturday. The league was also assured of the fact that Oshawa would eventually come into the league. The result of a rather inspiring nature as basketball needs support and life this locality. New faces will no doubt, cause the excitement of the game to this district.

The "soop 'er down, men," Wally Hall will be the chief "ice palace" on George Street these days. Wally manager caretakers are making preparations for the Eastern Ontario district cup games. Kingston and Belleville will battle it out for the cup that this year but just where the battle will take place is still a deep, dark secret.

Four teams will compete from each district and the winner of the winner except in a case of a tie as last year, a playoff will be decided via the point system. Canada's Olympic hockey team have struck their scoring stride at last. In the last game that they continues in their present scoring range until after they meet the Americans in their second game. Canada now stands in second place to Germany and U.S.A. have two wins and one tie. When the Yankees are hanging right on.

BILL COCKBURN

Is one of the greatest goalies in the business, as witness the fact that he is credited around Winnipeg with all the credit for the superior to Charlie Gardiner, now the property of Chicago Black Hawks, professional ranks. With seven shutouts to eleven league games this year, prior to leaving for Lake Placid, Cockburn is just about the season's star at the position this year, all Canada included. He is captain of the Winnipeg team now representing Canada at Lake Placid. He is the oldest man on the team and is the member not born west of the head of the Great Lakes, having first seen the world 28 years ago in Toronto.

PEGGERS WIN FROM POLAND

Count 9 to 0, Canadians Having Little or No Opposition

Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 8 (By Wallace H. Ross, Canadian Press staff writer)—The Polish Olympic hockey team fell before the clever work attack of Canada's Winnipegs as an Olympic championship game here yesterday, the Canadians running up a count of 9 to 0 in the three periods of fifteen minutes each.

The Winnipegs put an impenetrable defence and the whirls sweating of the Allan sisters with the Maple Leafs on the brgast were no unfamiliar sight to the Canadian ski, the Polish goalie. The Winnipegs scored their goals from right on top of Slogowski,who made some surprising stops as his defence collapsed like a house of cards.

Without any knowledge of how a bobsleigh can stop a charging forward, the Poles were helpless when Russel Blinco and Allan Wright down upon their defense. Their great size on the rush at times tempts to make a check, but they were shouldered aside and the Winnipegs went on with their scoring.

Goals in Bunches

Romeo Dallaire got first notice in the first period on passes from Hughie Sutherland and Vic Lindquist. The Canadians had to wait for the first quarter hour. Monson and Wilmpson scored a brace each and Lindquist tallied once. Norm Malone made it a hat trick in the second son in the last period and lifted the Poles into the cage from four feet out and then Roy Heskel rushed from the Winnipeg defence with Rivers and took Romeo's pass to make it 9 to 0.

The Canadians were too one-sided to provide good hockey but the Canadian defence was outstanding. Cockburn had a day off in the Canadian cage. He was called into only two or three times in the whole game. He had to make one fine shooting from the blue line and it failed to worry Bill.

Blind May Read Ordinary Print

Toronto, Feb. 8—The blind may soon read ordinary printed matter. One more step, and a long one, toward this end is reported from France. M. Thomas, a young French engineer, has perfected an invention which puts the printed matter for ordinary newspapers, magazines and books right at the finger tips of the sightless.

The machine is called the photoelectrophone and M. Thomas is the result of fourteen years of experiments. He is a young man who has himself known blindness.

M. Thomas was blinded several years ago in the trenches in the Great War. After the war his sight was restored by means of an operation.

FIRE-DAMP BLAST CLAIMS 8 LIVES

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Nanny is More Than Satisfied

By Thornton W. Burgess

Things seeming strange are so less true
Because they are unknown to you.
—Nanny Meadow Mouse.

Nanny Meadow Mouse prided herself on knowing all about the Green Meadows and the people who lived there and visited there. Of course she didn't know all about her neighbors, but she thought she did, wherein and how she is a lot of people I know. So, when Danny Meadow Mouse stood her about the queer member of the Old Owl family he had chanced to see, she was puzzled, never having seen or heard of such a person herself. Not that she thought that Danny was telling an untruth. No, indeed. She was sure he believed he had seen what he described, but she doubted that his eyes had seen truly. So Nanny decided to set at once to see for herself.

Danny led the way to a certain big mullein stalk to the foot of which one of Mrs. Peterboro lived under the snow left. Up the stalk he climbed and slowly and very cautiously pushed the snow from his head out of the little round hole at the top where he went in to permit him to look, all around. Hastily he drew back.

"He is still there on the nearest post," he whispered to Nanny, and made way for her to look and peep out.

In the same cautious manner Nanny peeped out. That was all she expected to see she probably didn't know herself, but what she did see caused her to almost let go of the stalk to which she was clinging. There on that post sat the strangest bird she was called as soon as Danny had said he was. That he was an Owl she knew, but he could be sure. There was a family resemblance, even though this fellow was very different from the members of the family with whom Nanny had become acquainted.

"Perhaps," thought Nanny hopefully, "he is a friend of Mice. Perhaps he prefers birds. I hope so. There are many of them who come to visiting the Green Meadows as it is. I do hope this one doesn't care for Mice."

As if in answer to her thoughts the stranger leaned forward, spread his big wings and flapping them two or three times, made a long no sound, sailed out over the snow. He circled widely, making by with those long legs with big feet and cruel claws. There was one thing about those big wings began to flap again and silently the stranger flew off in the direction of Farmer Brown's barn talking with him a fat Meadow Mouse who had recently moved into the neighborhood where Danny and Nanny lived.

"What did you see?" demanded Danny eagerly as Nanny dropped down beside him.

"What did you see?" demanded Danny eagerly.

"Enough," replied Nanny soberly. "Yes, sir, I see enough to satisfy me that all you told me is true, and that I have no need to watch out for is now without you. You know that fat neighbor of ours has been using our tunnels because he was too lazy to dig ones for his own?

"Certainly I know him," replied Danny. "What about him?"

"He won't use those tunnels any more," said Nanny.

"Did—did—Danny hesitated, but in the end he asked a question.

Nanny saw it and understood. She nodded. "Yes," she said, "he went away with that stranger with the funny face. I'm sure he won't be back. I never did like him, but it was rather dreadful to see him go that way. I think that the same thing may happen to you and me, Danny, if we don't be extra careful from now on. I do hope that fellow is only one of a few of his kind that will be short. I wonder where he came from. Well, sir, Mice, we've troubles enough without one more."

Meanwhile Monkey-face the Owl Owl was sitting on the top of Farmer Brown's barn with the tail, the short tail, of a Meadow Mouse hanging from a corner of his mouth.

Mrs. Ross Welch suffered a stroke yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitby are entertaining friends this evening Feb. 5th at Trinidge.

Fashion Flashes

By Alice Alden

Shoulders are high when it comes to the new fashions for evening. A gown of white satin cut on long lines has the new straight neckline banded by rows of red gardenias worked neat.

A bunch of roses is going to grace many a ball this season. Quite the new millinery trend is a hat in the form of a bunch of roses in silk and velvet placed at the side back against the hair.

Buttons beckon as the most attractive trimming for coats this Spring. A model in dark red diagonal weave has big red buttons at the side that extends from the waist to the hem. It is also fastened with a kerchief scarf of summer ermine.

A new partnership is that of brown and beige. A new dinner frock has a deep brown bodice over which is posed a bodice in beige chiffon with a deep V neckline. The neckline is outlined with brown leaves and the wide lace belt has roses and leaves.

A pleasing sight is the first velvet suit of Spring. An advance model has black velvet has a jacket with puffed sleeves and a row of black and white buttons. There is a baby-ing scarf of ermine.

Even in the Spring there are fur coats worn, albeit light furs of course. Smart for threeply Spring days is a coat of thin gray kid with trimmings of gray Persian lamb. There are distended pockets and the gray leather belt is trimmed with silk swedden beads.

We need to sprinkle a little bus powder over the literary world.—George O'Neil.

Party Dishes Take Taste-Tempting Tones

No day in the year calls for parties as much as St. Valentine's love fete. Those who are married get sentimental and those who are not get match-making. And, of course, that must start at a party. So this year there should be an enormous increase in Valentine parties for "tomatoes are cheaper, potatoes are cheaper, and now's the time to fall in love."

Speaking of tomatoes suggests getting the Valentine red into the dainties for serving. Tomato aspic jelly salad, moulded in heart shapes, is a welcome change from sandwiches. It's give Cupid a better chance too, if dainty tartlets, with a bit of sparkling red jelly, calls attention to the heart.

The recipe given below is for tartlets that have a melt-in-your-mouth digestibility for late suppers because cake flour is used. Sift two cups of cake flour with one scant add 1-2 teaspoon of salt, and sift again. Cut in 1-2 cup cold shortening, until mixture looks like meal. Add about 1-3 cup of water, very cold, a little at a time, mixing with a knife until dough clears bowls of all pastry that touches. Use as little water as possible, Roll dough 1-8 inch thick, spread with 1-3 of 1-2 cup of soft butter creamed with 1-2 cup almond, leaving 1-2 inch margin around edge. Sprinkle with 1-2 cup sugar and fold pastry inward 1-3 of width, lapping edges lightly and pressing firmly to hold in place. Fold opposite edge inward 1-3 of remaining width, lapping and press the sheet of dough lengthwise, giving three thicknesses of pastry with fold on top. Cut crosswise in strips each. Chill 15 minutes or longer. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 15 minutes, or until delicately brown. Spread with jelly. Serve with ice cream.

Cheese straws are always popular and can be made in a jiffy. Cut stale bread in thin slices, remove crusts, finely cut. Spread thin between layers of cake. Cover with thin slices of bread with remaining frosting and sprinkle thickly with long-shredded, moist coconut. Cool.

Bridge Street W.M.S. Meeting

On Friday afternoon February 5th the W.M.S. of Bridge Street Church met in the church parlours with a good attendance.

Mrs. Bishop presided and opened the service by Mrs. W. Thompson singing hymn; 'Faith of Our Fathers living still' followed by prayer. Mrs. Bishop read minutes of the last January meeting; Mrs. Schryver gave the financial report, which was good. Mrs. Hunt had written three letters of thanks and Mrs. Richardson had carried flowers and messages to the sick and shut-ins.

The President announced the International and Inter-denominational Day of Prayer which is being held in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston this afternoon. She also bespoke the prayers of the members for the success of the Disarmament Conference now in session at Geneva and for Japan and China, that peace may be restored and peace prevail throughout those countries. Mrs. Bishop then introduced to us by reason of our missionary interest in both, Mesdames Hall, Wheatley and O'Tuma offered excellent prayer for these subjects.

Mrs. Richardson's group was in charge of the program and Mrs. Richardson read the 23rd Psalm as the service. The theme was "The Kingdom of God Movement" and Mrs. Richardson read Mrs. Fargey and his relation to a movement that would bring about the reign of God in Christian and non-Christian countries—also Christ. That the Kingdom is the spirit of love and service to God and Mrs. Bell offered an earnest prayer. Mrs. Richardson then read a meditation that intimitable classic on Christian love, found in chapter of 1st Corinthians. The closing hymn was "The Kingdom Come, O Lord, with prayer. The usual social half-hour followed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Introducing The Family
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a constant reader of your column and have a question I'd like to ask. When a girl has a date with a young man whom the family has never met, is it necessary for her to summon the family and proceed with introductions, or can it entirely right for her to receive the young man and then go where they have planned.

Doubtful.

The latter course would be preferable, don't you think? It would have to be a pretty outrageous young man who would be able to run the gauntlet of an entire family introduction and get away with it gracefully. You might introduce him to one member of the family when you leave, and the next time to another.

He's Not Engaged
Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend is having a birthday party a few weeks' time. I would be all right for me to give her a piece of jewelry when we are not engaged, or do you think flowers and a book would be in better taste?

As you are not engaged to the young lady, I think that flowers or a book, couple of books, even, would be better for a birthday remembrance than jewelry.

How She Must Refuse Dates?
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a very good looking and am asked out a lot, but my father doesn't allow me to stay out later than 10:30 p.m. and I have to be home by that time. How can I refuse a date, for I don't want to appear think I'm high-hatting them. When I tell them my father won't let me stay out, he home, they just let the date slip. Not to be a 'wet blanket,' I did go out with a boy who wanted me to, and, Since then the boy has been very rude to me, and you think I should have an understanding with them, or can you advise me to tell him I' care for him?

You haven't told me how old you are? If you're 18, I think it's too much to expect you to remember such hours. If you're only 16, I'm going to say that I think it's silly.

Perhaps boys like you better when you keep earlier hours, as you tell me that you do, but I'm inclined to you since you broke regulations by going out with one evening and were parked.

As to explaining why you can't accept invitations that keep you out after 10:30 minutes—why not tell the truth? Then they will probably think you're high-hatting them. If they're decent fellows, they'll appreciate or tell the boy you care for him sufficiently to make home-life seem a good policy, don't you think?

A Girl in Another City
Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a man who lives in another city. He visited here for a month and I thought he loved me and proposed to me, but he left without asking me to marry him. He writes me very nice letters and sends me presents, but I don't know what to think. Do you think he is sincere?

Young Mother's Problem
Dear Miss Fairfax:

Against the violent opposition of my parents, I married a boy I was crazy over and everything they predicted came true. He deserted me before my baby was born, and I don't know where he is now. The baby is almost three years old and if he hadn't been a wonder he would never have survived. I got a place in a department store when baby was born and left him to be board with people who neglected him terribly. Sometimes I'd be up all night with him, then have to go after they'd given him a cold, sour milk to a baby.

Finally I put him in a creche, and the nurse there thinks he's doing well by him. A girl friend of mine and my parents would like me to come back. I've not written since I married—and the baby, too, if I'd admit I'd been married. But I've come to agree never to see my husband. Should I write and tell him I'm sorry I've been treating him so badly? Just be thankful dear. You're a lucky girl and my best wishes to you.

WALLBRIDGE W. M. S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Association and Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Jos. Chisholm, on February 3.

There was a large number in attendance as well as several gentlemen to partake of the dainty lunch provided by Mrs. Chisholm and the six assisting hostesses. After luncheon the W. M. S. met with the president, Mrs. E. T. Hinchcliffe, presiding. The president read a special prayer and all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. Hinchcliffe gave a very interesting talk on "The Kingdom of God Movement, Honor Missions and Medical problems in Dia Wai."

Prayers were given for the distressed provinces in the West. The meeting was then in charge of the first group leader, Mrs. Jos. Chisholm. A Temperance paper was given by Mrs. A. Nicholson. Reading "Little Blossom" by Mrs. Geo. Rikley. "Jesus took the leaves" Mrs. A. Smith. "Prayer" by a group of boys; Mrs. R. Lane sang. Mrs. Hinchcliffe closed with prayer by the President.

Annual Business Meeting is Held

The annual Congregational meeting of the Canniffon United Church was held in the Sunday School Room on Monday, Jan. 3rd. Through the splendid co-operation of the Women's Association the ladies of the congregation a very delightful and abundant supper was served at 7 o'clock by the representation of the Canniffon congregation following the business. Mrs. Merrick led in some hearty community singing, Mrs. Merrick acting as pianist in singing the hymn "You may have the gay bells ringing in your heart" The pastor, Rev. Mr. Boyd, then led in prayer. He then briefly outlined the purpose and meaning of meeting together as a congregation to review the work of the year, thereby keeping informed regarding the churches work, also regarding the churches of success and help by the various departments during the year.

Interspersed with the reports were some real entertaining numbers as follows: Piano solo by Miss Grace Mills, Mission Band Report—Miss Grace Mills and Miss Ella Greer; Mills and Trio by Mrs. Chambers Mr. and Mrs. Merrick, C.G.I.T. report by Miss Muriel Sidley, solo by Mr. Don. Williams.

T.P.A. report by Roy Pound indicated receipts from all sources including Envelopes, Donations, etc., $1441, after various donations to church funds were made $28 remained as a balance on hand. In addition to the above the Y.P.S. by sub- and collection gave $65 to the Missionary Funds. Then followed a Reading by Miss Beatrice Mills and a piano solo by Master Don Wannamaker. The Sunday School report presented by Mr. Roy Pound was encouraging. Among other things it was stated the even the financial receipts fell the year, showing an income of $1,000 more than the year 1930 and more from previous year. The school also gave $50 to the M. and M. Fund. A duet then followed by Mrs. C. Weseott and Miss Beatrice Mills.

Mrs. H. Empson, presented the W.M.S. report and showed that after total receipts $2403, expenditures $1297, balance $826.16 Then followed a quartette by Mr. Empson and Mills, Twiddy and Merrick.

The financial report was given by Mr. E. Brenton. His report gave a very interesting condition of the finances of the local church, especially considering the difficult year passed through.

Votes of thanks were then presented from the congregation to the Pianist and Choir, Women's Association for the use of the hall and generous support of the churches work during the year. And a very satisfying condition of the of thanks tendered to Rev. W. R. Boyd, Minister, for his splendid efforts for the interests of the congregation. Mr. Boyd's helpful meeting was brought to a close.

WEAK AND BLOODLESS AT 16

Friends Feared Rose Fawcus Was Going Into Decline—She Recommends Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to Young Girls.

"When I was about 16 years old, I became very anaemic," writes Rose Fawcus, Winnebago, Man. "Of course, I thought I would soon be all right again. So I went on at this time for a whole year, when I became very weak and wondrous. So many people were saying I was getting thinner, because I was so pale and yellow. Other people quoted, I would almost faint. On the advice of my sister, I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in less than a month I began to feel better. I took six boxes in all, and was then as well as ever. I am now 20 years old, and have never had any trouble since. I have never needed the pills again, but to girls of sixteen or seventeen I tell women who are inclined to be weak or anaemic, I most highly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Mrs. A. S. Dennis, Agassiz, B.C., having herself been helped back to health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, wrote: "My daughter was very much run down when she was 14, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills gave her new life and strength."

Thousands of such pale, languid, anaemic girls have been made bright, active girls and healthy by the strengthening and blood - creating qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Try them. Avoid substitutes offered by some dealers. They are not the same as your druggist's in the new glass containers. Sold everywhere.

Alexandria, Moffatt-Hall nd Ribago showed minor losses.

International Nickel and Noranda pped a little to 8.85 and 3.15, reectively, while Canadian Industrial etal markets, Nipissing recovered ew cents to 36 and other silver es holding. Oils were completely the discard.

NEW LOWS FOR MANY ISSUES

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The downard values was resumed today, after a brief rally in the early trading, and several prominent issues re registered new bottom levels for the bear cycle.

Offerings were again light, but with week end business and trade reports still of an uninspiring character, there appeared little nothing to check the decline save technical short covering.

A couple of covering passed over the market in the first hour, causing several upturns of a point or two but thereafter the market was generally downward. Tobacco, Coppers, Farm Implements and Rails were notably heavy. A few common dropped 3 and the preferred about 10 or new lows.

The Stock Exchanges monthly tabulation of the short interest, showing a fair increase for January, may have prompted the early covering. The short position on February 1, was reported at 3,600,363 shares. A gain of 96,493 shares over Jan 31 while brokerage quarters generally were not inclined to regard the increase in the short position as particularly important, indicated little improvement in the market's technical position was welcome.

Observance of Purification Feast

The solemnity of the Feast of the Purification was observed at St. Michael's Church yesterday. Candles for church and home of the Pound sanctified at last-thirty Mass, and a procession of altar boys and clergy proceeded about the church. A pastoral letter issued by Most Reverend M. J. O'Brien, co-adjutor Archbishop of Kingston, regarding Lenten regulations was read at each Mass on Sunday.

At the evening services, a very impressive and edifying sight was the procession of members of the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin, in honor of the Feast of the Purification of which day was solemnized. About seventy girls clad in white and wearing filmy white veils took part.

As they entered their places at the front of the Church before the Holy Hour, the hymn in honor of Our Lady, the hymn "O, Purest of Creatures, Mother, Maiden Clear, O Pray for Me" was sung during the services. Rev. C. E. Baker conducted the meditation for the Holy Hour at seven o'clock. Just before Benediction Sacrament of the Blessed Sacrament, the girls formed in procession, a statue of the Blessed Virgin was carried at the head of the procession after which was carried a beautiful banner, in white and gold on which was the words "I Am the Immaculate Conception." As the girls proceeded about the church a choir of children sang the very sweetly the Litany of the Blessed Virgin, in Latin.

Solemn Benediction was celebrated by the Rev. Father W. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., assisted by Rev. C. E. Baker and Rev. J. P. Sullivan. As the clergy left the sanctuary at the conclusion of the Benediction, Mr. Ed. Brown sang "Goodnight, Sweet Jesus," a beautiful and touching hymn.

FUNCTION ON FASTING DAY IS REPROVED

Rev. H. F. D. Woodcock Says Legislature "Snaps its Fingers"

PREMIER'S WORD

Did Not Realize Tenth of February Was Ash Wednesday

Toronto, February 8.—Calling the attention of his congregation to the celebration of next Wednesday, as Ash Wednesday, the first day of Lent, Rev. Canon H. F. D. Woodcock, rector of Christ Church, Anglican, Deer Park, Sunday morning in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, which, he said, "snaps its fingers insultingly at the Christian Church, and holds a guest State social function" on that day.

The social function referred to by Canon Woodcock is the supper dance to be attended by the Prime Minister and Mrs. Henry and members of the Cabinet and their wives and Legislative members to be held at the Royal York Hotel at 8.30 o'clock on the evening of Feb. 10, the day of the formal opening of the Ontario Legislature.

Premier Henry, expressing regret, last evening stated that in selecting Feb. 10 for the opening of the Legislature it was not realized that the date was Ash Wednesday.

The statement

Canon Woodcock's statement follows:

"Ash Wednesday is the first day of Lent. It is set apart by the Christian Church as a day of fasting, penitence and of prayer. It is a solemn day. Its origin is novelly determined upon by the caprice of an ephemeral body as the immemorial institution of the historic Christian Church. It is by the same authority that Easter Day will be kept on March 27.

"How was that happenin?' he continued. "Next Wednesday, Ash Wednesday, in the so-called Legislative Province of Ontario our Legislative Assembly snaps its finners insultingly at the Christian Church and holds a great State social function. The Church calls the people to penitence and prayer. The State calls them to a gala social event, and to frivolity as a social evening. And this at what is universally recognized as a time of world crisis, when the Christian people throughout this Province are constantly interceding that God's holy spirit may be with those charged with the 'great responsibility of guiding the ship of State in these trying days."

Premier's Regret

Premier George S. Henry last night expressed regret that the Government "inadvertently" had selected the first day of Lent, Feb. 10, for the formal opening of the Legislature.

"I'm sorry it happened," said he, "but we didn't realize that the tenth was Ash Wednesday when we chose that day. But for the opening of the Dominion, Parliament on Feb. 4, we would have opened the Ontario House on Feb. 3, a week earlier than now scheduled."

Rev. Dr. W. H. Hincksman, Minister of Metropolitan United Church, himself think:

"I do not think the State should be expected to observe the day that is only partially observed by the Church itself. Until the Church cease to observe Ash Wednesday only partially, I do not think that the State should be criticized for its overlooking the fact that the day on which Parliament opens happens to be Ash Wednesday."

Under Fire

When the Y's Men. local representatives in the O.A.B.A. take the floor against Queen's University Basketball team at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium Wednesday evening, it will be with the full realization that they have a difficult assignment on their hands. These teams have already met on a previous occasion this year and the outcome of which is already history, still rankles the Club Men, when the subject is broached.

The City's Senior Cage Ball representatives will have a two-fold incentive in their endeavor to chalk up a win the expense of the university boys. A decisive victory on the part of the local quint will help to ameliorate the severe drubbing administered by the students at the College gymnasium two weeks ago. Added to this the necessity winning all home fixtures in order to remain in the running for the group title, will it is thought have the desired effect in causing the home -talent to play at top form. At present the Club Men are up with the leaders of the race but they cannot afford to drop any additional games if they are to hold their own in the group of four.

In their game against the 'Kingston "Y" team the locals had several players who were favouring injured ankles but these have now recovered and the team will be at full strength for Wednesday's engagement. If defeated by the students the "Y" players will have no alibis, however they firmly believe that there will be no occasion for such, when the final score is posted and Referee "Andie" Reekie calls time.

France Ready to Sign.

It was with this thought in mind the French delegation submitted the scheme, M. Tardieu proceeded. The aim of the scheme is to build on the basis of the league covenant, rather than to seek for new basis. The conception of disarmament was, and remained, determined by the principle of security, he continued.

"France—" here M. Tardieu paused for a second to lend added force to his words, "France, despite the reduction in armaments to which she has spontaneously consented, is ready to undertake a contractful agreement to limit her armaments for a determined period. France is ready without conditions," he repeated, "let there be on that point neither misunderstanding nor equivocation.

Seldom Are Substitutes Equal In Quality

Here is a message to all shoppers—of both sexes and varying incomes.

INSIST UPON BRANDED, trade-marked and advertised merchandise. Do not accept a substitute for what you name. Long experience has shown that goods which are widely and steadily advertised in the newspapers are the ones that are worthy of your faith.

Modern newspaper advertising does you a great service; it permits you to accept without fear goods you have never tested. What others have believed in and accepted you also may buy with confidence.

Advertisers must be, and remain, honest if they want to be successful in business to-day. Their announcements bear their names and signatures. They tell the truth to protect themselves as well as to safeguard you.

A newspaper advertisement is a publicly printed bond between advertising merchants and the buying public. It is the strongest guarantee for goods of honest quality at fair and competitive prices.

Thrifty shoppers will buy advertised goods and refuse to accept any substitutes.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

"The things were on sale," Molly explained eagerly. "Two pair of pants for what I usually have to pay for one. I saved so much on them that I thought I could splurge a little. So I bought him some books he's been wanting for ever so long and a new cap and some underwear." She added defensively, "You wouldn't want Mike to go shabby would you?"

Ellen tested the omelet and lowered the flame beneath it. She turned off two flames which had been burning needlessly before she spoke.

"No, I wouldn't—but said patiently, "But how are we going to pay the rent? Tomorrow is Saturday and we already owe the grocer nearly all my salary. And Myra's isn't due for 10 days yet."

She did not suggest that the suit Mike had not really needed would reprive her of a business dress which she did need.

"That's it," Molly crowed, seizing her chance. "I have a marvelous idea for you. There's an ad in the morning paper from a dance place named Dreamland. It's a swell name, isn't it? They want girls for dancing instructors. Look there it is! I marked it for you."

Ellen looked.

Among classified advertisements, ringed in pencil, was a call for dancing instructors. But she knew Dreamland. She had passed it often on her way to work. And, although she had been born yesterday, she knew that "dancing instructor" was polite name for a girl hired to dance with unattached men at a small payment for each dance—a dime a dance. They did, in fact, call those girls taxi-dancers.

"The best part of it," her mother continued breathlessly, "is that you might meet a really nice man that way. I can't imagine why girls apply as my self haven't flocks of rich men trying to marry them. When I was young it was certainly different."

Ellen was uncomfortable as she always was uncomfortable when her mother talked that way. But Myra was frankly angry.

"New York isn't Ireland," she said flatly. "Rich men may grow on trees there, I don't know. But rich men in New York marry rich girls. They don't meet any other kind. If you're thinking that Ellen might meet John Astorbilt at Dreamland, Mother, it just shows you don't know such places. The only result of Ellen's trying to work at night as well as all day would be that she would break down in health. And then where would we be?"

Molly Rossiter smiled systeriously and, with characteristic optimism, overlooked all drawbacks.

"You can't tell how such things will happen," she remarked, still smiling. "I met your father in the most unexpected way. If we both hadn't happened to be at the same place that one night we'd never have met at all."

"It was a dance too," she continued triumphantly.

Ellen laughed. "Don't try to marry us off so soon," she protested. "After I," she added, "I'm only 20. I might be happy to dance with my husband by the time I'm 21."

"I was married at 17. And Myra, re—"

"Yes. I've been engaged to Bert ever since I was 15—nine years," Myra conceded bitterly. "And perhaps by the time I'm 30 we'll have enough money so that he and I can scrape to the altar."

The very blackness of the picture he drew was irresistibly funny. All three of them burst out laughing. For a moment they were like children and Molly Rossiter was the youngest of the three.

When Ellen paraded in dragging mops from the bathroom and kitchen, when they were all seated at breakfast, the subject arose again. Where was the $60 for rent coming from?

It was due last Tuesday and this is Friday. Ellen knew.

She had half forgotten by now that the money had been dissipated by her fault. Ellen was willing she should forget it. But no. Myra would not.

"I'll go to Mr. Parnham and explain," she said, her lips straight, her eyes stern. "We just have to cut down on everything till we get the money again. But one thing is sure—Ellen can't carry two full time jobs."

"I'm not sure—" Ellen began.

"It's all wrong," Myra fiercely stopped her. "Mike could make as much selling papers after school as you could standing all evening."

"Mike can't do that," Molly burst out in alarmed haste. "He's carrying double school work now. You know what your father would have said."

"He might have said something about Ellen's working at a cheap dance hall too."

It was a new difficulty. Molly's partiality for her only son. She was pathetically anxious that he should not be deprived of his father's death, pathetically anxious that he should have what other boys had. To that end she was willing to make any sacrifice. She saw no reason why her daughters should not do the same.

Before Myra's indignation could force a real quarrel, Mike himself clamorously interrupted. He was wildly eager for the freedom of the corner news-stand and for the chance to earn his own money. But Ellen entered a firm denial and his protests died. He knew he could not get around Ellen. She looked sharply at his eyes, heavy with fatigue.

"And you go to bed at nine last night!" she demanded.

Mike and his mother exchanged a guilty look.

"He was in bed," said Molly hastily.

She and Mike shared the same bedroom. Ellen knew then that Mike had persuaded his mother to leave the lights burning while he studied. But she was too tired to bring that up. She folded her napkin, tucked it into the heavy silver ring left over from better days, and rose from the table.

"I'll go as soon to see about getting that job," she announced in a tone that settled the matter. "I dance well enough so there shouldn't be any trouble. There's no use arguing, Myra. She said to her sister. "There's a limit to cutting expenses. We've reached it. We can't cut down any more without giving up eating entirely and the rent must be paid. I can carry both jobs until we catch up."

"I know that was the thing do," said Molly in deep satisfaction. But a moment later she added wistfully, "I'm sorry, Ellen, that things are so hard for you. But I still think that at Dreamland you might—"

Ellen checked her. "Don't be so romantic so early in the morning, darling," she begged and wished again that Molly understood her better.

Molly reached out and tousled her son's curly hair.

"When you get through school you'll make it all right, won't you, son?" she asked. "Then our troubles will be over."

She really believed this. Mike, wriggling with pleasure, bursting with pride, believed it, too. But as Ellen looked down at her mother's old brother she thought the time when they would all be rich was a long way off.

Myra and Ellen were fonder of each other than sisters usually are. They were proud of their friendship and glad to be together. Both of them worked a great deal harder than most girls and because of their mother's childish irresponsibility they had early been forced to take up the burden of keeping the family together.

Myra at 26 had all the maturity that Molly would lack at 6. That morning after breakfast she dressed quickly so she could walk the three blocks to the subway with Ellen. After indignation spilled out again in the two linked arms and walked along Fifth Avenue, cruelly sunny in the hot summer sunshine. She felt a fierce, burning helpless rage that her young sister should miss so many of the pleasant things of life. She felt also fear that Ellen in her 20 would step into the same blind alley she herself had stepped into at 17.

Nine years before she had fallen in love with Bert Lansdowne. She still loved him. But his job at the library where they both worked was almost as poorly paid as hers. And Myra had seen the first rapture of love wear away in nine years of endless waiting.

She felt she could not bear to see Ellen start in the way that she had started; to see Ellen lose her freshness of her love as she waited for an impossible $25 a week in order to be a possible $50. She feared what Molly had innocently hoped for that Ellen would meet someone at Dreamland. But she tried to hide that fear.

"It makes me furious," Myra began fiercely, her blue eyes blazing. "that you should have to take this job, work yourself to death just because—"

"Rot!" Ellen scoffed. "I'm not an old lady! And I'm not tired. I've been in my corset—and—"

"It's not fair at all," Myra persisted unhappily. "Not fair that you should make the sacrifice of things other girls have. Theatre parties and clothes and dances. Ellen at the right places."

"Oh, don't fuss so, Myra." Ellen was silent a moment and then said casually, "Jimmy Hunsenberger asked me to marry him last night."

"You didn't, Ellen! You didn't!" Myra's voice was a cry of reproach on Ellen's arm; her face was stiff with horror.

"No, I didn't accept him, if that's what you mean," Ellen said calmly. Ellen responded carelessly. She added, "It seems to me that you're actually glad I'm not going for failing in love, isn't that one of the things you're afraid of?"

She glanced innocently at her sister.

"Oh, Ellen, it's not that and you know it's not!" Myra protested helplessly. Half-laughing. "It's not that Tom Shannenberger can't even support himself. He has nothing now and never will have anything. He's just one of those men."

"I know that. Still if I loved him I don't believe I'd let it make any difference," Ellen said seriously.

A little pucker marked her low, broad forehead. Her eyes were sweet and thoughtful.

MADOC ROAD MUCH PITTED

Other Roads Have Not Suffered Heavily From Recent Snowfall

Roads in the territory surrounding this city have not suffered from the recent snow fall and are entirely clear of the drifts except for a few places where they pass through the walls made by cuts in some of the hills, which have allowed the snow to settle at a greater depth. This condition is due partly to the foresight shown by the department of highways in erecting the drift fences along the roads in sections formerly troubled by the drifts, and also by the fact, that the increasing traffic kept up all winter keeps the surface packed down by the wheels of the vehicles using the roads.

Near Madoc, and surrounding roads, as disclosed by a motor trip through that district Sunday, the snow falls seem to have been lighter than experienced in this city and near territory, those places observed were entirely bare; in the town of Madoc the fall did not seem to have averaged as much as it did further south. All roads in that district have been reported as excellent for all wheeled vehicles, but the warm sun for the past few days has prohibited the sleighs which were so much in evidence in the latter part of the week. The road surface itself on the way to Madoc is however, deeply pitted with innumerable holes.

DR. S. W. FALLIS DIES IN HOME

Book Steward of United Church For Many Years

Toronto, Feb. 8—Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Fallis, Book Steward and General Manager of the United Church Publishing House, and widely known in United Church circles, died last night in his home, 115 Constance Avenue, following a long illness.

The late Dr. Fallis was born on a farm in Haldimand County, Ontario, of Irish pioneer stock, in 1866. He was educated at the public schools of the county, the high schools and collegiates at Caledonia, Hamilton and Strathroy, and entered the ministry as a student preacher in 1889, filling pulpits at Bunbrook, St. Catharines and Niagara-on-the-Lake. He attended Victoria College in Toronto at this juncture, taking his theological course.

Afterward he occupied other pulpits in the Hamilton Conference notably College Avenue in Woodstock, later transferred to Toronto Conference, where he was minister at Woodgreen and Yonge Street Churches. In 1918 he was invited and moved to Central Methodist Church, Calgary. Here he had in his congregation such men as John Kerr, now Premier of Alberta; R. B. Bennett and W. M. Cushing. His Calgary pastorate was noted for his sympathy with labor interests and for the rebuilding of the church under particularly difficult circumstances after a disastrous fire.

In 1918, on the retirement of the late Rev. Dr. William Briggs, he was elected Book Steward of the Methodist Church; and in the following spring came to Toronto to assume his responsibilities. At Church Union in 1925 he was elected to head the publishing interests of the United Church.

Cars Collide At Intersection

A minor accident occurred on the intersection of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle street at about four-thirty o'clock Sunday afternoon when a large sedan going south on Pinnacle street failed to clear the crossing in time to escape a smaller, new sedan which was heading up the hill and suffered some damage to the right running board and rear fender.

The impact of the collision bent the front bumper of the smaller car out of shape and shook the occupants of the car up somewhat but no other damage was done, and after Constable Izzard had investigated the accident and had issued the brake action of both cars, the matter was left to the two parties concerned to adjust the damage between them.

Painful Piles

Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID—to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it not only relieves the affected parts and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal remedy can do this. So that's why salves and cutting fail. J. S. McKeown's Drug Store says HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.

CHILLING HORROR AND ICY MYSTERY IN "FRANKENSTEIN"

Universal's eerie "Frankenstein" starring Colin Clive, Mae Clarke, John Boles and Boris Karloff, is the feature offering at the Belle today, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily.

"Frankenstein" is described as an extraordinary story of a young scientist who brought a monster to life through weird electrical mechanisms and surgery. The story is based on the fantastic story and was written by Mary Shelley.

The wall of Universal City's "Chamber of horrors" is said to be well guarded, its secrets make-up room is now graced with another immortal of the greasepaint art, Boris Karloff.

Karloff's, fiendish, scientifically-created monster of "Frankenstein" has been accorded the place of honor in the mysterious little sanctuary by the little band of make-up experts who have given the screen its weirdest creatures. Bela Lugosi's "Dracula" autographs one of Lon Chaney's "Hunchback of Notre Dame;" his "Phantom of the Opera"; his diabolical chorine of "Outside the Law"; and his sinister cripple of "Shadows".

Bela Lugosi as "Dracula" occupies a prominent position on the wall as do the photographs of Mel Hamilton in his "The Cat Creeps" and Edward Arnold in the Charlie Young in "East is West". Owing to its sensationalism, the picture is not recommended for children, unless accompanied by an adult.

Bing Crosby, romantic singer of songs you love, and the "rejuvinating sensation of Radioland appears on the same program in a funny Mack Sennett comedy titled, "Dream Stories," a clever Mickey Mouse cartoon, another of the "Screen Souvenir" series, and Fox Sound News, will also be exhibited.

In winter the staple food for the Eskimo is boiled seal and walrus meat.

SHERLOCK HOLMES IS DELIGHTFUL

The opinion of those who saw "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" at the Capitol on Saturday, and there were crowded houses at each performance, was "excellent"!

Detective dramas, some bad, some good and some indifferent, have each in turn made their appearance on the screen, but in "Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" movie fans have the real thing—nothing more, nothing less, and as there is no substitute for quality, this picture is perfect in every detail. The direction is a pleasant diversion from the gum-chewing "Oh, Yeah!" and "Nerts" in the keynote of the story, a story which is bound to keep one guessing up to the last foot of film. It might be mentioned that the mother tongue is strange when spoken correctly and does not fail to cause a little amusement amongst those who have virtually become estranged to the Old Country, but when British films supplant the foreign productions, we shall begin to feel that there is something extremely nice and refreshing about the English tongue when spoken as it is spoke!"

However, idioms of speech add to the attractive powers of this film episode in the life of the greatest detective of all time.

The cast is excellently roled, and the feminine interest brilliantly depicted. Every absorbing scene to the net result is—a picture you will like.

"Sherlock Holmes' Fatal Hour" plays the Capitol today and Thursday and will be followed on Wednesday with Wheeler and Woolsey, the inimitable pair of clowns, in "Peach O' Reno."

A special matinee for school children (adults welcome) will be held at the Capitol on Wednesday at 4.30 —ten cents admission and matron in charge.

GERMANY ENDORSES DISARMAMENT PLAN

Germany is Pledged to Full Disarmament Says Chancellor Bruening

Cheers Greet Expressions of German Spokesman at Conference

GERMAN VIEW

United States Ready to Consider Limitations on Materials

(By George Hambleton)
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 9. (Canadian Press Cable)—Over an assembly of sixty nations unusual applause broke out as Chancellor Heinrich Bruening of Germany mounted the platform and argued before the world disarmament conference today there should be "one disarmament law for all."

Chancellor Bruening immediately followed the speech of Hugh S. Gibson, who laid the United States' thesis on disarmament before the conference. The German spokesman declared that Germany in effect had already disarmed under the treaty of Versailles; thus others should follow suit.

U.S. Case Presented

Yesterday the conference heard the British and French cases. Today the United States case was presented by Mr. Gibson, chief of the United States delegation, speaking with quiet decision. Aristera, Mr. Gibson emphasized, was prepared to consider any form of military limitation and reduction which promised real progress towards a lessing of international security.

But interest even greater than that accorded any of his predecessors, greeted Chancellor Bruening. Speaking almost on the heels of Andre Tardieu, French premier, who yesterday urged the League should be empowered to enforce peace, Chancellor Bruening declared:

General Disarmament

"The German government and the German people claim their own disarmament should be followed by general disarmament. Germany has a moral and legal claim which no one has denied. The German people look to this conference for a solution of the question of general disarmament on a basis of equality with the moral security for all peoples".

Any could not accept a real basis of departure from the draft disarmament convention prepared by the last preparatory disarmament committee, Chancellor Bruening indicated. The convention had failed page, he admitted. It presented essential points in silence. And the German delegation reserved the right at the proper time to submit proposals to remedy the situation.

Constant Applause

It was evident from time the German Chancellor had many sympathizers of his own tongue in the public galleries. He was given a formal and emphatized this point or that, there were constant bursts of applause. One woman sympathizer in the public gallery was so excited when the Chancellor concluded that she fainted. Even as a woman "I had a dream," she shouted in German, "but unkindly attendants (Continued from page seven)

Mystery of Lost Schooner Cleared

Marshfield, Ore. Feb. 9— Mystery surrounding the disappearance last September of the auxiliary schooner Coast Trader was cleared, the Coos Bay Times said in a copyrighted article by discovery of a message dropped to the sea by one of the crew of 19.

The paper, said the message, scrawled on a piece of wrapping paper, and enclosed in a catsup bottle, read:

"S.S. South Coast going down after collision with steamer. Rough seas. 9.10 p.m. Good bye."

The Times said the bottle was picked up by Mrs. Goldier Nagle of Charleston, near the south jetty of the Coos Bay bar.

Japanese Minister Refuses British Truce Plan

AVERT FRICTION

U. S. Infantry Taking Instruction From Scots

—Take on Patrol

(By Morris J. Harris)

Shanghai, Feb. 9—Machine gun bullets whined across the Kiangwan race track late today and aerial bombs were dropping between there and Woosung as the Japanese attacked a large Chinese detachment throwing up defensive works behind the Woosung forts.

A powder magazine in the Woosung area this afternoon, causing a terrific explosion and raising a column of black smoke which spread over the countryside. Nervousness in the British held on.

British Truce Effort

Vice-Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, commander of the British forces, acted to bring about peace during the day by proposing a truce and an immediate end to hostilities. Minister Shigemitsu, Japanese minister to China, told him the offensive would continue until the Chinese were driven back 20 miles from Shanghai. The truce proposal had previously been accepted in principle by the Chinese.

Up on the northern settlement boundary the United States Infantry after taking lessons yesterday from the British patrol from the Scots, took over the patrol.

Avoiding Friction

Japanese headquarters said they had instructed commanders of all their land and naval forces to avoid all causes for friction with other foreign troops, to maintain the most friendly relations with all foreign garrisons and to be most careful for the safety of foreign civilians.

Today's wounded in the settlement Reuter's Shanghai correspondent says. On Saturday Dr. Lore Rankin of Eversteiner, Texas, an instructor in the Central University, was slightly wounded in the arm by a splinter from a Japanese air bomb.

OLYMPIC TRIALS FOR HAMILTON

Vancouver Unable to Meet Financial Requirements

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 9—Inability to meet financial requirements required has forced Vancouver to surrender the Olympic trials to Hamilton, They will be held in the Ontario city which also staged them in 1928.

J. H. Roaf, President of the Vancouver Amateur Athletic Association, last night informed the British Columbia Branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada that the association had decided it would not be feasible to stage the games in Vancouver this year. Decision of the local association to give up plans for the games followed three days of stubborn effort to stage them.

Tourists Have Gala Time Watching War at Woosung

Shanghai, Feb. 9.—(AP)— The "war" at Shanghai may be a pushin for statesmen, but for tourists who come here regularly it is something to write to the home folks about.

All steamship companies are maintaining regular service, in spite of the fighting in Shanghai. The steamers pass almost within a stone's throw of the Woosung forts. The they come up to the river to Shanghai.

Sidney Reeve Representative to Ont. Agricultural Council

Arthur L. Burke Attends Meeting Called By Minister

40 PRESENT

A new organization dedicated to the betterment of rural conditions throughout the province, was brought into being at a meeting held in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, on Thursday, at the call of Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture. Over 40 representatives of counties throughout the Province were in attendance and matters of vital importance pertaining to agriculture were discussed from every angle. Never before, in the history of the Province has a Minister of Agriculture shown such a keen desire to meet the farmers face to face to obtain first hand information relative to rural problems, and to hear from the farmers themselves the methods that will have to be employed in order to relieve the difficult situation affecting agriculture. The discussion at time became very heated as representatives from various counties presented their particular problems. "Taxation" "Mortgages", "Milk and live stock prices to farmers" "reforestation, "Trucking" "Old Age Penalons" "Mothers' Allowance" "Indigent Patients" "Hospitals" "County Fairs" "Highways" "Reduction of salaries and expenditures," in fact everything touching the farmer. It was pointed out that farmers all over the province who had purchased farms when prices were high, are now faced with ruinous prices for farm products, increasing taxes and heavy mortgage payments to meet. Something must be done and done quickly if the farmer is to remain on the farms and the basic industry of this Province maintained.

The new organization, The Agricultural Council of Ontario" will meet at stated intervals during the year and problems arising from time to time will be discussed and dealt with by the council as a whole.

Representatives will be named from each of 32 counties in the Province.

The officers elected were—President—H. D. Glover, Vice President J. J. Thompson, Secretary-Treasurer J. R. McLachlan, Directors—L. H. Rader, Simcoe; F. F. Acton, North umberland; A. D. Robinson, Oxford; H. O. Taylor, Elgin; and Jas. Ronan, Elgin.

It is expected that when this council begins to function, with the government lending its aid, many of the problems affecting agriculture will be dealt with in a manner satisfactory to the farmer.

JAP WARSHIPS FIRE ON WOOSUNG

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (AP)—Japanese warships concentrated a furious fire on Woosung forts this afternoon and ons of their projectiles blew up a fort powder magazine, but the Chinese defenders continued to cling to their defenses.

Despite the assurance of Mayor Wu Te-Chen (above), Mayor of Shanghai, that he would comply with all Japanese demands, marines from Mitpponese ships in the harbor landed in the native quarter of the city and continue to wage warfare against the Chinese in the native section.

Battle Ceases But Coolie Makes Coffins

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (AP)—A deathlike silence hung over the Hongkew No Man's Land late this afternoon as the fierce battle between the Chinese and the Japanese lulled.

Suddenly the grating screech of an enabled saw split the air. Coolies at the empty streets. Surprised at any sign of activity in the circumstances, the Associated Press correspondent set out to trace the ghastly sound.

He came upon a Chinese coolie calmly sawing rough boards into six-foot lengths. "What are you doing?" the Coolie was asked.

"Making coffins," he said, without concern.

WANTS PLOT INVESTIGATED

Alleged Designs on Life of Russian Envoy Made

Geneva, Feb. 9—An alleged plot to assassinate Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff while he was attending the world disarmament conference was laid before the Secretariat of the League of Nations yesterday with a request for an investigation.

People's Commissar Krestinsky charged that Georges Ladygenski, President of the Russian Red Cross under the late Czar Nicholas, was conspiring with a group of Russian emigres in Paris to end Litvinoff's life. At the direction of the Swiss government, police were checking the accusation.

Fire on Forts Dip Flags to Salute Ships

Shanghai, Feb. 9 (AP)—Japanese warships mixed their shells of gunfire at the forts of Woosung with polite salutes to passing foreign ships today, dipping their flags, released their last guns with blanks, and fired salutes.

As soon as the foreign warships passed, they gave the command to resume firing, and turned their instruments of death with renewed fury at the Chinese defenses. Passing commercial vessels also merited a vessel firing of polite until they had passed.

EX-FINANCE MINISTER OF JAPAN KILLED

Shot Down By Three Bullets as He Leaves Motor

MOTIVE UNKNOWN

Yuko. Hamaguchi Was Strongest Man in Party

Tokyo, Feb. 9 (AP) — Junnosuke Inouye, former Finance Minister in the late Wakatsuki Cabinet, was shot and killed at 9 o'clock tonight by an assailant.

The former Finance Minister was struck by three bullets from the assailant's pistol.

He was shot as he got down from his automobile to make an address in an election campaign in support of a friend who is a candidate in one of the wards in Tokyo.

The assailant was arrested immediately. He was identified as Tadashi Kondo.

Motive is Mystery

The motive for the crime was not known.

Next to Yuko Hamaguchi, who died last August of an assassin's bullet, Mr. Inouye who twice served as finance minister, was regarded as the strongest man in the Minseito party.

Reijiro Wakatsuki succeeded Hamaguchi as premier and head of the party, but his elevation was considered a temporary expedient and Inouye was expected to become the party chief and premier whenever the leadership question was ripe for settlement. He was to be 65 on February 20th.

During his last term as minister of finance he fought hard to keep Japan on the gold standard, and when that standard was at last abandoned until the Minseito went out with the recent cabinet reorganization.

23 PILOTS ARE DISCHARGED

Balked on Salary Reduction of Almost 50 Percent

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 9—The 23 pilots of the Century Air Lines were discharged today and the plane schedule was interrupted at least temporarily as the result of a wage dispute.

The pilots had balked at a salary reduction, which they said amounted to almost fifty per cent, and had made unanimous demands to negotiate with the Century management.

Pilots of the Century Air Lines, which is jointly controlled by the United States air passengers and express division to strike at midnight tomorrow unless new wage schedules accepted by the company are abandoned.

They demand, officials of the air lines said today, that the old salary of $350 a month. The new schedule guarantees $150 as the monthly minimum and gives them $3 an hour for day and $5 an hour for night flying.

STRUCK BY BOMB

Allahabad, India, Feb. 9 — Three policemen and five civilians were seriously hurt today by a bomb thrown by a Hindu fanatic at Mrs. Jawaharlal Nehru, wife of the Congress president, at Azamgarh, 100 miles from here.

Improved Quality and Quantity of Broadcast Come Under Discussion

Mayor of Shanghai

Best Possible Broadcasting Service is Needed Says Duranleau

DIVIDED OPINION

Nationalization One of Problems Facing Ottawa Government

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 9 (By The Canadian Press)—The government will now consider as speedily as possible the demands recently presented by the Canadia Radio League and its supporters for steps to improve the quality and quantity of broadcasting Canada, Hon. Alfred Duranleau, Minister of Marine, stated today, on notice that the Quebec appeal against federal control of radio had been dismissed by the Privy Council.

"We want to give the best possible broadcasting service," Duranleau said, "but there is divided opinion on the question of nationalization. The matter will have to be given very careful consideration. I will take it up with Cabinet at the earliest possible date and will, if possible, have the question before parliament. But whether or not there will be able to reach the subject at the present session, will go much important business in hand and the Imperial Conference coming to Ottawa, is not certain."

Nationalization Discussed

The urge for nationalization comes from very influential circles, the minister said. On the other hand, there had been developed a strong feeling in other quarters that radio broadcasting is a private hands but under strict control. The question will be given study both angles very closely," he said.

Since the Aird report was brought down the number of reporting sets in Canada has been doubled so the increased license fees recommended in that time may be modified. There are now about, 650,000 receiving sets licensed in Canada.

Quebec, Feb. 9—Not having read the official text of the Privy Council's decis'on conforming a Canadian Supreme Court ruling that radio control in Canada was vested in the Dominion Parliament, Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec, would not comment on the findings of that body today.

EXPECT BRIEF, BRISK SESSION

Prov. Legislature Opens Tomorrow By Sir Wm. Mulock

Toronto, Feb. 9.—With expectations of a brief but brisk session, legislators of Ontario are gathering here today for the opening of the Provincial Parliaments tomorrow by Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice, who since the retirement of Hon. W. D. Ross from the Lieutenant-Governorship has been acting as administrator, will read the Speech from the Throne, and the decks will be cleared for action.

The government is expected to outline a strong programme of retrenchment, increased taxation, and Hydro matters. A strong belief prevails that there will be an increase in the gasoline and amusement taxes. Attempted taxation of public development of power is also rumored.

The standing of the House at present is as follows:

Conservatives	90
Liberals	15
Progressives	1
United Farmers	1
Labor	1
Total	112

Mother Perishes With 5 Children

Hazelton, Pa., Feb. 9— Five small children and their mother were burned to death today in a fire which destroyed their home at Tracksow, five miles south of Hazelton.

The mother was Mrs. Carmen Ramanelli. She ran to the street to give the alarm and then rushed into the building to save her children. She never returned.

The dead children were: Rena 10; Betty 7; Marguerite 4; Joseph 9; and Ralph 6 months.

Prince of Wales May Open Imperial Economic Parley

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will open the Imperial Economic Conference here on July 18, if information from seemingly authoritative sources proves correct.

The gathering representing every unit in the British Empire is likely to prove the most momentous ever seen in the Dominion capital, and it is understood that strong representations have been made by the Canadian Government to have the Prince represented at its inauguration.

While no official announcement has been made, it is understood that the Prince has indicated he will be able to attend. Whether his reported visit to Canada will give him the opportunity of visiting his western ranch or of accepting invitations from other parts of the Dominion is not as yet known.

LENT BEGINS ON WEDNESDAY

Shrove Tuesday Observed in Christian World

Lent begins at midnight to-night —eight days earlier than in 1931 and one of the earliest dates for this period for many years. When the last stroke of the town clock rings out in the air at twelve o'clock to-night a 40-day period of fasting preparatory to the Festival of Easter commences. Easter falls on Sunday, March 27. Today is Shrove Tuesday—the Tuesday before Ash Wednesday, and thus belongs to the days of preparation for Lent. The name refers to the fact that it was time for "shrift" or confession before the Lenten abstinences. The pancakes appropriate to the day are the sole survival of the merry-making with which it was once celebrated in much more characteristic fashion than at the present day.

The French observe the evening holiday—Mardi Gras—as carnival or Shrove Tuesday. Young people make a feature of Halloween or the holiday, dressing up for the occasion, visiting friends and attending dances.

Churches in all parts of the country will celebrate the Lenten season by holding special services throughout the 40-day period.

The word Lent, which originally meant Spring, is derived from the fact that the holiday falls in the early part of the year, thus through custom it became confused with the season and gradually the word itself was accepted for its present use.

The fast was made to last 40 days early in the seventh century. In the middle ages meat, milk and eggs were not only prohibited by Lent by ecclesiastical authorities, but also by statute law.

At all Roman Catholic and Anglican churches special ceremonies will mark the first day of Lent, Wednesday morning. Masses will be sung and ashes will be deposited on the foreheads of those attending.

LINCOLN IS HOLD SERVICE ROTARYTHEME FOR MARINERS

Birthday of Famous Civil War President is Commemorated

"Lincoln's Birthday," February 12 will be observed as a public holiday in the United States of America, but all over the world admirers of Abraham Lincoln, martyred president of the United States, will pay respect to his memory on the occasion of his birthday anniversary. The Belleville Rotary Club paid due respect to the memory of Abraham Lincoln at their regular meeting Monday when a most inspiring and different address upon the life and influence of Lincoln was given by Owen Hartley, manager of Chamber of Commerce, who graphically sketched Lincoln's life from his log cabin humble surroundings in that little log cabin in Kentucky, his family moving west to with pride and apparently no future of consequence to look forward to, the Abe Lincoln who trod the path to fame. He told how Lincoln's national martyred hero with resolution and determination overcame his struggle for knowledge, beginning with a library of many volumes, headed by the Book of all Books, the Bible, and including Shakespeare, Burns, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, Aesop's Fables, and their influence upon his character and career were described. The death of his mother, his second father and her loving care, the removal to Indiana, family to Illinois, where Abe's hard fights for an education and a lawyer's degree, studying before the fire light and the open fireplace in the time before coal oil lights and electricity, and when even candles were an expensive luxury. His friendship formed in a few weeks in the little red schoolhouse at the age of his maturing experience, his final arrival at the bar, his entry into politics, his prolong and stormy road which led to the presidential chair, all the fascinating story of his life was told that there could be no lasting union of a nation divided, and if save, half free, and who pledged himself to hit this divided nation, half slavery just as hard as he possibly could when the time arrived, was vividly described by the speaker simply and earnestly, holding the rapped attention of his hearers. The battle of Gettysburg was pictured and the national park and military cemetery which now commemorate this decisive battle of the Civil War, during which Lincoln's immortal speech on the occasion of the dedication of a monument to the memory of "The Great Emancipator" was created on the very spot on which he made that memorable speech, which although only of two minutes duration, has survived the ravages of seventy-odd years and remains today an example of masterly diction, soundness and expression, when other notable speeches of long duration have passed into the discard from the public mind.

Lincoln's unpopularity during the first two years of the war for the Union cause of the North seemed almost a lost cause and then was nothing but death, disaster add debt in the South Penn news of the day, was sketched by the speaker, and contrasted with his later appreciation as the Man of the Hour and a national hero. Lincoln's closing chapter of his earthly life, the shot in the theatre by a fanatical partisan of the lost cause of the South, his great work done, Lincoln closed his eyes on a life of sadness and sorrowfulness, and opened them in a better world where there are no misunderstandings, but only seconds of heart and body are healed.

Arrest Three Men After Disturbance

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 9—Police arrested three persons yesterday, when a disturbance broke out in front of the City Hall, while leaders of the United Front Unemployment conference appeared before Mayor W. J. Stewart and city council and presented demands. The trio, William Smith, 43; Ethel Kalbertrice, 26, and Agnis Beligo 30 were charged with obstructing police.

The disorder was quelled within a short time. It followed refusal of police to permit some 600 members of the United Front conference to accompany leaders into the City Hall for the meeting with council.

France to Refute German Figures

Paris, Feb. 9—Premier Laval told the German Ambassador today that Germany has not paid the full cost of rebuilding French areas devastated during the war and that the French government intends to publish a refutation of the recently issued German reparations figures.

MARRIED

Deseronto, Feb. 9—Terribly burned when she came in contact with a small stove in an upstairs room Sunday afternoon, Ruth Mae Ireland, 2½ year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos Asselstine, of Deseronto, died in the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston, late on Sunday night.

The little girl had been in the upstairs room at her home, while her mother was downstairs, and the father outside. There were no matches in the room, and it is believed that the child got too close to the stove, with the result that her clothing caught fire. Her screams brought her parents to the scene, and a pail of water was used to try and extinguish the flames as they enveloped the girl, but her clothing was completely burned off.

Through the generosity of friends a collection was taken at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, but it was found that her injuries were most severe, and she died about midnight.

The little girl is survived by her parents and eight brothers and sisters, all of them being quite young. The father is in receipt of a very small pension.

Estimate 8 Millions Saved Through 10% Cut in Officials' Salary

Slash Is Effective From Premier to Humblest Official

REFUSES REQUEST

Opposition Leader Demands Parliament Be Consulted

OTTAWA, Feb. 9. — A ten per cent. cut in all Government salaries and indemnities, starting on April 1 and affecting every one, from Premier down to the humblest office boy in the civil service, was announced last night in the House of Commons by Premier Bennett.

To a chamber pent up with the excitement of a lashing, all-day debate the Prime Minister, without fuss or an hour of adjournment last night, declared that a statute embodying the sweeping salary cut, estimated to save the country between $7,500,000 and $8,000,000 a year, would be introduced at the present session of parliament.

Cabinet Ministers, Senators, members of the House of Commons and all persons in the civil service will be equally affected. The sole exception is the judiciary, whose salaries, the Premier intimated, cannot be changed.

Brief Announcement

This startling announcement, affecting the incomes of 50,000 Canadians, came in the brief sentences of the one-hour speech with which the Prime Minister closed the three-and-a-hour effort of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader. The Premier drew no fine lines in the wording of the cut, contenting himself with the blunt announcement that "the Hon. M.P.'s who had an intimation of the proposal will be prepared on morning, pounded their desks and cheered the loudest.

With this important declaration, the Premier coupled an equally momentous announcement that the Imperial Conference Waterway negotiations. The negotiations were proceeding favorably, he said, but faced by the threat of the all-American canal, which would, New York state, Canada had been forced to make a quick decision. "We are not hurrying the St. Lawrence Waterway treaty," he asserted. "But all we have to do is to look at the map and see the Welland Canal and visualize the 27-foot canal which can be built through Albany, and you know why the Canadian Government is negotiating."

There are occasions in the life of nations as well as in the fate of individuals when opportunities must be taken at the flood.

Illog Proposal Negatived

The Premier flatly negatived the proposal of Leader Bennett that the St. Lawrence treaty should be submitted to Parliament before it is signed on behalf of Canada. Never in the whole history of this country has any document been signed by the Crown "nor ever will be submitted in this House or the Senate," he asserted, any other part of the British Empire before it is a completed instrument."

Turning to the railway question and the Duff Royal Commission, Mr. Bennett declared that there never had been any true basis of judgment for "foisting" on this country such a three transcontinental railway system as there is today prior to the formation of the Canadian National System. "That is done now," he said, "and this Government will deal with it."

Mr. Bennett wondered if the House realized the magnitude of the railway problem. "The year, he said, the taxpayers would have to provide slightly more than $70,000,000 on behalf of the C.N.R. "Is it any wonder," he asked, "that the cry is being given from the floor of the Duff Commission?"

As for the working of the commission, the Government has the little to do with this as has any member of the Opposition he declared. No Government has been given the commission. It was left free to investigate and present its view of the problem.

SENTENCED FOR THEFT

Brockville, Feb. 9.—Pleading guilty to the theft of a fur-trimmed cloth coat and a pair of old gloves belonging to Mrs. Clare Gardiner, Maitlandtown, at a dance held in Mallorytown, Feb. 2, Mrs. Dorothy Josephine Pero, of Brockville, was sentenced one year in the Mercer Reformatory by Magistrate Wright in Police Court this morning. The coat and gloves were returned to the owner by order of the court.

Consigned as "Coil Springs" All Taken

St. Thomas, Ont., Feb. 9.—Liquor estimated to be worth $5,000 was seized yesterday when police confiscated eight seafaring cases in the railway yards here. The liquor consisted of more than 1,000 bottles, was consigned as "coil springs" to "Thomas Roche" of St. Thomas from the "Acme Hardware Company of Montreal." Police believe both names are fictitious. The liquor came here with a carload of other goods from Montreal.

"Contract Record" Discusses Chlorination of Water

Each Municipality Has Its Own "Separate Method to Follow

ECONOMY QUESTION

No Apologies For Forming This Committee

According to the February issue of the Contract Record, Belleville water commissioners have recently faced with the pronounced medical taste following chlorination of the water in this city.

"Taste purifications presents one of the greatest problems in water purifications at the present time, but within the past four years great progress has been made in the control and removal than in connection with any other treatment process. There would seem to be a general tendency to state that most of this type of taste is associated with chlor.phenols," stated the Record, "whereas it is evident that cases little industrial waste matter is discharged into the water used for consumption. Unfortunately filtration seems to intensify taste conditions, due partly to the advantage coming into contact with taste producing substances, and partly because in raw water use up some of the chlorine before it has time to react with offending matter present and the residual chlorine may not be sufficient to cause taste. In filtered water the chlorine reacts directly on the taste forming substances which are not removed by filtration.

"The chief causes are decomposing vegetable growths and industrial trade wastes. Both of these may cause a similar type of taste variously described as midicated, chemical, iodoformish or chloro-phenol. Generally speaking, it is often possible to determine the cause. Where taste is caused by excessive vegetable growths, there is little increase in the chlorine absorption whereas when caused by phenols, the chlorine is rapidly used up necessitating a great increase in applied chlorine. In well water supplies, the cause is often obscure but this water, and further, that the taste producing agent is as near normal as in the summer season.

Mrs. Howard Cook has received word of the serious affliction of her son Ralph, who is ill with the flu. The sympathy of the community is extended to both.

CANADIANS WIN AT LAKE PLACID

Hockey Team Defeats Germany 5 to 0 to Keep Lead

FOURTH VICTORY

Lake Placid, Feb. 9—Prowess of Canadian athletes claimed further attention last night as the fifth day of the Winter Olympic sports came to a close.

Still undefeated in the four games played, Canada's hockey representatives, won easily over Germany last night 5 to 0, to retain the lead in the round robin tourney that will determine the world championship.

Women skaters from the Dominion make their first appearance yesterday and in the exhibition event Miss Jean Wilson of Toronto, only skated a strong field to win the 500 metres race.

Canada placed third in the final of the men's 10,000 metres speed skating race, Frank Stack of Wilmington, finishing strongly behind Irving Jaffee of the United States and Ivar Ballangrud of Norway. Alex. Hurd of Kenilworth, Ill., was winner of his heat, was unable yesterday to break through for his sprint and was seventh.

Canada Must Face Sterling

Montgomery Wilson, of Toronto, was the lone Canadian to deal with McGrath in the first heat of the figure skating competition which got under way yesterday with a number of school figures, which Wilson performed with grace and ease.

The degree team of Mispah R. No. 127, Foxboro, visited Carmel R. No. 3 on Thursday, and exemplified a degree of work on a class of candidates.

A number of the rate payers of this line attended the different sessions of the county council last week.

Mrs. Verna Peacock took tea with Mrs. Mary Bartlett and Nellie, Belleville, last Friday.

Mrs. C. H. Wilson spent last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bird, Foxboro.

Mrs. Jas. Lake, Miss Mollie Longwell and Miss Vera Rose, attended the W.M.S. convention held in St. Andrew's Church, Trenton.

Messrs. Reid and B. Mills, assessors for Sidney township, have made their calls on this line.

Miss Irene Rose, Glen Hill, was the guest of Miss Rhea McCullough, recently.

Mr. Geo. Ridley of this line is receiving congratulations on the old maid's bars on the fourth line.

The drama presented by the people of the United Church, in the Presbyterian church Wallbridge, was well attended and much appreciated.

The snow storm is a great help to the farmers to handle wood and logs, also for the sleighing.

Mr. A. Moore is helping Mr. B. Mills for a few weeks.

The Layman's banquet held in the United Church, Foxboro, Feb. 4th, was well attended in spite of the severe snow storm.

The funeral of the late George Vincent was attended by a number of the Orangemen of L.O.L. No. 2, Foxboro.

NORTH HASTINGS

West Huntingdon—The ice problem for this and doubtless other places too, has indeed became a serious and anxious theme. By this time in other years, ice houses were replenished to capacity. This year to date the rivers still flow, while the lakes and ponds are rippling with gentle breezes that blow from the south. One may well ask: "When will the summer end and the winter begin?"

Mrs. Truscott returned from a visit to Napanee to see her father who is ill, and she reports there are no encouraging signs of any immediate improvement.

It is indeed a matter of profound thankfulness that the children in this and neighboring public schools often secure but this type of supply has been found to be the easiest to treat.

"The most difficult types of water to treat are those using up large quantities of chlorine. Treatment consists of super-chlorination followed by de-chlorination, pre-ammoniation of water before application of chlorine, super-chlorination followed by filtration through activated carbon, activated carbon filtration alone and the application of powdered activated carbon to water before filtration. Taste caused by vegetable growths and algal growth can be almost always eliminated by super chlorination and pre-ammoniation."

The latter treatment is the simplest and the cheapest, and is the one followed in this city by the manager of the water works.

The Record goes on—"Latterly powdered activated carbon has in some instances replaced pre-ammoniation, it being effective and easy to control. Tastes caused by industrial trade wastes containing phenols or cresols are the most difficult, and uncertain to treat. Super-chlorination is effective when applied sufficiently high, which is sometimes difficult and costly. Pre-ammoniation is much more effective in filtered than unfiltered water, but when ammonia has been reported there have been some notable failures. But there is no set rule to treat water for taste prevention and each municipality has a different problem to solve and the most economical method must be worked out."

NAMES SHOULD COUNT

The presentation of petitions before the League of Nations bearing the names of eight million women alone and of many millions of people in all parts of the earth was no mere gesture. It came from the hearts of millions who were but representative of other millions upon millions of men and women who want no more war.

As one of the spokesmen stated on Saturday at Geneva, war does not do anything, except to suppress. It does not stop war but leaves national wounds which can never be healed.

At this time when hostilities without declaration of war are proceeding along the eastern part of China, the League of Nations Disarmament Conference is in session. At this time these millions of signatures are presented which have been signed within the last few months.

In the way of life, these two great events are staged at one and the same time.

Many believe that the ultimate result no matter what the intermediate future may be for the League, will be that not the League but the principle of war as a means of settlement of disputes will be discredited. While the delegates meet, men are dying and wealth is being poured away and men realize that the end of the whole matter is that war is a ghastly tragedy.

DIFFICULTIES AS SPUR

Dr. Mary E. Woolley, first United States woman to sit with diplomats at an international conference, was quoted in the press at Geneva stated that she believed the very difficulties of the present time in the world would be an inspiration to the disarmament conference. She also voiced the view that "women rush in where diplomats fear to tread and that they will make the world a better place to live in. The ideal of peace, despite doubters is making great progress and I feel sure that when the labors of this conference are ended we shall have taken a great step forward."

Whether disarmament comes by women rushing in where diplomats fear to tread or not, the world evidently longs for peace as pleased from the many representations of the views of France and Britain before the conference on Monday.

WATER

Toronto Globe notes that water from the historic well of Evangeline at Grand Pre Nova Scotia has been taken to Newport News, Virginia, for the christening of a boat. Boyne water has also travelled it remarks to many parts of the world.

Water from the river Jordan was brought to Belleville many years ago and a few drops were saved and used in memorable christenings and baptisms in the city of Belleville.

The association of great events with localities, soil, streams and wells is a common characteristic of man. Human interest enriches the spot and it becomes in a sense "home" to millions though they are far away.

MAKING MILLIONS

Three plays through filming rights have brought Noel Coward, author and producer more than two million dollars.

Coward is one of the most striking men of this age. Only thirty two he is already a millionaire. He is a man of a thousand gifts. Seven years ago he wrote his first successful play and fourteen more have followed besides operettas and revues. His late "Cavalcade" has been stirring London with its patriotic turn and the giant scale of the production.

The author is a man of great versatility. He is gay and clever in the finest English sense of the world. He is actor and dancer, writer of plays and songs.

DICKENS' BIRTHDAY

Charles Dickens' one hundred and twentieth birthday was celebrated on Sunday with more than a passing thought. It is just about a century ago that this brilliant novelist started to write. The next years added to his fame as a human writer whose sympathies were so keen that his contact with life lives in every line he ever wrote.

Dickens did not start life with means and his early years were years of sadness and disappointment and hard labor. Yet out of this ill-sorted parcel of circumstances came the works which entitle him in the minds of many readers to the title of the greatest of the writers in the novel form in the English language.

Sympathy, humor, and a sense of mission as Dickens possessed are among the chief assets any young man entering upon life's possibilities can possess.

Prospects of new taxes in Ontario give the people something to think about. Realization that increases have to come has dawned on people with the knowledge that large sums of money have had to be spent in looking after unemployment and similar problems such as roadbuilding to give work.

RIDERS ON THE SUNSET ROAD

This world is a road and man's put in the saddle
And given a horse upon which he must straddle.
Some horses are stalwart, some weak in the knees,
And others are balky and go as they please.
Some go best by coaxing, some need a whipping hand,
But all ride to wherever all over the land.
Each man waves a banner to show when unfurled
The kind of a rider he is in the world.

Some men gallop madly, and some jog along,
And here one is weeping, here one sings a song,
And here one has fallen from off his old nag,
(Come, give him a leg-up and wipe off his rag).
And each must ride forward and never go back,
Though he ride a rare blood or a broken-down hack!
Each rider must learn just what pace suits his beast,
When he's learning to ride on the road to the West.

And when he has come to the set of the sun,
'Twill not matter greatly how fast he has run,
'Twill not be important what luggage he carried,
If he conveyed alone or with good comrades carried.
When he reaches the fort at the end of the day,
And the Gate-keeper helps him climb down from his horse,
All he'll ask for his toll is that he's played the man,
And ridden the West Road the best that he can.

FIFTY YEARS AGO this month, on the fifteenth to be exact, one of those important events in a man's life occurred—he got married. Thursday the same man was in Belleville shopping and finding a friendly ear in a Front street druggist, ventured to reminiscence a bit. Said he: "I remember fifty years ago, February 15, the day I was married. My brother and I drove from Trenton to Napanee where I was married and went on to Ottawa where the same remarkable weather prevailed. In fact the store doors were open and the clerks worked in their shirt sleeves. Another fact I remember of that winter; there was an ice famine, and that was long before the days of artificial ice so ice scarcity was a real vexing problem. Cheese factories were putting up ice and nine inches thick and you know how long that would last. So when folks tell me that the weather this winter is somewhat unusual I just goes back to the winter when I was married, fifty years ago, and know that weather history is just repeating itself—that's all."

Cromwell said, "Love your neighbor, me boy, and all that stuff, but keep your powder dry, or something to that effect, and perhaps it will be best to go slowly until the virus of universal peace has taken permanent hold on all nations, so that no such flareups will occur as is just now painting such a lurid picture of mud and blood in Mukden and Shanghai.

IMMUNITY TO TUBERCULOSIS

The importance of the discovery of a vaccine that will provide immunity against tuberculosis can scarcely be over-estimated. If its discovery has proven as effective as the results of the tests made over a long period by Dr. Henry Sphahlinger and reported in a recent announcement made in London, it is conceivable that the world will be freed of the white plague in a few generations.

Great progress has been made in the treatment of the disease within recent years. Success or the Sphahlinger formula, of course, would make it possible to stop it out entirely. The vaccine has been declared free of risk to the human beings because it contains no living microorganisms, and it can be made available to physicians at trifling cost.

Dr. Spahlinger, who has spent a large portion of his life on this work has made public the formula that he has developed, his opinion expressed by eminent English medical men is highly encouraging. Further pronouncements will therefore be awaited with the greatest interest. That the optimism of Dr. Spahlinger is justified the civilized world will be one of the most epoch-making in all medical history.— Toronto Telegram.

FRAILTY EXPOSED BY RESEARCH

The importance of scientific research to industry is strongly emphasized in the annual report of the British Department of Scientific and Industrial Research. After dealing with the application of new industrial methods the report says:

"One of the discoveries made is that the airplane in which the journey may make the material wear out more quickly than anticipated, and if a staled, while themselves unaffected, to stage performance may be quite incapable of inducing very rapid attack by the bleach liquor on the cotton on which they are printed. The practical consequence of this is that in a threatened failure of the crop the stripe dyed with such a color might disappear in wear. With a mixture of cellulose, leather, rubber, and wool, all in suitable form, very little product has been made which strongly resembles leather. A new process for the bleaching of wool has proved most successful. Some of the largest manufacturers who have adopted this process, it is pointed out, have found that flannel garments laundered 12 times have come up whiter than in their original state. Paper has been made of the King's interest in the linen industry, and in the year 1930 three acres of land at the Royal estates at Sandringham have been devoted to the growing of flax. The linen manufactured from this flax was to be used in the Royal household."

The work of the department costs over £500,000 a year. It has been urged on many occasions that research states that the expenditure which is its dedication to the national interest depends on the extent to which industry generally is prepared to apply scientific knowledge.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

TOO FAT AT 22

Lost 19 lbs.—And Backache

"I am 22 years of age, and I weighed 163 lbs. I had pains in the back and head. I didn't feel like doing anything. When my friend told me to try Kruschen Salts I would not believe that I was sick of taking stuff. But since I tried Kruschen only six months ago I have lost 19 lbs., and feel a different woman. I am very grateful to Mrs. ——— who recommended Kruschen Salts."—(Mrs.)

The condition which caused this woman to put on overweight was due to excess of her backache and headaches. The whole trouble was that the liver was inactive and failing to expel from the body, regularly and completely, the waste products of digestion.

The six salts of Kruschen assist the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day the wastage and poisons that encumber the system. Then, little by little, that ugly fat goes—slowly, yes—but surely. The backache and headaches disappear. You feel wonderfully healthy, youthful and energetic—more so than ever before in your life.

Heard On The Street

Not long ago a little article came into the office from some one back in the rural district. It had been hurriedly scribbled on wrapping paper, and the writing was almost illegible. Most of the article consisted of the names of those who had participated in some building or other and were names of people who were not known to any of the staff in the office. Anyhow the little news item was edited, set up and in due course it appeared in an issue of the paper. It had received the same care that anything else that comes into the office does, and had been checked two or three times for accuracy, but when the item did appear in the paper that was read by a subscriber whose name had been connected with the little item that had been sent in, the name was found to be wrongly spelled. A telephone call came the next morning from the subscriber who felt sure a correction in the item and the correction also appeared in an issue following. Even though that name had been spelled wrong on the line where supplied to the office, as proved when the copy had been checked, the paper felt that a correction was in order and the correction was made. That subscriber had a perfect right to ask for one.

Getting out a good newspaper is a fascinating job, but it is also a difficult one. No other job one could think of is quite so taxing, so hurried, or demands greater pains and accuracy. From the time or the moment a newspaper is started, whether it is a large metropolitan daily or a country weekly, the work is done under pressure, high speed—a race against time. A race to catch certain trains, a race to be on the spot at the same time in the same every day for the subscribers who demand such service, and a high tension worry all the way through. That is the editor's job, to worry. He who is responsible for every single item that goes into the make-up of your daily paper, borne in part, however, by the composing room foreman, who is just as busy throughout the day, and at as high or higher speed than any of them. With the editor, however, the story is primarily concerned. How many do you know that could fill his position—for example, could you?

Offhand spell correctly the names of the greatest percentages of all residents in the city? If you can do that could you write their initials correctly without resorting to any book of information on the subject?

Could you write down, offhand, the names of all the city officials —what jobs they hold, the various correct titles and so on, and then give the offices and positions of all provincial executives just as quickly? With their executive titles?

Could you, under pressure, get the names of all persons connected with some large function, or serious accident, get the names correctly from a dozen or so who perhaps had witnessed it, and then make a readable story of it? Or from the limited time that could you write their initials correctly without resorting to any book of information on the subject?

Could you write down, offhand, the names of all the city officials —what jobs they hold, the various correct titles and so on, and then give the offices and positions of all provincial executives just as quickly? With their executive titles?

Could you, under pressure, get the names of all persons connected with some large function, or serious accident, get the names correctly from a dozen or so who perhaps had witnessed it, and then make a readable story of it? Or from the limited time that could you write their initials correctly without resorting to any book of information on the subject?

And in headline writing could you call to mind just at the moment enough synonyms so that the heading would not repeat the same thought in the same words? Could you judge in the minimum of time what size headlines, and what proper position in the paper should be given to each of the hundred or so stories that daily appear; or could you write a screed on the latest Parliament Hill scandal, or offhandedly tell decisions that crop up every day and must be decided upon—and get the majority of them correct? Then if that question were correctly be answered in your favour, and you really feel that you are capable of accomplishing those few simple things, then it is time that you might make a newspaper man. But the few things that have been enumerated are not the only ones that occupy the time and mind of the editor; they are the daily routine. Then there are the those and other little items such as keeping track of dates of every weekly, monthly and annual function in the city and district, who is going where and when they are about to be held, who will be there, and so on, then the anomaly of the whole thing.

The point is that a newspaper can be produced only after continued diligent study, and years of practical experience. Dozen of people have remarked that they could run a paper, and the next day after the one they have been getting, any time they feel like trying. If they have gone through the mill and have devoted half a lifetime to it, then there is no doubt but what they could, but if they have no more experience than five or six years at it then they are due for a rude shock the second day after they commence.

There is a fascination about newspaper work, however, that makes men devote their lives willingly to it. They are slaves to it, and while the hours are long at it, and may be fretting on the nerves, still a nervous breakdown half the time they are at work, they could not be tempted to change—could see no other work to their liking. The great god of News has them in its grip and they are his willing servants. Money could not tempt them away from the job. Illness short of real serious illness, fails to keep them away, and only death itself seems to be able to halt at last the hurried scribbling. But until that great adventure happens the Great Game must go on.

Approach of newspaper work a little incident is recalled of one of the more typical hard-boiled editors who continually make life miserable for some of his reporters by his insistence on having his reporters interested in the realization that a city editor's duties are many and very hostile to all newspaper men in general and reporters in particular. One of those gentlemen who was known from pole to pole as having no sympathies whatever in anybody connected with any paper held some information the editor sought to get. Calling one of his reporters to the desk he gave him the assignment and sent him out after the interview from the crusty old gentleman. The reporter arrived, climbed the steps to the large home—knocked on the door—and then was promptly ejected when his mission was learned. Nothing daunted he arose, shook the dust off and tried again. Once more he was thrown down more heartily, but this time he took the hint and departed back to his boss whom he acquainted with what had happened. The boss was disgusted at the tactics of the man and his servants. He thumped the desk with his fist and roared: "Go back to that house and try again —tell him he can't intimidate me!"

In the doorway of a large department store on Front Street the other afternoon two little boys were standing around one of those weighing machines. But the difficulty seemed to be that they had only one cent piece between them. How to get weighed on one cent seemed to be the problem, until, in a flash of wit, one of them suggested that they both get on the scales and then put the cent in the slot. This was done and the weight of both of them was recorded by the big red hand that registers the weight. Then while they stood there on the scale, one of the boys took a small scrap of paper from a pocket of his school book—he carried under his arm, marked the weight of both of them down on the paper and then divided it by two. They were almost the same size and height, possibly they didn't do so bad either.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma and pop was taking a week before supper and we went peased a cigar and with a sine in the window saying, Pure Havana Cigars Made by a Native Cuban, 5 Cents Each, Why Pay More?

Ma imparted that it was a dog screen, thats bunk for easy marks and bolonger of action, pop said

And we kept on going, pop saying, I wanted born yesterday, I know the game, but the editor, I know its impossible to import Havana tobacco and make it up into 5 cent cigars, the days of miracles are over. There must be a lot of gullible smokers wawking around loose in this fellow can do any bizness with a fake sine like that in his window, yes gods, he said, and I made Havanas for 7 cents, tell that to the marenns, he said.

Then we kept back pop fellow in frunt of the cigar store and read the sine again, saying, Of course the thing is impossible, even if the fellow tried to do it he'd find it economically out of the question, but still the average man loves to be fooled and he'll try a cheap cigar to the very worst.

Mercenary! said ma, and prooped it in the gutter and gave the other to a man selling newspapers on the corner, saying, That will teach him there are verse hings than poetry.

Letters to The Editor

Milford, Ont.,
Feb. 8th, 1932.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:—Kindly allow me a few lines regarding the Manchurian situation.

There are very few who will express approval of Japan's wholesale massacre at Shanghai, and who will not sympathize with the victims. However, that is beside the point.

What is China's claim to Manchuria. They say it is an integral part of China. That is because the Manchus in the 17th century overran and conquered China, nominally ated the whole as the Chinese Empire, and put a Manchu on the throne as Emperor. This Manchu dynasty lasted until the Revolution in 1911-12. Since then China has been dominated by various war lords and has had continual civil strife. If the Chinese claim Manchuria on the ground that they were conquered by the Manchus, why cannot Mexico lay claim to Spain, or England to Normandy, for the same reasons? This of course, would be absurd.

Now for Japan. When she whipped Russia in 1905 she secured certain concessions in Manchuria, which were ratified. However, Russia, Germany and France ordered her to evacuate that mainland (what Britain received, she joins them, much to her credit). Japan, weakened by the war, had to comply.

Then Japan, in 1904-05, much to the surprise of the whole world, decisively whipped Russia in Manchuria. Again European nation would fight twice over the same ground, coming out ahead each time, without claiming said territory!

In the 19th century, the Western Powers had a colonial race, dividing up Africa, parts of Asia, and the islands among them. Japan finally awakened, modernized herself, and looked around for room to expand, but alas, all "vacant" territory had been grabbed. Japan had awakened too late. At every move the Occident has a loud howl, protests goes up from all the Western nations.

As Japan is a modern, enterprising, and growing nation, she must find such outlet for her energy and pecuiliz millions or else explode—which means war sooner or later. The Occidental nations seem to prefer to force the latter on her, as they foolishly refuse to let her do the former peacefully.

Thanking you in advance, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours with deep respect,
W. D. F. Dixon.

UNEMPLOYED INCREASE

LONDON, Feb. 9.— The number of unemployed in Great Britain on January 25 was reported by the Ministry of Labor at 2,728,411, which is 218,600 more than on December 21, the date of the previous report. A statement said the increase was due, "to some extent" to a reaction in employment after the holidays and that all important industrial areas were affected.

Belleville Intermediates Hand Tricolor Their First Defeat in Group Schedule

Score 4 to 3 and Locals Better on Night's Play

BRILLIANT GAME

Every Member of Winning Team Shows Brilliant Effort

Shades of 1931.

Don't let them tell you that Queens weren't trying.

It was a grand and glorious victory.

Although the Students, brought over 200 howling, raving fans to town they were not rise to the occasion, try as they might. "They came, they saw and they were defeated," by the best team on the night's play.

With nothing in view but the satisfaction of being the only team in the group to beat the undefeated Queens hockey team the local intermediates rose to the occasion and defeated the Students in one of the fastest and most furious games of hockey seen in Belleville in quite some time, by the score of 4 to 3 last night.

Had the locals taken the same attitude earlier in the season as they did last night, the Queens Athletic Arena they would have today. Some vague leaders instead of second placers as they now are. Every member of the team played stellar hockey and it was due to their united efforts that they eventually were doled out the well deserved washing of Wally Eimers.

The game was filled with thrills from the time that Referee Mitchell faced the puck until the final whistle was sounded and the fans present all left the rink with the feeling that they had witnessed a game fitted for the occasion, that of being the final intermediate O.H.A. game of the season. Everything from making faces to fighting was indulged in by players was enjoyed by the patrons of the game.

Students Have Smart Team

Coach Wally Eimer gathered a well trained collection of players and they demonstrated this fact by out-playing the locals for the first period of the game, but, constant perseverance on the part of the locals, eventually were down and then literally walked over the remnants, of the once proud Queens aggregation. Benny Morris the veteran of veterans, who has scored goals for the Students ever since Adam retired to eat the apple, was the talents for the visitors and turned in his usual cool and calculated game. Morris was ably supported by that hard-hitting pair of forwards in Squires and Murphy. It might be added that Murphy completely outshone his mate, Squires, during the sixty minutes of play. Barney Reist Bob Lee and Shuggins were the leading line and although they skated miles and miles, they did not accomplish very much. The second line of Rod McDowell, Patterson and Gibson were much steadier and were ably supported by Demoko who relieved Bob Lee forward at times on defence. Demoko was a constant thorn in the side of the locals last night and played an excellent game.

Scott Goes Good

To pick a star, in the locals, lineup, would be out of the question except to say that Bob Scott played the best game of the year. The versatile Bob got on the ice and was well rewarded in the two goals which he scored. Archie Campbell also came to life and rose to heights on many occasions. Gordie McKeeken was in every play and his pokechick was working over-time on the attempted rushes of the visiting Alex Weir staged rush after rush and his pass-out to Scott was one of the nicest passes seen this year. Tyke and Bert Shannon put their steady game with "Les" rising to heights when he dove out at the puck to save the game when Bob Lee sailed in on him in the final minute of the game. Pete Morgan was quite in evidence when he skated the entire sheep in the final frame. Jack Leachman and Reno St. Denis were another solid pair and brought the fans to their feet on many occasions. Bob Hull gave and took all bumps with a smile and the Queens lads soon learnt to stay away from the Point Anne lad.

After the fine showing of the locals last night it is too bad that they were eliminated by a team like Gananoque, who are at present occupying the cellar position. But it was ever thus and the locals have the distinction of being the only team, in the loop, to beat the Queens Students. As we said before "don't let anyone tell you that they were not trying as they had their entire team on the offensive in the final few minutes of the fray."

The Play

As soon as the Belleville Citizen's Band had played the National Anthem the game was under way and the Students started to try and stale the locals into submission. Both teams were a bit cautious but the Students were carrying the play towards the local end of the rink. Right off of the bat Squires was benched for tripping McKeeken, who was through for a sure goal. Bennie Morris then rose to heights to beat Gordie and Archie as they tried desperately to score. On this occasion, seeing that they could skate with victory, came to life and made rush after rush but were either skated into the corner or beaten by the good work of Morris. Red McDowell, Murphy and Gibson tested Eimers on different occasions as the play raged up and down the ice. The play became faster and faster, with the result that Barney Reist sailed in, uncovered, to bat in Bobbie Lee's rebound for the first goal of the night. Almost immediately Murphy was benched for tripping and the locals bombarded Morris almost as well. Demoko, falling for St. Denis' trick, was benched for setting a little too rough with the locals' and while the visitors were short-handed Campbell gave Bob Scott a perfect pass and Bob made the score 1 to 1. The locals were all over the Queens team now, but their over-anxiousness robbed them of many a goal. It was at this stage of the game that Alex Weir rose to heights, on the offensive, and rose to red the puck for and often. Queen's second line came out and on a nice combination play Gibson broke a pass-out from Squires and made the score 2 to 1. Students' lead was ended without any more scoring after the locals tried in vain to even the count.

Second Period

Although no goals were scored in this frame there was plenty of fast skating and speed demonstrated. All sorts of little tricks resulted from arguments to fights. Gordie McKeeken opened the frame by testing Morris. Gordie missed a swell chance to even the score when he was allowed too fast to shoot. The locals turned on steam and were hitting the attack but the Students eff of their feet. Jack Leachman and Gordie McKeeken were sent to the penalty box. Queens' team only to miss the open net. Barney Reist, when trying to get through the Belleville defence was checked "more de combat" and was retired in favour of Red McDowell. The game then proceeded to get quite rough in spots, with the result that a general mix-up was the outcome when Bob Scott took a poke at Patterson and all the players seemed to be in the game at one time before Referee Mitchell got the fighting participants apart and gave both Patterson and Scott a five minute penalty. The rest of the of the fight will never be known as both players claim that the other was instrumental in causing the battle. No serious damage was reported and the players soon forgot the incident. The players then tamed down for a minute, but were at the scrap and the period ended 2 to 1 for Queens.

Third Period

The final frame was the twenty minutes of the game which the local fans will never forget. Speed, body-checking, goals and everything which goes to make-up a hockey game was there for the fans to see present. The locals came out ready to "do or die" and they did just that. The period opened with Scott and Patterson still in the "hoosegow" and Gordie McKeekin opened the frame by testing Morris. Bob Campbell and McKeekin were skating like players possessed and the pace was telling on the visitors. No sooner did Bob Scott come back on the ice than he grabbed a loose puck and while lying on the ice, in front of Morris, pushed the disc into the net for the tying counter. The fans by now, were in an uproar and exactly forty seconds later Alex Weir gave McKeekin a perfect passout, from the corner and Gordie put the locals into the lead by the score of 3 to 2. Hats and caps were thrown on the ice and it was some little time before play was resumed. Both teams opened up and the fans were treated to the fastest exhibition of hockey that they have had the privilege of seeing this year. Pete Morgan, Scott, Campbell and Alex Weir staged rush after rush and although the locals were playing like players possessed and the play was telling on the visitors. No sooner did Bob Scott come back on the ice than he grabbed a loose puck and while lying on the ice, in front of Morris, pushed the disc into the net for the tying counter. The fans by now, were in an uproar and exactly forty seconds later Alex Weir gave McKeekin a perfect passout, from the corner and Gordie put the locals into the lead by the score of 3 to 2. Hats and caps were thrown on the ice and it was some little time before play was resumed. Both teams opened up and the fans were treated to the fastest exhibition of hockey that they have had the privilges of seeing this year. Pete Morgan, Scott, Campbell and Alex Weir staged rush after rush and although the locals were playing like players possessed and the play was telling on the visitors, they kept on carrying the play into the enemy's territory with the result that Morgan scored one of the nicest goals of the night on a pass from Johnnie Leachman. The play was well worth note, as both players timed their work perfectly. Again Morgan had a chance to score as the locals kept on carrying the play but Pete over-skated the puck. Bob Scott was the recipient of an opportunity stick in the face and although it was an accident the game little lad shook it off and continued to play, although he was hit quite hard. The Students seeing that victory was slipping out of their grasp rushed play after play, but the locals were checking like demons and the game ended 4 to 3 in favour of Belleville as Campbell and Bob Scott starred on defence.

Line-ups—Queens goal Morris, defence Squires and Murphy, centre Reist, wings Leg and Patterson, subs Gibson, McDowell, Huggins and Democko.

Belleville—goal Tice, defence Morris and Weir, centre McKeekin, wings Scott and Campbell, subs, Leachman, Morgan, Hull and St. Denis.

By JIMMY THOMPSON

VIC LINDQUIST

Right wing winger of the Canadian Olympic representatives, is credited with being one of the fastest men in amateur hockey in Canada. His speed enables him to do a terrific amount of back-checking.

Vic had the distinction of scoring the winning goal when the Canadians defeated the United States team in the first game of the Olympic hockey games. The Rev. A. Brandenburg Payne of St. Thomas Church, Belleville, is vitally interested in the progress of the Winnipegs, as his nephew Hank Shuggins is a member of the club. Shuggins turned in a stellar exhibition game against Poland in the Canadians last victory.

Juniors Tie Game 2-2 Winning Round from Trenton by 8-7 Count

Jimmy McGuire Scores Both Goals For His Team

FOLLWELL GREAT

Belleville Have Only a Slight Edge on Their Opposition

Trenton, Feb. 9 (Special)— The Belleville Juniors played Trenton to a tie game, the score being 2-2, in Trenton on Monday night. Belleville wins the group, having a one goal lead over Trenton, in the game played in Belleville on Saturday night. The Cubs ended up no great brand of hockey and were lucky in holding the Trenton team to a tie. A few more goals had the chance that the Cubs have had should have had no difficulty in beating a team which has not had the advantages of artificial ice. They will have to play a much better brand of hockey if they expect to go far in the playoffs.

Follwell Filling Shoes

Follwell, on defence, who is filling Sherry's shoes, and he is filling them, while Jim Ethier on the other defence, played his usual steady game. Jimmy McGuire's two goals, as his nephew Hank Shuggins, as his nephew Hank Shuggins, as his nephew Hank Shuggins is a member of the club. Shuggins scored in a stellar exhibition game against Poland in the Canadians last victory.

Harry Morgan certainly knows his business and put in a fine game but was not up to his usual form last night. Carl Morgan and Geyer played a nice steady game. Both deserve credit, but Geyer's due, should go to them. That, too, is the case of Tice, who had to take a back seat last night as he was not allowed room to offer his services when needed. Either Belleville team, a good sport.

While on the Trenton team it is rather hard to pick any one player for as all turned in a good hard working hard to take a fall out of Belleville. Ken Chambers, in goal, tended a rock game and much of the credit is due him; the Cubs were in there time and again trying to score but couldn't get by. While Begin, on defence, was not up to his good, his sick-handling had the Belleville boys guessing. Tis Willis was good as usual. He is a very unassuming young fellow but you sure knows how to back-check and chokes no signs of letting interference complex when it comes to carrying the puck. Lambert and Nuttall on defence did not get much publicity; Lambert played his best game of the season, but was up against a fine defence, while Nuttall was in there time and again trying to score but couldn't get by. FANS STEAMED UP OVER SERIES

Frontenacs of Kingston to Meet Local Juniors For Honors

Lead by Carl and Wilson, two star players from Napanee, the Frontenac Juniors journey here to Belleville on Wednesday night for the first game of a home and home series with goals to count against the Belleville Juniors. The Frontenacs have a smart collection of puck-chasers and quite well the pick of the district representative Blake their stellar defence-man who turned in such a creditable exhibition, in Belleville, last night. The Napanee experienced little or no trouble in disposing of the other three teams in their section of the group this winter. Alex Sutherland, the grand old man of hockey in Kingston is coach for the Limestone City lads, while Bert Woodruff, ace of the old Montreal Maroons, manages the team. Frontenacs have developed into a fast skating hard checking team and will be followed to Belleville on Wednesday by a big delegation of fans, tingent of Kingston supporters.

Fresh from their victory over Trenton Juniors in which all of the locals came out with flying colors, the Cubs feel that they are primed for the "kill" their Eastern opponents in this group O.H.A. play-off series. Coach Thompson is elated with the showing that the Cubs made in Trenton and feels that the last tilt has helped their stelds. The regular team of Scott, Ethier, Follwell, maybe Bill Sherry will be able to be out, on the defence, Red MacDonald, Harry Morgan, and Jimmie McGuire on the forward line are all ready to start. The side will be completed by Carl Morgan, Nichol Goyer and C. MacDonald.

As goals count on the round, the Belleville Juniors might promises to be the season's tit-bit of Junior hockey.

THIRTY MINUTE OVERTIME GAME WITH NO SCORE

Tweed and Madoc Battle it Out on Perfect Ice

REAL TUSSLE

Madoc, Feb. 9. (Special)—Madoc and Tweed played before a packed icy house to a no-score game after thirty minutes of overtime. The game was a hard fought exciting one from the face-off at the opening whistle to the finish. It was a real exhibition of the winter pastimes both in clever stick-handling and passing, and the sensational goal tending by both goalies. It was a game that the fans of Madoc and Tweed thrilled to and will long remember.

For Tweed, McGee in the nets played a star game for the season; the two Geraldi boys, Alex. and Ralph, Madoc and Tweed player, played a star game also the forwards for Geraldi, Rashotte and McGee.

For Madoc Hulin turned in a stellar performance in the nets and was called upon many times but in the overtime with less than a minute to go McGuire had the defense beat only to find Hulin invincible. For the home team Rupert and Blue turned in a real game on defense. Henderson, Wood and Watson starred with their tricky skating and backchecking. Line-ups of both teams played as effectively as the regulars.

Line-up

Tweed—Goal, McGee; L. Defense A. Geraldi; R. Defense, G. Geraldi; Centre, Rashotte; L. Wing, F. Geraldi; R. Wing, McGuire; Subs, Arber, Clarke, LaFontaine and Shanquee.

Madoc—Goal, Hulin; L. Defense Blue; R. Defense, Ruppert; L. Wing, Watson; R. Wing, Henderson. Subs, Whytock, Ross Mckie and Armstrong.

Referee—Leo Barrett, Belleville.

By The Observer

Early this morning the local juniors received word of the decision that they were entered in the O. H. A. playdowns and would meet the Kingston Frontenac Juniors in the first game of a home and home series here in Belleville on Wednesday night. The loca's fold fine after her win over Trenton and nothing could quit them better than to "take the Kingstonians into camp," especially after the Card said the boys deal. Coach Thompson will have the Cubs out for a few minutes tonight and then rest up until the night of the battle which happens to be Wednesday evening.

Coach Ralph Morden is crowding his "basketeers" for their initial test when the Queen's athletic heads the local Y.M.C.A. Wednesday night. Although the students defeated the Y's Men's Club of Kingston in Kingston the locals feel that on the same floor here in Belleville that they stand a much better chance against the fast Queen's forwards

If the local "basketeers" can "take" the students tomorrow night they will be in for a run of the K.O.B.L. by a margin of Basketball Supremacy. Coach Morden has added two new players to his team, they being two cadets from the R. Simpson Frontenac Juniors come to Belleville on Wednesday night for the first of a home and home series with goals to count against the Belleville Juniors. Be not too satisfied lest you Become the slave of what you do.
—Old Mother Nature.

Monkey-face the Barn Owl had been living quite a bit south of where he now was. He hadn't been living very down in the Sunny South. No, it hadn't been as far as that. It had been just far enough so that in winter there was seldom snow, and when snow did fall it never stayed long. He had lived there all his life and so had Mrs. Monkey-face lived all of her's there. They had expected to live there always. They were perfectly satisfied until they gradually began to realize that there were too many of their kind living in that neighborhood. It had gotten so that it required real hunting to get enough food for themselves, not to mention the babies that would come along in the spring.

High up in the belfry of a church where Hal the Hunter made their home they had talked it all over night after night. Each night they hoped the hunting would be better and each night it seemed as if it were a little worse. It was not that they were starving. Goodness no! They were too long way from that. They got enough and they felt sure that they could continue to get enough for themselves, but could they get enough for a big family? That was the question.

"We will have to move," declared Monkey-face. "We will have to leave right here. We have brought too much into a neighborhood where there are none of our kind, but where there are plenty of Mice."

"When you find such a neighborhood just let me know and I will be ready to move there. Meanwhile I think I will go well enough alone and remain right here where I know everybody and where the best hunting grounds are," declared Mrs. Monkey-face.

When Monkey-face did finally start out to look for a new home he did not do it deliberately. In his nightly hunt for food he had extended his range farther and farther. He had done this in all directions, but especially toward the north. One night he went in this direction farther than he ever had been before and morning found him farther from home than he cared to fly in daylight. He spent that day in an old barn. When evening came and he started hunting he drifted still farther in that direction, and because he found plenty of Mice decided to stay there until he had a chance to look around more thoroughly.

He soon discovered that there was no good place for a nest near there and again moved on. In little by little, Monkey-face had moved north until he reached Farmer Brown's farm. From the time he first saw them he had liked the Green Meadows, the Green Forest, the Old Pasture and the Old Orchard. He had liked the looks of the big barn from the outside, and when he found a pane of glass out of a gable window he liked the looks of it still better inside.

"I'll stay here awhile and look around," said Monkey-face to himself. "There should be good hunting around here when the snow comes instead of scarcely any as there are too many hunters. With Rats and Mice in this barn and around other barns in the neighborhood, with Meadow Mice in the grass of the Green Meadows, the Old Pasture and the Old Orchard and with Wood Mice in the Old Pasture, not to mention an occasional careless bird by way of variety, there should be a good living nowadays. I am sure Mrs. Monkey-face would enjoy it. If only I can get her to come here and bring her family, I shall be delighted. It sounded like a hiss but it really was a sigh.

The more he looked around and the more he did around very thoroughly as many of the smaller meadows of the Green Meadows and the Old Pasture, the more certain you or they would, the more decided he grew in favor of making his home there. Finally early one evening he headed straight for his old home and Mrs. Monkey-face.

WORDS CAUSE MARRED AMITY

Thinks "Absurd" Misunderstanding Make "Fists Across The Sea"

New York, Feb. 8—The "absurd little differences" in use of words and manners that Americans note in English visitors, and that the English note in visiting Americans, do "more to change the hands across the sea into fists" than do the major issues that statesmen discuss or, John Langdon-Davies, English author and educator, said at a reception and tea given him by the English-Speaking Union, 19 West Forty-fourth Street.

"You in the South and West, where I am sometimes the only Englishman who has been seen for years, and the only one likely to occur for years more," Mr. Langdon-Davies said, "I am very often in that dangerous position of being regarded as a typical Englishman. Then any little thing that I may do that is considered not quite the correct thing to do becomes a stain on the entire population of the British Isles, a black mark against the empire.

"Sometimes it is very troublesome. In England, for example, when one dines out one usually permits his hostess to get into her chair and then one chair up to the table alone and quite unaided. In the Middle West that doesn't hold. One is expected to aid the lady to her chair, lift it slightly from the floor and gently prod it forward, seating her to the table.

"I do not go through that performance instinctively and one of these times an American dear is apt to notice it, and feel that I have no proper respect for women. Then and what could be more natural, the generally that Englishmen have no respect for women will become fixed in his mind and almost anything may happen.

"On a recent tour I was very calmly told that Englishmen beat their wives. Not a question—a flat statement. I very calmly replied that was believed I was told that there is no law against it in England. Consequently the husbands of England are unrestrained by law, all England thrashes their wives.

"These little differences, so unexpected, so unimportant, so silly, create absurd confusions in Englands, too. The ambassador to Dayton, for example, was very thoroughly described in the English press as a man who had successfully ceased great mystification dealt with the murder of Mr. Harding during his cross-examination of Mr. Haynes.

"From time to time," the publication went on, "Mr. Dayton has snapped his suspenders. Having been here, I found this perfectly plain to me—a warm day. He was dressed with his coat off. But in England suspenders are the article of clothing employed by men to keep their socks up, even. Only on very strong rose the strange picture of Mr. Dayton, sitting erect in his chair, cross-examination to bend over and fix for some quite unexplained reason, his silk garters."

"I have chosen absurd examples, but it does seem to me that the little differences are important, very important, in the life of the nations, in the attitude of peoples, in misunderstandings which are international good-will."

The Beauty Box

Make-up has come to its senses. It no longer blazes like a red beacon, but is delicate in its tones. Those rouges that touch every tone from delicate pink through peach and red to magenta, are taking a back seat to those shades that are a perfect midwifery for blush creams originally by Mama Nature. New powder shades are in the air. Here in a hurry. A lick and a promise that will make you presentable and distributed —no splotches —rouge that blended in zig zags and not utmost stinginess, eye shadows only faintly suggested.

The astounding time treating frown lines if frowning continues from childhood to old age. Those parenthesis lines from nostrils to mouth, which are caused by austere ladies who pull in their mouths when they are shocked by expression. Squinting digs in sun creases about the eyes. Lifting the brows forces out horizontals. Pretting manufactures tissue sags, depressions. Cheers give creases. There you are!

The gal who wears fairly low wide heels in the house can indulge in high heels when she goes out on the street, and thus avoid the danger of foot fits. Trouble comes when you wear high heels all outdoor hall. They throw the body out of balance, do injuries for the spinal column, have a bad effect upon the central nervous system and make walking a punishment instead of the joy it should be.

Arms and legs get enough exercise. They're pretty much on the move a good part of the time. The part of the body that needs exercise is the waist line. Try out thinking of going in for a little muscular training by stretching, bending and twisting. Good to make the waistline and tapersih. Whittle off hip spread, and pull in the tummy muscles.

Fur Collars Hurt the Neck's Complexion

Too bad, in fact a crying shame, even if they have been put away fresh and clean.

With soiled collars rubbing against the skin, there is danger of infection, not because furs are dangerous, but because dirt ground into any abrasion of the skin can carry bacteria.

Lily Pons Fans Organize Club

New York — Soon after Lily Pons had concluded her "mad scene" in "Lucia di Lammermoor," which was presented by the Metropolitan Opera Company for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the Opera Club of New York, a group of young girls went to the star's dressing room and informed her of the organization of the Lily Pons Fans, led by Marjorie Lewis, daughter of Earl Lewis, treasurer of the opera box-office, presented the singer with a large floral fan, with flowers arranged to spell "Pons Fans."

Members for the new club have been drawn from the New York Junior League, the high and forty schools that subscribe to the opera Philharmonic Society and girls in the shape of fans.

The scholarship fund of Vassar received about $6,000 from the performance, which was well attended. Others in the cast were Giovanni Martinelli, Giuseppe de Luca, Minnie Egener, Tancredi Pasero, Angelo Bada and Max Altglass. Vincenzo Bellezza conducted.

"SNAPPY" SNAP SHOTS

JOHN BAPTIST DISAPPOINTED

"John's Dilemma" was the theme of Rev. Dr. Bell, at Bridge st. United Church Sunday morning.

John the Baptist, who once baptised the Saviour had militant expectations of the earthly Kingdom and consequently was impatient and greatly disappointed in the apparent tragedy of unfulfilled realisation.

Dr. Bell said:—"The achievements of Christianity are not in this world only. We may be unconscious in our religious views, The Son of God came not simply to condemn sin but to redeem lost mankind, to supplant good for evil. The Heavenly Father pleads for our service and forces go not to accept the overtures of divine mercy."

In business and other phases of life there is danger, said Dr. Bell in the lack of vision of spiritual things. When John the Baptist announced the Kingdom of Heaven being at hand and in the Messianic future, "Whatever our viewpoints may be may be about the substance of this doctrine let this be clear, that we about the form the return of the Lord might take. How much nearer or in what better way could the Second Coming in the future appear again than that now as our Great Heavenly High Priest is worth pondering upon. In the Sacrament we again avoid arouses prejudice and misunderstanding. The Holy Spirit is much truth and knowledge of the Christian religion permeated, coloured and riches in the store fo abundant Christ may be missed."

Dr. Bell holed the modern thinkers of the surface type who pit might and power emphasis on the Holy Spirit's mission which Zechariah the Old Testament wrote for man's guidance.

The choir sang "In Heavenly Love Abiding" under the direction of Mr. Sam Argin, with Mr. V. P. Hunt at the organ. Mr. Ritchie Arnott contributed a solo.

Weddings

WHALEN—CHARLTON

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Monday morning in St. Michael's Church, Father Baker officiating, when Agnes daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Charlton of Point Anne, became the bride of Michael James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whalen, also of Point Anne.

The bride's gown were attended by Miss Winnifred Whalen and Miss Dorothy Whalen. The bride got a charming frock of navy blue with hat to match, the bridesmaid wore black crepe de chine. Mr. Frank Whalen left on a trip to western points and on their return they will reside in Point Anne.

DEACON—MONAHAN

The marriage was solemnized in St. Michael's Church, Belleville, on Saturday morning of Miss Mary Monahan, daughter of Mrs. Monahan of Brantford and late Mr. John Monahan, and Mr. Francis M. Deacon of Belleville, son of Mrs. Deacon and the late Daniel Deacon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fisher.

Mr. Leo Monahan gave his sister in marriage. Bride was gowned in Alencon blue crepo with crystal trimmings. Her bridesmaid was lace and harmonizing slippers. Miss Monahan, sister of the bride, was gowned in rose crepe with brown corri hat and corsage of sweet peas.

Mr. Leo Monahan, Lindsay, attended the groom. Wedding music was played by Miss Pauline Hinch and Miss Kathleen Keen. Mr. C. J. Lowry sang.

The couple left after the reception for a trip to New York and Washington and will live in Belleville.

Mrs. Samuel Lazier

APPEAL DISMISSED

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 8—Appeal of Rev. J. Little, former York township councillor, from his conviction on a charge of conspiring to defraud the township was dismissed by the Appeal Court at Osgoode Hall yesterday. Little was sentenced to 15 months' imprisonment by Mr. Justice H. T. Kelly.

The many friends of Mrs. Samuel Lazier learned with deep regret of her death, Sunday night, with the adopted city, Los Angeles, California.

The funeral service took place on Saturday afternoon in the Normandie Avenue M.E. church of which she was a member.

While the friends were gathering the organist played softly Kipling's "Crossing the Bar."

The Hymns were old favorites of the deceased "Rock of Ages" and "Nearer My God to Thee."

Mr. Olsson quoted many comforting passages and the hymn were bereaved of a loving mother and a sincere friend.

The soloist Isabel Pancoast sang "Some Day the Silver Cord will Break."

In the course of his address Mrs. Lazier passed her three-score years and ten, almost reached the seventy years. All who knew her testify as to her beautiful Christian character. She was my privilege to know her only the last four years of her life, when she was not able to be about, out in the public very much. Whether or not she ever lived much in the public I do not know. She was a quiet woman, but I do know from the impress of her character was felt by those who came in contact with her. I do know that she was a wonderful Mother, and kept a keen interest in her children to the very last. God has called her hence, may her mantle fall on many of us, with a double portion of her spirit."

The pastor closed his remarks with this little poem written by her daughter, Amelia, on the morning of her mother's funeral.

MOTHER

If I had the gift of a poet
To tell of this Mother of mine,
The bravest and sweetest of women,
Who loved with a love Divine.
She gave of herself so freely,
Always trying her best to do good,
Oft we took service too lightly,
And failed to give thanks as we should.
When Christ was on earth, He taught us
To serve one another we see
And Heaven could have followed more closely,
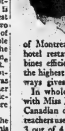
His example on Galilee.
God couldn't be with us in person,
And so He gave mother like mine,
Dear Father, we thank Thee for treasure,
The gift of this Mother o' Mine.
The remains were laid to rest in the Belleville Mt. View Cemetery amid a profusion of beautiful floral tributes.

Blouses Formal For Afternoon Color Contact

Paris, Feb. 8—It is now announced that nowadays the blouse is much less detached from the rest of the costume than it was two seasons ago. The harmonizing of skirt with blouse is the whole ensemble place it in exactly the same category as the frock in point of importance as the coat and skirt.

This is probably due to the popularity of colour harmonies which was a striking feature of the summer season. In order to accent individuality, however, and therefore distinction, the dress makers' cleverness asserts itself.



As a matter of fact, I think the great popularity enjoyed by this fashion of wearing the blouse in colorings surely would have been even more pronounced than the present season were it not that winter modes are restricted to a certain degree of neutrality. This naturally resolves itself into a very discreet choice of color combinations or oppositions.

Color opposition was first more often expressed in the guise of light dress tops, as much dual with certain dresses, it was difficult to guess whether we were in the presence of two separate and distinct pieces or whether the garment was just simply two-toned. The latter is the formula created the illusion that blouses formed an integral part of the dress, but, on the other hand, certain dress models were quite detached to stimulate a bolero, often were taken for separate blouses.

The newest way to make a blouse look like a blouse whenever it's create even a formal model, is to see no reason against it being as carefully tailored as a man's shirt with all the features characteristic of the mode prevailing at the time. A blouse, for example, can perfectly well show a softly folded blue neckline, such as is seen on formal satin afternoon gowns.

Narrows, tucks and other details usually associated with blouses must on the other hand show a certain reserve and formality and follow the classical design of incrustation work proper to afternoon dresses.

Try Miss Alice Moir's light, flaky Chicken Shortcake

"I always use and recommend Magic Baking Powder," says Miss Alice Moir, Dietitian of one of Montreal's finest apartment-hotel restaurants. "Magic combines efficiency and economy to the highest degree. Besides, it always gives splendid results."

In whole-hearted agreement with Miss Moir, the majority of Canadian housewives and cookery teachers use Magic exclusively. And 3 out of 4 Canadian housewives use Magic because it gives consistently better baking results.

No wonder Magic outsells all other baking powders combined! Favour your family with Chicken Shortcake—made with Magic as Miss Moir directs. Note its delicate flavour, its feather lightness!

Free Cook Book—When you bake at home, the new Magic Cook Book will give you dozens of recipes for delicious dishes. Write Magic, Dept. 6, Standard Brands Ltd., Fraser Ave. and Liberty St., Toronto, Ont.

CHICKEN SHORTCAKE

2 cups pastry flour
(or 1½ cups bread flour)
3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon shortening
1 egg
½ cup water

Sift dry ingredients; add shortening and mix in thoroughly with a steel fork; add beaten egg and sufficient water to make soft dough. Roll or pat out with hands on floured board. Cut out with large floured biscuit cutter, or half fill greased muffin rings which have been placed on greased baking pan. Bake in hot oven at 450° F. about 12 minutes. Split and butter when hot, and fill with hot creamed chicken. Makes 6 shortcakes.

"COUNTING NO MORE" Magic Baking Powder is the secret we owe to the discovery that Magic Baking Powder is free from alum or any harmful ingredient.

Mining Exchange

Toronto, Feb. 9.—An upswing in Teck-Hughes proved a feature of the day on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange today, but the recovery failed to develop important proportions. Changes in midday, while showing a majority of gains, were confined to a narrow range.

Teck-Hughes opened in moderately brisk demand and when taken at noon displayed an advance of 16 points over last night's final at 84.45. Strength was attributed to cessation of liquidation and short covering. Other higher priced golds were quiet but steady.

Among the cheaper issues Vipond regained 4 to 34 in one sale and International Nickel, Hollinger and Stadill Reserves 2 each. Hinde & Dauch, Ford A and Ford B were slightly higher. Moffatt Mac-till the active feature, was unchanged. Buffalo and Hollinger Lake Gold dipped a cent each under light selling.

In other groups International Nickel firmed to 48.85 but Mond Nickel was off a few cents at 8.15 20. Sidewood recovered a cent to 11c and other base metals were inactive. Chemical Research lost 4 to 61-2 and Pentagilt Pete was off smith-fraction to 4.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 9—Cattle 800; offerers totalled 300 head. Trade was very slow on the opening and early sales about steady. A few loads butcher cattle sold at 3.50 and some heavy steers brought 3.50 to 3.60. Butcher cows were steady at 2.00 to 2.50 for choice with a few cows at 2.75. Light cows sold at 1.00 to 6.00.

Hogs 800; hogs were unsettled with packers bidding 4.35 to 4.50 lake for choice, 4.10 to 4.15 weighed off car. Bacon 1.00 premium.

Sheep 200; good lambs sold at 7.00 cwt. with culls downward to 5.00. Sheep were steady at 2.50 for top.

GERMANY IS PLEDGED

declined to let her proceed.

Mr. Lipsey

By F. I. LIPSEY, Jr.
(Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press)

Geneva, Feb. 9 (AP)—Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, Acting Chief of the United States delegation to the world disarmament conference, and Chancellor Heinrich Bruening of Germany presented to the conference today the proposals of their countries for limitation of armaments.

The proposal presented by Ambassador Gibson, contained nine points.

These included the prolongation of the Washington and London naval agreements, the conclusion of naval armament, abolition of submarines and prohibition of chemical armament by restricting tanks and mobile guns, discard of Lethal gases and preventive protection of chemical warfare, protection of civil populations against bombing and by limiting defensive forces to those necessary to maintain public interest plus some contingent for defence, and budgetary limitation of expenditures for war supplies when their direct limitation has been secured.

Mr. Fewster

Chancellor Bruening's statement pledged Germany's "will to disarm," to the advocacy of general disarmament "by an unmistakable nature, such as the League of Nations covenant envisaged", but set out no formal program except to ask that the armaments of all nations be reduced to the same low relative status as Germany. He also would present a formal program later.

Referring to the proposal presented by M. Tardieu at Geneva last week, he said.

"Let's do away with the efforts, by this or that interpretation of the rules, to secure for ourselves the possibility of military expansion of power and to take it away from others. That isn't the right way. That's the way to make the conference end in failure and cause a hapy condition of an armed peace with increasing armaments."

Chancellr Bruening spoke in German, which had to be translated into both French and English.

He was given warm applause by the delegates, as was Ambassador Gibson.

Spow in Calvin's City

Soft snow whitened John Calvin's city as the two statesmen demanded, in terms of that of the whole world, without exception, disarm.

In his address Mr. Gibson made it clear the western hemisphere has its large navy except that of the United States, has no armies which are feared by neighbor powers and has had no war powers its military

TWO PLAYERS ARE INJURED

Scott and McMeekin Come Out of Fray in Bad Shape

The aftermath of last night's hectic Intermediate O.H.A. hockey match were two serious accidents to local players, Gordie McKitrick, Belleville's star centre and poke-check artist, was forced to call the services of Dr. J. J. Robertson this morning when he was unable to move his right arm. At first it was thought that McMeekin had broken his shoulder, but after the physician had carefully examined the shoulder it was found to be a slight crack in the right collar bone. After strapping the shoulder firmly with bandage the doctor assured McMeekin that he had nothing to worry about and he would be able to resume his duties in the course of a few days.

The other casualty to the local player, Bob Scott, Belleville's left winger, who was recipient of a butt-end stick in the left eye during the game, was this morning unable to open the eye which was the C.N.E. Although Bob's eye is in such a shape that he was forced to call the services of Dr. Chant this morning he is thought that nothing serious, outside of slight bruises, will be the eventual outcome. The eye itself is quite seriously inflamed today, but no damage is expected to the sight itself.

Russian is Given Two Months' Term

Charles Kruhmin, a Russian forty five years old, who claims to have been in this country for one year and three months and who speaks English fluently, was sentenced to serve two months in the local jail on the charge of vagrancy, by Magistrate Ketcheson in police court on Tuesday morning. In the meantime steps will be taken to have the man deported at the expiration of his sentence.

Kruhmin slept at the city's lodge for transients Monday night and early this morning. At that time nine o'clock he returned and demanded of the constable in a manner far from being polite, that he be sent to the hospital, claiming that he was suffering from some foot trouble.

The attendant informed the police and the man was taken to the city police station for investigation. Later the vagrancy charge was laid against him and he received the above mentioned sentence.

COL. JONTON'S STATE IMPROVES

Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., who has been seven a severe illness in Hamilton one week ago tonight, is showing gradual improvement according to word which reached the city today. His progress is very satisfactory according to his physicians.

Ruth Judd Found Guilty Verdict Calls for Death

Courtroom, Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 9 (AP)—Today, for the murder of Agnes Rudy guilty last night of murder in the first degree in connection with the "trunk slaying" of her roommate, Winnifred Ann Leroi. Mrs. Judd automatically is subject to the death penalty.

The all-masculine panel deliberated less than 3 hours and 45 minutes to convict the minister's daughter of perhaps the most sensational crime in the history of Arizona.

Unless she is granted a new trial which might result only in a different verdict, Mrs. Judd will be hanged at Florence State Penitentiary.

Superior Judge Howard Speakman then sentenced him home to accept the verdict shortly before 9.30 p.m., set February 26 as the date for reading the sentence and setting the date of execution.

The defendant showed no emotion as she heard the jury's verdict, as she had through her trial, when things were breaking in the worst possible way for her. She appeared not to realize the significance of the event.

Her husband, Dr. William C. M. Judd, who stood by her through the trial, patted her gently on the shoulder but she paid no attention to him or any one else.

Y'S MEN CLUB HELD DEBATE

Points Brought Forward Amusing to The Members

As no special speaker had been secured for last evening's weekly meeting of the local Y's Men's Club a considerable business was completed during the banquet hour.

Much to the amusement of the members present, President "Mel" Blanchard announced that the main item on the programme for the evening would be a debate — the evening would be a more useful — "resolved that a new style of tariff to a farmer than a wife." was decided against by Harry Peck lead the affirmative and Percy Hollingworth and Ross Hubbs in favor of their argument. Especially the "last couple of a cow was dwelt upon. The negative was led by Court Miller assisted by "Al" Black and although these two young men brought out many humorous points in their favour the judges, who were Messrs. E. Boyd, Ross Hubbs, Paisley and Hall, after careful summarization and deliberation the judges could unanimously in favour of the affirmative amid the rounds of applause from the spectators.

During the course of the evening Ab Adams, an ex-member of the Club, favoured the meeting with short address on "Some amusing old time members and they were greatly enjoyed by the members present and Newt. Thompson were called upon and both related humorous incidents which they had experienced in their wide and varied careers.

All arrangements were completed for the annual Y's Men's dance which will be held on St. Patrick's night this year. The committee in charge is Ellie Underwriter's evening at the Club and the evening's entertainment is Fred Ivey in charge of the Life Underwriters of this district. They have promised the meeting a speaker of note for the occasion.

Ecuador Off Gold Standard

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Feb. 9. — Ecuador abandoned the gold standard today.

Ecuador has been having financial difficulties for some time.

Last May the Bank of Ecuador was suspended pending investigation of its affairs. Depositors precipitated a run but all the depositors were paid. Subsequently the superintendent of banks resigned and the treasury was requested to proceed with liquidation of the bank.

Korean Program at John Street

Group of Folk Songs and Addresses Open Programme

At an open meeting of the C.O.I.T. groups of John Street Church held in the church auditorium last night, the audience enjoyed a very interesting "Korean Evening" as a climax to the season's study by the girls. Mis Nellie Sutherland at the piano and the poems were welcomed by Miss Phyllis Archibald and Miss Dorothy Coulter, in the Korean maiden.

A group of folk songs opened the programme and was followed by talks by the girls on the subject "What we have learned about in group study about Korea." Those taking part were Misses Jessie and Catherine Williamson, Shirley Brown, Ida Sullivan, Marjorie Gannon, Florence Carr and Jean Bankhead. Blakey poem, "Oriental Scrim" was sung by Hazel Denike and Belle Judge.

The installation of the Korean fairy tale, "Pancha and the Magic Mirror" followed and the pretty Korean race was an interesting feature. Miss Williamson and the girls taking part entered charming-ly through the front of the pretty little play. The cast included:

Prologue . . . . . Phyllis Archibald
Emperor . . . . . Elizabeth Kinsey
Court Chamberlain Elinor Johnson
Green Lampe . . . . . Ida Sullivan
Mrs. Crinkles . . . . . Harriet Crook
Councillors—Belle Judge, Hazel Denike, Elizabeth McGee, Margaret Milne, Constance Williams and Barbara Rowat.

KINGSTON PRESBYTERIAL W. M. S. HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

Mrs. Geo. A. Reid, Belleville, Re-elected Presidnt

MEET AT TRENTON

Missionary Giving Subject of Interesting Discussion

The annual meeting of the Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S. of—the Presbyterian Church in Canada, was held in Trenton on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, Feb. 4th.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Kingston Auxiliary after which the address of welcome by Mrs. Galbraith of Trenton, was read. To this address Mrs. Morrison of Bertie, ably responded.

Minutes of the Summer meeting held in Picton, and of subsequent executive meetings, were read by Recording Secretary, Mrs. Bennet. The report was followed by the Corresponding Secretary's Report showing increased membership and sustained interest on the part of Auxiliaries which was further set forth in the reports of the various Departmental Secretaries, reported Treasurer, Miss Fowler, reported the sum of $2826.42 having been forwarded to Toronto in 1931. Mrs. Seymour of Belleville led in the dedicatory prayer.

A timely and interesting address was given by the President, Mrs. Geo. Reid in urging the necessity of giving the Church and her work, in their relation to these days of unrest and confusion. She advocated the system of budget giving as the most effective means of meeting our financial requirements and suggested that Kingston Presbyterial strive to increase its membership 50 per cent. for 1932.

Mrs. Elkin of Napanee, Provincial Secretary of Young People's Work, brought greetings from the Board and conducted a very helpful conference on the subject of Young Women's Auxiliaries and Girls' Organizations. These young people will be the W.M.S. of tomorrow and every effort should be made to be interested in their training and guidance. She urged more sympathetic understanding between Auxiliary members and leaders of Young Girls' groups.

A splendid representation of Auxiliaries was shown by the Roll Call which, with the singing of a hymn, closed the afternoon session.

In the evening Devotional Exercises were conducted by members of St. Andrew's Church, and greetings from Presbytery were brought by the Moderator, Rev. A. Nicoll. He complimented the members of Kingston Presbyterial on the splendid success of their efforts and spoke of the large place which women's organizations occupy in the work of both the local church and larger fields.

Mrs. Ekins again addressed the Presbyterial on the subject of proportional giving and the importance of giving God first place in our lives with reference to time talents and possessions. She said that these "hard times" constituted a real challenge to the Christian Church and urged that each member make true in order that the great work of the W.M.S. may go on with the thought of reverence. It had been her privilege to visit various mission fields in the West and she was therefore able to give first-hand information as to the trying and adverse conditions under which our representatives are labouring in these far distant places.

NEW DISCOVERIES CONFIRM VIRTUES OF BRAN IN DIET

Supplies "Bulk" and Vitamin B for Constipation : Also Iron for Blood

For ten years, now, millions have found Kellogg's ALL-BRAN a safe, pleasant way to overcome common constipation—with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy that so often result from this condition.

Recent laboratory tests show that ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. In addition, ALL-BRAN contains twice as much blood-building iron, by weight, as beef liver.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like the "bulk" in lettuce. Inside the body, it absorbs moisture and forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable. It is not habit-forming.

Think how much better it is to enjoy this delicious cereal than to take endless pills and drugs, which often lead to harmful habits.

Two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases with every meal—are usually sufficient. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

report of the International Student Volunteer Convention held in Buffalo in December was given by Miss Gladys Simmons of Kingston who had been a delegate from Queen's University. That meeting was attended and addressed by great leaders of missionary enterprise in all parts of the world. It is interesting to note that from that convention a Resolution was forwarded to President Roosevelt requesting that a member of the Students' Volunteer Movement be included in the American representation to th Geneva Conference.

At the close of this session a vote of thanks was extended to the ladies of Trenton for their kind hospitality and to the soloists and choir who rendered efficient service.

The following officers were elected for 1932:

Hon. President—Mrs. A. Morrice, Belleville.

President—Mrs. G. A. Reid, Belleville.

AGED MARMORA RESIDENT DIES

James Charles Bailey Was Son of Pioneer of Station

Marmora, Feb. 8—About midnight on Monday the death occurred at his residence in Marmora township of the oldest lifelong resident of the township in the person of James Charles Bailey.

Deceased who was eighty-nine years of age, was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Bailey, pioneer settlers of North Marmora. About four miles north of the village used to stand a post office and store which were kept by the late Mr. Bailey, father. The cross roads adjacent later became known as Bailey's Corners.

When about thirty-five years ago Holy Trinity Anglican Church was erected in the section of the township, the Bailey and Jones families were the two Anglican families in large share in the erection.

The late Mr. Bailey was married to Sarah, daughter of the late Hugh Jones, also a pioneer settler in the township in 1862 and some subsequent years. Her demise took place about fifteen years ago.

Surviving are three sons, Hugh, of Detroit; James, Sidney and Thomas, and Charles of Marmora township. Mrs. Matilda Allen also survived by, one brother, Joshua of Marmora township, and sisters, Mrs. John Lough and Mrs. John Bell both of Marmora township.

The late Mr. Bailey was one of the most enthusiastic agriculturists in Marmora township. His stock at one years ranking among the best. He was a member of the Methodist Church and was one of the oldest members of the Masonic Lodge. He joined Marmora L.O.L. No. 129 on January 1st, 1861, and was the following were the following provincial officers: W.M. Thomas Bailey; Treasurer, Robert Recording Secretary, Ezekiel Boyd.

Mr. Bailey had only been in existence eleven years when the Bailey's Corners store followed his father's footsteps in joining. Deceased was also a member of the township council for a number of years and was for many years school trustee.

The funeral took place on Thursday last from the late residence at 1 o'clock to St. Paul's church, Marmora, where Rev. Mr. Caldwell officiating. Interment was made in the family plot in the Marmora Protestant cemetery.

The pall bearers were Lavender and children, visited relatives at Belleville on Sunday.

Miss Myrtle Campion has taken a position in Toronto.

Mr. Gerald Wright was admitted to Nichols Hospital, Peterboro, on Monday, where he will undergo an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Wells attended the club dance at Stirling on Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Clayton Potts is visiting her father who is ill at Consecon.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Madden and family of Peterboro are spending a few days with relatives in Marmora.

Mrs. James McGrath left on Wednesday for Cochrane owing to the illness of her son Raymond. Miss Casey, who is to be operated on for appendicitis.

At a special meeting of the Marmora Village Council held on Monday night, Hugh Cullen was again appointed to the various offices held by him for the past years including that of constable and caretaker of the Town Hall. Memorial Building, pump house and equipment. Mr. Cullen has been reappointed school attendance officer by the Public School Board.

A very interesting euchre and dance was held on Wednesday evening in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, Seventeen tables of euchre were in play. Mrs. Hugh Cullen won the ladies' prize for euchre and Mr. John Doyle the gent's prize. Miss Rita Deacon and Mr. Jas. McGrath were the winners in the bridge prizes. Refreshments were served, dancing was enjoyed by all present.

The regular monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee was held in the Deloro Hall on Monday evening. R. A. Elliot, chairman, presiding over a large attendance. Only one suggestion was reported as being received during January. There were no accidents to mar the months good record. The star was awarded to the silver plant. C. W. Buskard reporting for the Inspection Committee, told of suggestions having been passed to the various departments which had been completed or were in course of completion.

N. A. Kilpatrick described prone method practice which took place in the silver plant, and E. Hewitt was appointed to carry out similar practices in the oxide plant during February. After C. H. Burgess had presented the monthly statement of the Benevolent Relief Funds and the Safety Committee had briefly reported activities of the Inspection Committee, the meeting adjourned.

74th Anniversary of Wedding Day

Orillia, Ont., Feb. 5.—Seventy-four years of married life believed to be the unique in Canada, were completed today by Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Irish of Orillia. Mr. Irish will be 96 next Friday and his wife is a few months his senior. The aged couple are natives of Haldimand county and have lived in Orillia for sixty years.

British Chiefs in Shanghai

On the shoulders of these men rests the responsibility for, the protection of British and foreign citizens in war-torn Shanghai. This unusual photograph, made during a conference of the military chiefs, shows, left to right, Colonel R. S. Hooker, commander of the United States Marines in the International Settlement; Major Price Williams, of the British defense forces; Major General Barrett, also of the British, and Brigadier-General Richard Fleming, in command of Britain's troops in the storm centre. The forces of both nations are being heavily reinforced to cope with any emergencies that may arise.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES ARE HELD IN TWEED HIGH SCHOOL

Miss Mavia Maguire Wins Annual Contest in Oratory

Tweed—The annual Commencement in connection with Tweed High School was held on Friday evening, February 5th. Departing from the usual custom of holding it in the Opera House, the School Board decided to hold the exercises in the High School this year. Printed invitations were issued for the event.

As the guests assembled they were greeted by the principal, Mr. T. R. Moffat, and the chairman Mr. W. E. Ketchenson who directed them to one of the class rooms.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. John Gunn, Chairman of the Board in 1931. In his address Mr. Quinn urged upon the students the importance of perseverance if success is to be attained. In the struggle incident to human life in the years to come, success will in a large measure be determined by the equipment obtained in youth. The present is the time of preparation.

The High School boys were called upon and entertained the audience by singing two rollicking choruses.

Mrs. Fawcett and Miss Dorothy Sager, contributed two vocal duets, Schubert's Serenade and Tate's Hoffman in a very pleasing manner. Miss Vyvyan Kindred furnished a sympathetic accompaniment.

One of the principle events of the evening was the Oratorical Contest for students of the local High School, for this event Mr. W. E. Ketchenson, a former Chairman of the School Board had awarded a Gold Medal.

The contestants and their subjects:

Miss Dorothy Barnett—"Soviet Russia."

Miss Mavis McGuire— "World Conditions."

Miss Margaret Moffat— "Poetry"

Miss Pauline Gregory— "Lifting the Ladders By Which We Rise"

Miss Berne Rathbone—"The Royal North West Mounted Police."

Mr. Harold McCutcheon—"Military Training in Schools and Colleges Is Not Advisable."

The winner of the contest, Miss Mavis McGuire, a student of Form Four gave a forceful and convincing address on the subject "World Conditions" referring to the difficulties under which the leading nations of the world are labouring but expressing the belief that these conditions will in time right themselves, and that prosperity will once more return.

Miss Dorothy Barnett, who spoke on the subject "Soviet Russia" traced the history of Russia briefly though the Great War down to the present day. She referred particularly to the Five-Year Plan with which Russia is experimenting. Miss Barnett is a student of Form One, and spoke with the assurance of experience by her charming manner and pleasing well-modulated voice. The judges placed her second.

The other contestants spoke well on the subjects of their choice.

Mr. W. S. Gordon who presented the medals to the winner of this contest, complimented the contestants on their addresses. He regretted that only one high school was represented and suggested the advisability of confining the contest to High School boys in 1933.

The Oratorical contest was followed by a chorus by the High School Girls and two delightful solos by Miss Dorothy Sager, who sang in her usual pleasing manner.

Another feature of the programme was the presentation of Medals, Scholarships and Prizes.

Fifth Form Medal, won by Francis Thompson and presented by Mr. John Gunn.

Fourth Form Medal won by Mavis McGuire and presented by W. L. Ketcheson.

Third Form Medal, won by Margaret Moffat, presented by L. D. Corcoran.

PARLIAMENT OPENS WITH SPLENDOR AND TRADITIONAL CEREMONIES

The main picture shows the scene in the Senate Chamber of the Canadian House of Parliament when His Excellency the Governor-General opened the second session of the Canadian Parliament. Her Excellency the Countess of Bessborough is shown seated on His Excellency's left, while the Senators and beautifully gowned ladies occupy the seats on both sides of the Upper Chamber. When the ceremony and the usually formal speech from the throne had been concluded, Premier Bennett of the Dominion, was standing on the dais on the right of the Governor-General, making a short speech. Inset shows the Earl of Bessborough taking the salute from the Guard of Honor on his arrival at the Parliament Buildings to perform the opening ceremonies.

'Twixt Death and Life

by Agnes Kelly

William Blakewell suddenly projected himself upright in his chair, and began to sort the papers on the desk with nervous, almost desperate haste. He realized for the first time how intensely stupid he had been. A second's relief not to have to think any more; to know exactly what he was going to do. He simply MUST NOT think. He had reached his decision. It was final—inevitable. All he wanted now was to get the thing over with as quickly as possible.

He snatched up document after document, hastily scanning each one before tossing it into the waste-basket in place. A few of the papers he replaced in the desk. A slightly haggard expression about the mouth and a visible trembling of his hands revealed the strain under which he labored.

While he was thus occupied, a young woman came into the room with a sheaf of papers in her hand. She stared in surprise at Blakewell's bent head at the desk. If she sensed anything unusual in the attitude of her employer there was no hint of it in her impersonal voice when she spoke.

"Mr. Blakewell, I have come for you to sign, Mr. Blakewell."

Blakewell looked up. You need not wait for them this evening, Blakewell took the letters and laid them on the desk.

"Thank you, Mr. Blakewell," she answered. Then, hesitating, she left the room. But he was not conscious of her presence. He was absorbed in his task and made no reply.

It was dark outside when Blakewell finally pushed back his chair and stood up. Well, he was finished. There was nothing more left to be done here. The letters which Miss Clarke had brought to him still lay open on the desk. He tore them to pieces without even a glance at their contents.

He had almost forgotten about Miss Clarke. He was glad the letters reminded him. A letter of recommendation was the least he could do in return for the devotion for her faithful and efficient service. He hastily scribbled the letter and was about to seal it when an idea occurred to him. He took up his pen and tore it up. He was conscious of a sudden tenderness for the girl. He would do more than that. He would give her a generous check in addition to the letter of recommendation. After a last glance around the room, he turned off the light, closing the door softly behind him.

When Blakewell reached the street he paused a moment to make his decision, staring vaguely at the lighted shop windows on the other side. He slightly surprised that everything still looked the same; the buildings, the brightly-lighted windows that drew the attention of the passers-by, even the people jostling each other, unheeded, unheeding. They were unaffected by the event of his decision. After a last glance around the scene, he turned his face away from the door softly behind him.

When Blakewell reached the street he paused a moment to make his decision, staring vaguely at the lighted shop windows on the other side. He slightly surprised that everything still looked the same; the buildings, the brightly-lighted windows that drew the attention of the passers-by, even the people jostling each other, unheeded, unheeding. They were unaffected by the event of his decision. After a last glance around the scene, he turned his face away from the door softly behind him.

Thrusting his hands deep into the pockets of his coat, he started to walk rapidly toward his destination. His way brought him to a strange part of the city's neighborhood, where his footsteps seemed to be the only sound to break the quiet of the deserted streets. Blakewell was glad of the solitude, oblivious to his surroundings.

A voice high-pitched with nervousness spoke suddenly out of the darkness.

"Put 'em up, mister, high!" And Blakewell felt something poked into his left side. He stopped and stared at the man, stupified, scarcely comprehending the interruption. The bandit whose unseasonal increased with each passing moment, dug his gun deeper at what seemed unexpected resistance, and repeated the command.

Blakewell jerked his hands from his pockets. As he did so the right hand unintentionally struck against the weapon. It flew upward, a report echoed in the empty street, and a bullet whizzed past Blakewell's head. For an instant both men stood paralyzed with astonishment and fright, then Blakewell had convulsively clutched the other man, knocked the gun from his shaking fingers, and both were on the ground, struggling desperately.

The sudden impulse of terror that had caused Blakewell to raise the hold-up passed, and with it the number impulsiveness that had held him in its grip all the long afternoon. Everything else was forgotten in a sort of Dance exaltation of the physical combat for the protection of his person and property. In spite of the superior strength of his opponent and his own fifty-odd years, Blakewell felt that he had never possessed such cruseness and courage. The bandit, however, was accustomed in making his escape from the scene and the wrath of his intended victims. After only a couple of minutes of the scuffle which to the principals seemed to be lasting for hours, the bandit with a quick lunge wrenched away from Blakewell, and the half-running, half-crawling, disappeared as he had come.

Blakewell rose to his feet, dusted his clothing, recovered his hat and stick, and then, mechanically adjusted it to his head. He was breathing heavily from the exertion, but that kind of battle was still on him. He stood in the deserted street for several minutes. For a moment he could hardly recollect what had happened in his present surroundings. Then memory came back like a drifting tide; memory and a horror of the thing he had been about to do. He had not intended to do the mood but it was impossible.

Why had he struggled with the hold-up? What had he been fighting for, anyway? His life? He had been about to throw that away. His property? It was of little value except what was in his pockets. He brought out his handkerchief and looked at his hand.

Running footsteps sounded, but Blakewell did not move. A police-man appeared at his side.

"Hello, what's the matter? Didn't I hear a shot a little bit ago?"

"Yes," Blakewell said, "I accidentally struck his gun, and it discharged. I guess it frightened him and he ran off."

The officer looked at him sharply.

"See, Officer, he wouldn't have gotten much. Maybe a hold-up to get car-fare, but that's all I had." He showed the police-man the few coins in his hand. "You wouldn't think, would you, that a bandit of that class would like that would mean the difference between life and death? Just a few cents more or less."

And while the officer gave him a curious look, Blakewell was whistling gayly for the first time in months.

The Dime-a-Dance Girl

By Joan Clayton

"I know money is important," she conceded. "Awfully important in this day of ways. But when you think about love—the flushed youthfulness—why all at once it's just gobbling." Then, Myra would think deeply and earnestness, "money is so important in love that without it—some money I mean, not a lot—love itself is nothing."

"I don't for a minute believe it!" Look at me and you'll believe it. Each of money has robbed me of the years of my life. If there had been any way under heaven for Bert and me to marry when we wanted to—by now I'd have had a home—all the things a woman wants. Instead—"

She broke off, appalled at what she had been about to put into words. Not even to Ellen could she admit that of late Bert had seemed coldly restless and impatient, bored to talk of that far-away marriage. She laughed nervously, apologetically.

Ellen, uncomfortable but still securely holding her own opinion, hastened to change the subject.

"That dress looks awfully well on you," she said, looking approvingly at her sister-in-law. "I'm sure than it ever looked on whichever cousin wore it."

Myra glanced down at her lightblue voile, beautifully cut, freshly laundered, and indeed becoming to her pale bloodlessness.

"I wouldn't have bought it," she said. "I don't like short sleeves. But it has certainly been handy."

"That's the trouble with things you get," Ellen agreed. "She's left to you." Then, still in awe of Aunt Myra to keep on sending things. Most of them are scarcely worn."

She sighed a little at the vision of the sweet, pretty girl who could discard their frocks because they were tired of them. There were coupons to pay for getting money.

"It is nice of her," Myra admitted in a low voice, "Even," she added dirty. The dress, with a laugh not so amused as she meant it to be, "if she never sends black and you have to wear black in the street."

Myra hesitated and went on with a sidewise glance at Ellen. "I do think she might come to see us sometime. She's been in New York several times. I know. I've read about her in the society columns. But then, we haven't a telephone."

Both girls were silent. Both knew that if their wealthy English aunt, whom neither had ever seen, really desired a meeting she could arrange for with the aid of a five-cent stamp. Myra's comment was only an evasion to save their pride. They strolled on, two pretty girls linked arm in arm, through the hot summer sunshine, down the dirty shabby street. Ellen, in spite of herself, felt her spirits sinking. They reached the subway station that would part them.

"Do you still believe," Myra asked in a discouraged way, "that some day we'll have things? The things other people have? Cars and country clubs and a chance to enjoy being young? Or are we just fooling ourselves?"

"Something's bound to happen. Our ship will come in—it may be just around the corner," Ellen responded with vague, forced cheerfulness.

"That ship sank long ago," Myra said sharply, her bitterness and anger returning in full force. "We walk with it. How are you and I ever going to get married? Where are you going to meet a man good enough for you?"

"At Dreamland maybe," Ellen flippantly tried to stop her sister. But Myra ignored the interruption.

"I believe you will always be spending every nickel before it's earned. It's like that forever. Mother will get sicker and more irresponsible. Bert will fill up on gin and Mike will grow up and get the same sort of job we have. It's just no use trying."

"Oh Myra, Myra!" Ellen protested staunchly. "Where's your sense of proportion? All this because I'm going to work a half night in a few weeks! Of course things will get better. We're only having our hard times now instead of later. It's been hardest on you. But you'll be married this time next year, and forget how long it was. Just wait."

"I'm 26."

"Then don't act as if you're 96." Ellen was down to the subway now and plunged through the turnstile.

CHAPTER II

During the long hot morning at Barclay's department store Myra's words lingered with Ellen. Myra had said that the Rossiter family would always be a drag on her and ahead of the poorhouse. Myra had said that the Rossiter girls would never find men financially able to marry them. What a pang in her heart! Ellen thought that she engaged for nine years to Bert, worn out with unceasing economy and the opportunity, the break that never came. Enough to make any girl bitter.

In an age of specialization Mike must have a chance, and how was that chance to come? How was Mike to go to college as other boys did? How was Mike to get out of the hell of All of the Rossiters dashed ease and beauty and comfort, while all of them deserved those things.

As she mechanically sold bargains of 15-cent cotton flannel for women who for some unknown reason wanted cotton flannel in summer, she girl's mind returned unrationally to that morning conversation.

Were the Rossiters fooling themselves? Were they indeed all lost in worse than mediocrity? Did the past stories of a family count for nothing when the present of that family was poverty?

"What's eating you?" Jenny Kirkpatrick, her counter mate, asked once, "Nothing," Ellen replied again. O. K. Chesterton.

lessly.

But she felt weary and discouraged. Her head ached from the heat and from the tireless complaints of shoppers who desired more for their money than their money would buy. "Like me," thought Ellen bitterly.

With noon and the lunch hour she cheered. As she combed her hair and powdered her dumpy face she observed that she had a great deal of company. The dressing room was full of unhappy girls, less well off than herself, many of them fading, past the age of romance and past the possibility of attaining happier fulfillment.

Ellen was young. She had undeniable good looks and distinction. Just around the corner who knew what might be in store? She swung out into the street. With a sudden was jaded and willing in the August sunshine. Even the shop windows seemed dusty and the merchandise, usually so enticing, was dimmed by the blazing noon light.

But Ellen felt the customary lift of spirit as she left the store. She was almost eager now for the coming adventure. After all, she had never been inside Dreamland. There was no reason why it might not be fun. There would be youth there at least. It was better to dance than to sit evening after evening in a stuffy apartment wondering how two small salaries were to be stretched to fed and clothe three adults and one baby.

That feeling of suppressed excitement was still with her when she reached the dancehall a few steps off Broadway and plunged into the grateful dusk of the building. It left her abruptly when, at the second door, she left the entrance foyer and stepped into Dreamland.

The big, green-decorated room, even with all the shades drawn, appeared cheap and tawdry. The paper roses that shaded the lights were not only imitation— they were dirty. The floor, not yet crowded, was mussy, with confetti remaining from the night before. For did the passing gilt chairs and tables arranged around the walls present a setting for a romance. Or the glass ticket booth near the door like the ticket booths of motion picture houses. As though romance were for sale!

Ellen squared her jaw, assured herself that she had not come for romance, and walked toward the door marked "Office—Jacob Salomon, Manager." She was a little surprised that there were no other girls waiting and a little cast down as well. That probably was a clear indication that Dreamland jobs were not too profitable.

She knocked at the frosted glass door. A querulous voice bade her enter.

Jacob Salomon did not rise when she came in. He was wearing a hat. He did not remove his hat. Nor did he remove the cigar in his mouth when he inquired her business. Ellen told him.

"D'ja ever dance professionally?"

"No. I learned. But I'm a very good dancer," replied Ellen in a voice as brusque as his own.

She had no intention of being intimidated by Jacob Salomon. He roused some his unlikely first, wound up a portable victrola, put on a record and stood back.

"I'll try you out," he said.

Ellen looked startled. But evidently Salomon expected her to dance with him. He was holding out his arms. She had never before danced with a man in his shirt sleeves, a man wearing a hat and smoking a cigar. But she stepped firmly forward.

Ellen was a light and graceful dancer. She was surprised to find that Salomon, for all his bulk, danced better than any partner she had ever had before. After two turns of the room he released her, stopped the phonograph and flopped into his swivel chair again.

"You're on," he announced.

Turn up with your evening dress at eight o'clock tonight. You're allowed Monday's off if you want 'em. Take any other night off, without expecting an advance, and you're fired. That's all."

Ellen smiled faintly.

"I'm afraid it isn't all," she observed unruffled. "I have to be satisfied with the job myself. What is my salary?"

"No salary. Commissions. The boys pay 10 cents a dance straight into your hand. You pick up your giving private lessons. You get half the takings. You split your half with me."

He squinted his eyes and regarded her with cold appraisal of a customer or a musical comedy director.

"You're good-looking," he admitted at last. "And just looked it. "You got class, too. I guess you'll knock the spots off any of the hostesses we've got now. You ought to make three or four dollars an evening easy—on the average. Some days. Easier than clerking in a department store. Well, what?"

Ellen was considerably taken aback. Color rose in her cheeks, but her voice was steady as she admitted that she did clerk in a store and intended to continue to do so. Salomon indifferently assured her that such a course was as many way to quick suicide ,but he did not appear to be really interested.

"Another thing," Ellen said as she prepared to leave. "I haven't any real evening dress. Only semi-evening dresses."

Salomon's feet, which had been cocked upon the desk, came down on the floor.

AND ATTENTIVE TO OUR DUTY —
WHOOP-R-R-R

IS HONORED AT BANQUET

One Hundred and Fifty Attend Affair for Warden Hartt

A complimentary banquet in honour Warden W. R. Hartt was held in the Town Hall on Thursday, February fourth, last, at 6 p.m. The President of the Ladies Aid, Mrs. A. J. Austin and her committees included the entire representatives of the United Church, sponsored a Govern ourne Banquet. This was much appreciated and Mr. Hartt tendered a hearty vote of thanks to which Mrs. Austin suitably replied, on behalf of the ladies in charge.

The tables were tastefully decorated in red and white with a silver Candlebras containing red candles centred on the head table. The flowers hyacinths and primulas blended beautifully on the different tables.

One hundred and fifty men were seated comfortably and among the guests were County Councillors, Reeves and Members of Parliament, Warden McCallum and brother John, Dr. Callahan and brother John, Callahan of Toronto and many nearby town guests. The programme was as follows:

TOAST

"Brevity is the soul of wit"

Toastmaster ..... C. F. Wessels

THE KING

Solo—"Killarney" Miss Flora McDonald (By special request of Mr. Hartt.)

The visitors—Welcomed by D. S. Austin.

The Dominion Parliament.—W. K. Fraser M.P., and M. E. Maybee ex-M. P.

The Ontario Legislature—J. J. McAllister M.P. and W. R. Ireland M.P.P. Rev. J. F. B. Belford ex-M. P.P.

Our Guest—Warden W. R. Hartt.

Educational Institutions — Response by A. L. Martin, P.S.I.

Soldiers—Dr. E. A. McQuade and J. Gosnell.

Plants—C. F. Copeland.

In addition to the programme, Dr. Callahan and John Callahan gave wonderful addresses. These men were born in this community and still own the old homestead. During the evening a large framed portrait of the Warden was unveiled and a beautiful basket presented to Warden W. R. Hartt by the Township of Murray.

On Wednesday evening the community sponsored a surprise party in honor of Rev Asa Rogers, minister of the "Friends" Church, to celebrate his 85th birthday, some fifty friends and neighbors gathered at eight o'clock and found Mr. Rogers long down resting, but he soon was down stairs to welcome the guests. Alexander Dunn, was chairman of the evening and gave a talk as to the changes throughout the years since Mr. Rogers was a boy. Improvements made possible thru electricity, motors, automobiles, aeroplanes, radio and many others. We today are living in a wonderful age of science. Among the guests were old friends of Mr. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown of Stirling. An aged friend and neighbor present was Eli Terril, a staunch member of the Friends Church. Other members being present with the hostess Lydia Nelson.

A large number of young people were present, the address to Mr. Robert Hall was read by Robert Hall and a gift of money presented by Hazel Thompson. Many pleasant and thoughtful words were expressed in appreciation by Mr. Rogers. A duet was nicely rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown.

There was a place for every one to take part in the programme, and lastly but not least a social time with refreshments. The hour was late when the people left to take their different homes, after wishing the aged christian gentleman, Asa Rogers a few more happy years of service in the church.

The Stirling Township Teachers Association entertained the teachers from Brighton and Trenton to a social in the Continuation School on Wednesday evening. The get together was very beneficial in discussing school problems and then the social entertainment to get better acquainted.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cunningham of Trenton spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. C. R. calling on Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith.

Mrs. Edgar Shaw and daughter Jean of Sault Ste Marie spent a few days with Mrs. D. S. Austin and calling on Many other relatives.

Miss Julia Ireland is spending a few weeks with Toronto with her uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker.

Dr. Hess and Mrs. Hess of Hastings, called on Mr. and Mrs S. L. Terrill on Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Palmer entertained to a dinner party on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert McColl entertained friends to dinner on Wednesday.

Dr. Mcquade will open up his office again in the village and will be there every Wednesday afternoon and will continue his practice in this community.

"World Day of Prayer" will be observed by the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church including the Presbyterian Society, Anglican, and the Holiness Movement Church will assemble together in the United Church parlors on Friday, the 12th at 2.45 p.m. for the observance of the "World Day of Prayer" the program to be followed will be taken in part by each society mentioned. The program is similar in form to that which will be used by christian women through out the world, prepared by Mrs. H. Smith, England, Mrs. Parks.

Hold fast in prayer.

SEED CORN IS PLENTIFUL

Owing to Effectiveness of Control of Corn Borer

OTTAWA, Feb. 9 (CP) — Owing to the effectiveness with which control measures have been carried out by corn growers, particularly in Southern Ontario, under the direction of the Provincial and Federal Departments of Agriculture, substantial supplies of seed corn are again available in the strains suited to Canadian conditions which in most years are due this district popular as a source of seed supply.

The Department of Agriculture, in a report today, states that shelled corn from quarantine areas, which has been certified by Federal inspectors, can be used with every assurance that it is free from European corn borer infestation. Seed corn may be shipped out of the quarantine areas when accompanied by the certificate of an authorized federal inspector.

MINISTER SAYS HE'S PACIFIST

Minister of Trinity United Church, Huntsville, States Position

Huntsville, Ont., Feb. 8. — Rev. Lorne Cavell Smith, Pastor of Trinity United Church, last night told his congregation enlistment for national defence was in violation of the principles of christianity and declared conscientious objectors to arms even in a war for the defence of his country.

Mr. Smith, in both his sermons denounced secretly diplomacy as the chief underlying cause of the war and said the cost of the war was out of all proportion to the benefits derived by the allies.

In an open forum following the evening service he restated his position and said: "I am a pacifist."

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle

"FRANKENSTEIN" PROVES PASTMASTER OF THRILLERS

Universal obviously went into the production of its weird picture, "Frankenstein", which opened to three capacity audiences at the Belle yesterday, and which is slated to hold the boards at the popular playhouse till Wednesday night, on the same huge scale of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame", "The Phantom of the Opera", "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The King of Jazz".

The "horror" fans flocked in especially numbers yesterday to determine first-hand whether "Frankenstein" really lived up to all the shocking advance notices that have been coming from the Hollywood studios where the picture has been shattering house attendance on extensive engagements.

"Frankenstein" sets out in a very fresh manner to present the most gruesome kind of entertainment. First a good story is provided in between two black curtains and warns the audience about the picture's horrible contents, and finally in his concluding sentence that the climb to have added to the picture's terror one pays the slightest attention to the story, for the picture is one that probably wish they had. At any rate no such hysterical audience has ever been seen from a screen audience.

The story concerns a young scientist whose one great "hobby" is to create life. He fixes himself an experimental laboratory in a frightful old windmill up in the mountains and sets out trying to create life from various parts of dead bodies he moulds a hideous creature and into the creature he puts the spirit of a criminal. Then, through his own galvanic power he brings it to life, using rays, the thing springs into action.

Colin Clive plays the absorbed medico who succeeds in scientifically manufacturing human life, and Mae Clarke, John Boles, Boris Karloff, Frederick Kerr, Edward Van Sloan and Frederick Kerr complete the cast. Mr. Karloff falls the lot of playing the role of the Monster which Dr. Frankenstein tries to slay.

Special attention apparently has been given in the selection of the short offering to "Frankenstein", with "Frankenstein", and include a funny Mack Sennett comedy, "Crystal House," featuring the famous Radio star Bing Crosby and a host of funmakers, another entertaining and revealing "Grand Souvenir" reel, one of the funniest "Mickey Mouse" cartoons seen in Belleville in many months, and the Fox Movietone.

At The Capitol

WHEELER AND WOOLSEY NEXT AT CAPITOL

Mixing a brand new assortment of comedy ingredients with music and the ludicrously funny situation of two lawyers in the midst of the Reno divorce mill, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are scheduled to make another triumphant return to the Capitol Theatre in "Cracked Nuts" commencing Wednesday, for three days.

The picture is the first humorous treatment of the Reno divorce situation to come out of Hollywood and provides the two ace comedians with two of the most ludicrous comedy roles in their varied stage and screen careers.

As in former Wheeler and Woolsey comedies, Dorothy Lee provides the romantic interest in a story that is filled with budding romances and the ludicrous wiles seeking release from marriage.

The Radio Pictures studio has made the picture more elaborate than is usually the case in comedies. Particularly is this true of the settings which include a magnificent Reno home of extreme modernistic design and the interior of a bizarre law office in which Wheeler and Woolsey practice law hundreds of divorce cases that come their way in the course of court trial and office. The secretaries in the office, incidentally are the prettiest models on the Paramount lot.

The film was directed by William A. Seiter with a supporting cast which includes Joseph Cawthorn, Sam Hardy, Edna Marian, Leon Janney, O'Neil, Arthur Hoyt, Mitchell Harris and Josephine Whittell.

There will be a special matinee for children on Wednesday afternoon at 4:30, when the admission of ten cents will be charged. There will be the matinee at which adults are welcome too, to this matinee.

"Sherlock Holmes Fatal Hour" appears for the last time to-night.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 8 (AP)—The United States looks upon the proposal to demilitarize Chinese ports as reopening the question of the partition of China and will oppose such a move.

This position became clear as the state department today as officials gave their attention to unofficial reports of the position outlined in Tokyo. Officially the question has not yet been brought to the attention of the United States government.

Dr. Hawking Yen, Councellor of the Chinese delegation, said demilitarization would be "more serious than the dismemberment of China, and I can scarcely believe such a proposal will be made by Japan to other powers."

Attempt to Blow Up Train in India

Bombay, Feb. 8 (AP)—An apparent attempt to blow up a special train, carrying the governor and members of a committee on constitutional reform investigating India's problems was disclosed today. After the train had left New Delhi for Agra, Friday night a section crew found traces of a bomb explosion near a railway bridge outside New Delhi, but the damage was slight. It was at this spot the special train carrying Lord Irwin, former Viceroy, was bombed two years ago, Lord.

Stability of Ontario Finances Noted in Throne Speech

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10 (By The Canadian Press)—With a 16-gun salute roaring over Queen's Park, the third session of the 18th Legislative Assembly of Ontario opened here, today. Skies were grey as brilliantly gowned women tripped into the building. Galleries were packed. Seating capacity on the floor of the House had been greatly extended. Amid the colour and splendor of tradition, Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice of the Province, who has been acting as administrator since the retirement of Hon. W. D. Ross from the Lieut.-Governorship, read the Speech from the Throne. Important legislation foreseen by the Ontario Government in the speech from the Throne read at the opening of the Legislature today by Sir William Mulock. Among other things, the Government proposes:—

1—Provide a modified moratorium for mortgagors.

2—Amend the Old Age Pensions Act.

3—Amalgamate the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board with the Board of Municipal affairs.

4—Extension to the fullest possible extent of

CAVALRY RIDE AGAINST GUNS

Chinese Horsemen Rival Heroism of Mongol Ancestors

(By Morris J. Harris)
(Copyright 1932, by the Associated Press)

Shanghai, Feb. 10—The Japanese directed another determined attack against the battered Nordrese and smouldering village of Kiangwan today after Chinese cavalry were reported to have inflicted heavy casualties at dawn with the Japanese cavalry and Sabre charge in the face of rattling machine guns.

The Chinese cavalry attack was reported by Japanese to have been run part of the Chapei battle-front. The horsemen, the reports said, rode against the Japanese in a dash not unlike that of their remote predecessors, the riders of the Mongol chiefs, wielding their sabres with vigor on the enemy in the face of the spitting machine guns.

Stork Visit is Helped By Plane

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 9—An aeroplane facilitated a visit of the stork to a Wolfe Island home yesterday. Dr. H. J. Hagerman, of the emergency call to the Island. He took an aeroplane across to the island and brought Mrs. Irvine into a local hospital by two hours later Mrs. Irvine gave birth to a baby boy. Both mother and child are reported doing well.

SHOPS ARE INACTIVE

Shanghai Feb. 10 (AP)—Operated businesses in Shanghai suspended January 30 as a protest against Japanese operations here, continued inactive here today under thevigilant picketing of members of the Chinese streets unions.

Food shops and some exchange shops were open but only in poorer parts of the city. Generally, however, business was done only surreptitiously, the threat of the street pickets being sufficient to keep the doors closed.

Colonies Will Attend Conference

LONDON, Feb. 10.—(Canadian Press Cables)—The Colonies will be represented at the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa, as well as Great Britain, the Dominions and India, it was announced last night. The Conference will thus be fully representative of the empire.

WALLACE DIES WAS PROLIFIC STORY WRITER

Double Pneumonia Takes Life of Detective Writer

WORTH MILLIONS

Has Written at Rate of 12 Volumes Every Year

Beverly Hills, Calif. Feb. 10—Edgar Wallace, who became one of the world's most prolific and highest paid writers after starting life as a newsboy in the slums of London, died this morning at 4.45 o'clock. Death was due to double pneumonia. He was 56 years of age.

The noted author of mystery stories was stricken Sunday with influenza. Pneumonia developed Monday, and since yesterday the writer had been in a semi-conscious condition.

At his bedside when he died were his secretary of many years, Robert Curtis; Walter Huston, the actor, and his physician.

Writing Scenarios

Wallace came to Hollywood from his home in England several months ago to write scenarios for the RKO-Radio Studios.

Known especially for his mystery novels, which he often wrote as rapidly as two a week, Wallace was one of the most distinguished writers of the day. He, however, laid no claim to literary genius.

Born in the squalor and poverty of London slums, Wallace's parents were so poor they had to leave him in the care of a public boarding school.

Odd Papers

At ten he sold papers on the streets and his education at school stopped at that age. At eleven he engaged himself as a cabin boy on a trawler which later cruised the North Sea.

When eighteen, he enlisted as a private soldier and saw service in South Africa for the period of the Boer War. During his six years of active campaigning he developed a latent talent for writing.

DEPRESSION HITS WOLVES AS IDLE MEN TAKE TO GUNS AND SLAUGHTER PACKS

North Bay, Feb. 10—Algoma district may rightly claim to be the most populous Northern Ontario area in so far as wolves are concerned, but that is where their wolf notoriety commences and ends. For January, the Algoma district game warden, Mr. Hall, has 41 killings, as represented in applications for the bounty. Nipissing district, through pelts cleared through the office of G. M. Parks, district game warden, North Bay, depicted its wolf population by 27 during the first month of the year. And that's not exceptional. During December, the killings were at the rate of three a day, so that the district was rid of close to 200 within two months. February opened out in a manner to indicate that it would set a new high in that respect.

Hard times have forced a large number of men who ordinarily follow lumbering occupations to try their hand at trapping and wolf killing. It is believed that a couple of wolves a month are equal to the remuneration for a month's work in a lumbering camp.

E. W. Worth Leaves to Instal Optical Plant in England

Will Make Home in Old Country For Some Time

3 ASSISTANTS

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund W. Worth will leave Belleville for Southbridge, Massachusetts, on Thursday, where they will spend a week prior to leaving for England where they will make their home for some months. They sail on the S. S. Majestic from New York City on February 19, and will take up their residence while in England at Watford, about a city of forty thousand population, some fifteen miles from London. At Watford the American Optical Company has purchased a large factory building and will proceed to equip with the necessary machinery to supply the British market with its goods. One carload of machinery was sent recently and two more from Southbridge, Massachusetts for this purpose.

Mr. Worth, superintendent of the American Optical Company Canadian plant at Belleville, was selected by the company to supervise the installation of machinery in the new plant in England and go to Watford as well which he left returning to Belleville and visit Mrs. Worth's relatives since from Belleville, temporary though it may be, will be greatly regretted by a large circle of friends.

During Mr. Worth's absence from Belleville the plant here will be managed by Mr. A. Turner Wells, of Southbridge, a grandnephew of the president of the American Optical Company, and Mr. Wells, Mr. Wells has arrived in the city and expects to be joined by his wife shortly after this week. They will occupy Mr. Worth's residence during his absence.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Worth installed the machinery of the American Optical Company plant in Belleville when it was first opened ago, arriving here May 15, 1922. The plant was located on the old Graham building facing Pinnacle street, which it occupied for a time. After two years in this location the company purchased the building then occupied and owned by the Belleville Business College on Bridge street, and the plant was transferred there. The business of the Canadian company is largely the Canadian trade and the overseas trade as well. Changing the British tariff policy led to the decision to instal a plant in England, hence Mr. Worth's transfer-ence. This necessitated a slight rearrangement of the company's Canadian business but the Belleville plant will not be adversely affected as it will be devoted entirely to supplying the Canadian trade with lenses for spectacles and as Canadian demand for optical lenses goods has been steadily increasing the output is increasing.

A permanent staff of sixty employees are employed at present and is one of the industries which has recovered fairly well from the effects of the temporary industrial paralysis which has been felt in other industrial centres.

Mr. Worth will have with him in England his two assistants members of the Belleville staff, Fred Bowles, Charles Monks and Bernard Richel, the two first becoming permanent members of the Belleville plant staff, while the latter will return to Belleville. Messrs. Bowles, Monks and Richel will sail from St. John, February 19, on the S.S. Montcalm.

10 MEN OBJECT TO TREATMENT

Complaint Forwarded to Government By Scarboro' Officer

TORONTO, Feb. 10.—That ten Scarboro' men who were sent to a Hurlimg conclusion camp in Kalsdar on the instructions of the Provincial authorities, after being certified medically fit were discharged after four days and told that they were ill for the reason that the information conveyed to the Scarboro' Township Council last night, in a communication from Reeve Gilbert C. Twigg.

According to the officer, the men, who were under the impression that they were being taken to an organized camp, reported that no medical was made, they were scattered and placed wherever a bed could be secured. At the end of four days, they were told their services were no longer required and that they were allowed to find their way back to Scarboro' as best they could. "21 secms to me to be a very unnecessary item of expense to equip these men and have them treated this way," stated Mr. Twigg, who added that he had complained to the Government Labor Bureau, and was waiting a reply.

Mr. Twigg's one of the ten men in question, in the Council Chamber, this letter was read, and corroborated the officer's statements. Charles Wright, a boy who was in the hands of a contractor of Scarboro' at Pine Orchard, is a former Markham clergyman. "We were treated like dogs and not like human beings," he told the Council.

N. Y. MARKET ON UPRISING

Trade News is Gloomy But Braced in Late Hours

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 10.— The stock market met support today, in the same area where the decline concluded early in January.

The turn came after several issues had registered new lows in the day's dealings, and was accompanied with a run in of short in Union Pacific, in advance of tomorrow's dividend declaration. Trade news on the whole still rather gloomy, but Washington news is to the effect that Senator Glass' bill to revive the War Finance Corporation has attered met with a favorable reception in some quarters in Wall Street.

The market's ability to rally after price averages had approximated the 1932 bear market low on Jan. 5 was regarded as encouraging by market followers.

INTENSE COLD WAVE GRIPPING BRITISH ISLES

Numerous Deaths Reported From Various Cities

SNOWBOUND

Brisk Snow Flurries Are Reported in Paris Today

London, Feb. 10—Intense cold came to most of Europe today accompanied by snowflurries, and numerous deaths were reported from various cities.

London had its first snowfall of any consequence while some of the rural districts of England were hampered by a foot or more of snow, which interfered with traffic.

A strong easterly gale was blowing with occasional snow squalls. All small craft in the English channel was driven to shelter.

Paris reported brisk snow flurries this morning, marking the coldest day of the winter the mercury at 3 below zero centigrade or 26 degrees above fahrenheit. One third of the country was reported under snow, and one death at Rheims was attributed to the cold snap.

Continental dispatches said the bitterest cold in years prevailed in many sections of Rumania, with temperatures dropping to below 40 degrees. Eleven persons succumbed on a wagon near Chisinau Bessarabia, their four horses also were frozen. Two families were reported found frozen to death in another Bessarabian village and the Danube was frozen from bank to bank.

INCOME TAX OFFICE MOVED

After Alterations Will Be Located in Old Stand and Bank Bldg.

The Dominion Income Tax Office for the district of Belleville—this comprising the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Peterboro—located at 27-29 Campbell street, since 1919, is moving to the premises formerly occupied by the Standard Bank, corner of Bridge and Front streets. Official notification of the removal was received this morning by Major S. J. Gilmore, acting inspector for the district.

Necessary repairs to the premises are now going on, and the Income Tax Confirmation Co. making the alterations.

When the Dominion Income Tax Office opened in Belleville in 1919, the first year of the district, the fall of 1919, the original office was located in the Standard Bank Building. During the summer of 1919 when larger quarters were required the move was made to the present office in Campbell street.

The transfer of location coincides at the present time, with the completion of the staff to adjust assessments for their busiest period of the year which begins along the first of March. It will be remembered also, to give taxpayers throughout the district time to have their returns examined with its new location.

Conscience Troubles Hoarders of Gold

London, Feb. 10 (CP)— Gold hoarders who are being forced by the "hard times" to disgorge are wrestling with their consciences in the face of conflicting blandishments of leading bullion dealers and the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

The dealers offer 27 shillings (6.43 at par) for each gold sovereign ($4.86) and one dealer is buying a thousand sovereigns a day and expects most, now the public has been assured it is not illegal to sell above the face value of the coin. On the other hand the treasury exhorts the public to pay their sovereigns into the banks, without premium.

91 Automobiles Are Lost When Five Buildings Burn at Quebec

Quebec, Que., Feb. 10 (CP)—Six families were rendered homeless when five buildings including a large three storey garage, two three-storey tenements and a large cattle stable and hangar, and ninety-one automobiles including eleven new motors were destroyed by fire early today. The loss at first thought to be nearly a quarter of a million dollars, was said after a brief inspection to be about $150,000. The chief sufferers were Auburn Sales Service, owners of the destroyed cars and Arthur Trudel, owner of the stables, who lost a number of horses and cows. The fire raged for three hours before being finally controlled by firemen, who answered a general alarm.

Dr. Tongue, over rail of the iron work, he "stumped" them all by coolly sticking his tongue on the above railand remained fast and hard.

He gurgled excitedly and painfully; the boys stood watching him and he twisted and squirmed, while the cold rail holding his tongue. He made frantic motions with his hands and rolled his eyes in their direction as if asking them to do something for him. There was consternation and fright in the group. Then, as another frantic leave the small boy pulled backwards—the tongue gave way to the frozen rail. He went the air—and one small boy ran half across Front street, and in direction of Pinnacle Street screaming at the top of his voice and carrying the tongue on the short patch of skin. The other little boys and girls stood in consternation and the small boy disappeared around the corner of Pinnacle Street and was continued on their journey to tell the story of why Bobby wasn't at school that day.

Shelly Anderson's Suit is Again Dismissed

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10—Action of Shelley Anderson, Toronto shipper, for $75,000 damages against the Township of Ameliasburg yesterday was dismissed by the Appeal Court at Osgoode Hall. Suit was brought because the Township, situated in Prince Edward County had allowed a road, which Anderson contended was declared a public highway by a Crown surveyor in 1876, to be closed.

Anderson alleged in 1923 the Township permitted George S. Walbridge to close the road, which ran from the Bay of Quinte to Massassaga Point, and forced him to use the old Danforth road on the point. His action was dismissed by Chief Justice Hugh E. Rose on Oct. 6, 1931.

CIVIC RINKS NOT TO BE FLOODED

Taking advantage of the cold snap which has been evident for the past few days, but is not so marked today with the appearance of another thaw, a number of students of the Ontario School for the Deaf were busy last evening flooding the two open air rinks situated in the grounds of the buildings.

In this city also it had been the intention of the department of public works to have the civic rinks flooded with water turned from en for the numberless skaters who have almost every night of late being able to use their skates this year at all. This morning, however, with the appearance of the warmer weather the preparations were dropped until another extended period of colder weather makes its appearance.

TEMPERATURE RISES AND FALLS AT WILL

A rising temperature following on the heels of the biting northeast wind, which was evident this morning in the city all day yesterday and which kept the temperature below the freezing point all day, set in late last evening after the wind had blown itself out, and brought with it another fall of snow that driven by the wind piled over the city in another three or four inches.

This morning the thaw had set in with the continuance of the warm breezes and the snow which did fall has again undergone the softening process and the mercury rose. Lowering clouds with the warm wind give a hint of rain to add further to the discomfort suffered yesterday by the numerous pedestrians who again splash thru the puddles and pools on the walks and crossings.

Again a wide variation in temperatures recorded at the park board is evident by the following marks for the past twenty-four hours.

Yesterday, high 31; low, 2 above zero. Today, high, 37; low, 18.

ITALY REJECTS

fortify the League of Nations—providing it led to effective reduction of armaments.

Signor Grandi agreed with the British Foreign Secretary, Sir John Simon, who spoke on Monday, as to the possibility of obtaining a dual system of qualitative and quantitative limitation of armaments.

World Scrap Many Things.

Italy therefore was ready to accept;

(1) Simultaneous abolition of capital ships, submarines, and aircraft carriers.

(2) Abolition of heavy artillery, of tanks of all kinds.

(3) Abolition of bombing aircraft.

(4) Abolition of all kinds of asphyxiating chemical and bacteriological warfare.

(5) Revision of the rules of war, so as to assure more complete protection of civil populations.

And the Italian spokesman touched a note of alarm. He saw the world drifting down the slope of an armament race. Since 1924 it had expended two and a half billion pounds sterling.

In the shortest speech delivered by the representative of any of the 31 powers represented, Matsudaira, Japanese spokesman, assured the world disarmament conference today that Japan had no desire to go further than the cause of disarmament.

He said the Japanese delegation had come to co-operate with all the powers, and that Japan favored a reduction in the size of battleships of the maximum calibre of their guns, reduction of the tonnage of airplane carriers assigned each power, strict limitation of the use of classes of war vessels including submarines, prohibition of air bombardments and of the use of poison gas and bacteria.

Army Not As Efficient.

The equipment of Japan's army is less efficient than that of modern western armies, Ambassador Tandelaki Matsudaira of Japan told the conference today.

"Japan is grateful to do all within her power to contribute to forwarding an agreement fair and equitable, as well as practical and economical, through which limitation and reduction of armaments can best be effected with assurances that national safety will not be impaired and that all parties to the agreement strictly observe its stipulations."

Japan's Suggestions

Japan suggested:

(1) A reduction in the size of capital ships, with a reduction in maximum gun calibres.

(2) Reduction of the assigned tonnage of aeroplane carriers.

Japan further considered the possibility of total abolition of aircraft carriers with prohibition of the equipment of vessels with landing decks.

In regard to submarines, Japan believed their evil lay not so much in their original nature, as in their wanton use. She favored some limitation of the use of the submarine, as also of the use of other war vessels.

Japan, too, would prohibit both air bombardments and the use of poison gases or bacteria.

Poland, Foreign Minister Zaleski, Minister of Foreign Affairs, pressed for preventive measures to safeguard sense of the term. Poland would heartily support all proposals to make countries of "bad faith" suffer from the risk of aggression.

Moral disarmament was urged by the Polish spokesman, and in this regard he said he would later have proposals to submit to the conference. "In this work of moral disarmament," he added, "we shall have the powerful support of women's organizations of the whole world, who are so passionately attached to the cause of peace.

ALLEGE TRUCK ON WRONGSIDE

None Injured as Truck and Car Collide Here This Morning

On the Belleville-Picton highway about five-thirty o'clock Tuesday afternoon, a serious collision occurred between two cars, which resulted in very considerable damage to both cars, and Mr. Everette Jeffery, of R.R. 3, Belleville, accompanied by Mrs. Mc-Cann, Held, R.R. 3, Belleville, was travelling in his car towards Picton and at a point on the highway about three miles from Belleville and almost opposite the entrance gates of Mr. Hobart Adams, his car and a light delivery truck, which was owned and driven by Carman Gilchrist of Kingston, came into collision. It is alleged that the Gilchrist car was on the wrong side of the road and that in an attempt to avoid a collision Mr. Jeffery swung his car to the left, but the two cars came together head-on in about the centre of the road.

Fortunately no one was injured. Both cars were badly damaged, and owned and driven by Carman Gilchrist of Kingston, the truck driver. It is alleged that the Gilchrist car was on the wrong side of the road and that in an attempt to avoid a collision Mr. Jeffery swung his car to the left, but the two cars came together head-on in about the centre of the road.

The modified moratorium would provide for a year's deferring of payments under mortgages, in order that both city and rural property holders of the danger of foreclosure through inability to pay. Payments of interest, but not principal, will not be affected by the legislation.

The amendment to the Old Age Pensions Act would provide a new scheme for the payment of pensions. The Federal Government pays ½ assume 75 percent. of the cost, this relieving municipalities and the province of the heavy proportion of existing pensions costs.

Old Age Pensions

Previously, the Federal Government paid 50 per cent., the Province initial 30 percent. and the Municipality the remaining 20 per cent. Under the new "arrangement, the Province would probably be required to pay only 12½ per cent. and the Municipality the same amount.

Amalgamation of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board with the Board of Municipal Affairs would empower the body to supervise the affairs of insolvent municipalities. The Government, supervision would prevent excessive local improvements in municipalities which found it a real burden to take care of their personal and the cost.

Just how drastic the economies suggested might be is problematical. Already Ontario civil servants have had their salaries cut, and in every department the government activities have been curtailed.

Correct Faults

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10—Responsibility for making decisions in case of applications for Old Age Pensions will be placed in the hands of the Provincial Commission under emergency regulations to the Old age Pensions Act which Hon. W. G. Martin, Minister of Welfare, will bring down in the Legislature at this session.

In a statement issued today, Mr. Martin states reports had been received intimating many people were benefitting from the provision of the Old Age Pensions benevolence who were not entitled to it.

The responsibility, the Minister declared, rested upon the shoulders of the municipalities. This had led to abuse and "sometimes has been a lever in the hands of local boards to be used for political gain".

It had been felt, he continued, that a change in the regulations would rectify this weakness and reduce the possibility abuse to a minimum.

Change in a phase of progress and development is prerequisite to its growth.—Raymond B. Fosdick.

WALLACE DIES WAS PROLIFIC STORY WRITER

after the man he most admired. Kipling, writing vigorous poetry of soldier life. This attracted the attention of world with the result that Wallace had a ready sale for his material.

Accumulating money, he purchased his discharge from the army and covered the rest of the Boer War as a special correspondent for Reuters News Agency and the London Daily Mail.

After the Boer War, he founded the Rand Daily Mail, the first English newspaper in South Africa. While editing the paper he began writing adventure stories which were soon sought by publishers in London.

Wrote 150 Novels

During his career he wrote approximately 200 novels, between 1200 and 1400 short stories and 20 plays.

Funeral arrangements probably will await the arrival of Mrs. Wallace who on hearing of her husband's illness arranged passage to New York, sailing today.

By 1926 he was well on the way for the rapid production for which he became famous. For the next few years he turned out nine novels and a play or two, then began a series which he sought by publishers in London.

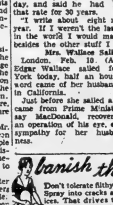
Big Hits

Among his earlier successes were "The Four Just Men", "The Terror" and "The Speaker" and books dealing with the Boer War, "Captain of Stule," "The Green Archer," "The Sinister Man" and "The Book of Tilin" were succeeded later by such dramas as "The Four Just Men," "Sanders" and "The Case of The Frightened Lady."

Film Chairman

He became a "natural" for the movies both as a writer and director and progressed in that field rapidly. He became chairman of the British Lion Film Corporation and was given a fat contract by producers in Hollywood.

Heading for California in December 1931, he said he expected to write one story a week. But he had not entered with Hollywood's conference system and the schedule was cut to a total of four stories in two months. He had expected to have the contract completed to depart for England by March.



Wallace was white-haired, portly and claimed to be as lazy as one looked. He was continuously four full packages of cigarets a day, and said he had kept up that rate for 30 years.

"I write about eight hours a year. If I weren't the fastest man in the world I would make it 12, besides the other stuff I do."

Mrs. Wallace Sails

London, Feb. 10 (AP)—Mrs. Edgar Wallace sailed for New York today, half an hour before the death of her husband's death in California.

Just before she sailed a telegram came from Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, recovering from an operation of his eyes, expressing sympathy for her husband's illness.

QUESTIONED BUT ALLOWED TO GO

Five Young Men Brought Before Chief But Not Wanted

Early Tuesday forenoon, Constable Isaard of the city police observed five young men in a car parked along the curb on Front St. They looked as though they had been in a row, in fact some of them bore facial evidence of having been in a little encounter. So they could not give satisfactory answers to the constable's questions he took them to the city police station for investigation.

The men claimed that the car which they were driving had been loaned to them in Toronto and that they were en route to Montreal, but on arrival at Belleville they had changed their minds and decided to return to Toronto.

Chief Constable Kidd immediately got into communication with the Toronto police authorities and in the early part of the afternoon, word was received that the car had been loaned to the men and that they were not wanted by the Toronto police. Upon receipt of this information the men were allowed to go.

Notice of Motion Presages Renewal of Power Scandal Probe

DEBATE THURSDAY

Three Senators Face Possible Ejection at Hands of Colleagues

Ottawa, Feb. 10—Renewal of the Beauharnois probe of last session with the election of three Liberal senators from the Upper House as an ultimate possibility, loomed today on Parliament Hill when Sir Hon. Arthur Meighen, Government leader in the Senate, gave notice of a motion to appoint a special Senate Beauharnois committee.

According to the motion, which will come up for debate on Thursday, nine Senators will be named to consider the report of last year's House of Commons Beauharnois committee in the light of that document's effect on notes. Senator Laurier McDougall, Donat Raymond and Andrew Haydon, all Liberals.

Leaning back in their chairs each with an elbow on his desk, Senators McDougall and Raymond heard Senator Meighen read out his motion at the opening of the Senate sitting yesterday afternoon. Neither of them indicated by as much as a gesture any feelings he may have had about the motion. Senator Haydon was not present. The notice was heard in calm and quiet, which popular opinion on the Senate usually associates with the debates and proceedings of the upper house.

Under the proposed motion, power is given the special committee to take further evidence under oath to compel the appearance of witnesses and the production of papers and largely speaking, to act so far as it pleases in deciding the relation of the Beauharnois report to the senators in question.

Report Was Outspoken

The Beauharnois report of last session was most outspoken in its censure of Senators Raymond, Haydon and Hayden, all of whom, while senators, were connected in various ways with Sir Sk. Lawrence Beauharnois power combine. The part of Senator Meighen said the report "cannot be defended and is strongly condemned."

Senator McDougall's actions, it said, could not "not be too strongly condemned. The report pointedly, asserted that it was "remarkable" that Senator Raymond did not avail himself of the chance to explain why, when he appeared as a witness he made no mention of campaign funds.

With the report to plain in its criticism it was conceded here that some action would be taken against some, if not all of them, of the senators. Premier Bennett's recent remark that there would be "two or three fewer senators at an early date," was related to that. A good guess as to the probable course of matters was made by Mr. Reid, in a report recommending action and, seconding the introduction of this in the senate to give effect to his discipline.

According to the British - North America Act, a Senator's place becomes vacated if he is attained of treason or convicted or felony or of any infamous crime. And it lies within the committee's power to declare that the actions of any of these senators constituted conviction of "felony or other crime" within the question which Ottawa mulled as it looked for'ward to the proceedings to-morrow.

What the Liberal tactics would be on Senator McDougall motion, of one could say last night. The Conservatives now have a majority of two in the senate and if all their members are present, if properly petted, they can carry the motion despite any opposition which the Liberals may offer. The Liberals conceivably might submit a minority report, after the sittings of the committee, but this, too, is liable to the same fate as opposition to the motion.

Peace Efforts Collapse Menace Uniting Chinese Fighting Grows Fiercer

Powers and Japan Dead-Locked in Negotiations at Tokio

FACTIONS JOINED

China Preparing to Present One Solid Front to Enemy

Tokio, Feb. 10. — Diplomatic negotiations at Tokio and Shanghai for ending warfare in China were believed to-night to have collapsed.

The conversations, in which United States, Britain and French ambassadors had participated were admitted to have reached an impasse. Failure was considered certain unless the Chinese withdrew their troops at least 15 miles from Shanghai. The Japanese declined to withdraw prior to these evacuation, and the refusal of the Chinese to act first blocked the negotiations.

The British embassy appeared to hold out some hope for further conversations, but agreed with the United States Embassy that the outlook was pessimistic. Neville McIlroy has been representing American Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes in the negotiations.

The British took the lead by submitting proposals to the Japanese minister, Mamoru Shigemitsu, at Shanghai. These called for an armistice, during which definite negotiations would be started on other matters of conflict between China and Japan. A neutral zone would have been established between the Chinese and the foreign forces in the international settlement would be maintained.

The British secured the acceptance of Chinese Minister Quo Tai-Chi to these proposals in discussions at Shanghai, with the representatives of the nations concerned participating. Later a round-table conference would have been held on controversial subjects, including Manchuria.

The Japanese replied that their lines at Shanghai are only a few hundred yards beyond their original defence positions, to which they were asked to withdraw. Hence, they said, the important thing is for the Chinese to withdraw out of cannon range. They emphasized the necessity of the powers presenting a united front in the settlement to retaliate to be defended. They also reiterated that Manchuria is not connected with Shanghai and that Japan would not accept intervention by foreign powers in Manchurian discussions.

Otherwise, Japan is willing to discuss the Shanghai situation at a round-table conference, it announced to their troops.

Elaborating on the Japanese plan for neutral zones around five Chinese cities, it was learned that a demilitarized zone would be established in the Shanghai area.

Japan expects the Soviets to oppose the plan, because Moscow likes to fish in troubled waters," it was said.

Jargon of Jungle Returns in Modern Slang, Says Savant

New York, Feb. 10—(CP)—The language of this country is degenerating into the "jargon of the jungle," according to Dr. Allan Sinclair Will, Columbia University professor.

"Oh, yeah," "Okay" and "Leila honey" betray the recession, he said, declaring the recurrence of "oh" words in the modern slang is significant. When prehistoric man met a hungry tiger, he exclaimed "Oh."

"Now Broadway is doing it and thinking it smart," the professor said.

FORECLOSURE AVOIDED BY HOUSE BILL

Projected Measure Not to Affect Interest Obligations

MEMBERS READY

Provides For Hearing By Judge of Claims For Exemption

Toronto, Feb. 10—Legislation is to be introduced at the present session of the Ontario House to provide a modified form of one-year moratorium on principal payments under mortgages, in order to relieve both city and rural property-holders of the danger of foreclosure through inability to pay. This was confirmed following a brief hint dropped by Premier Henry before the U.F.O. delegation which waited on the Prime Minister yesterday.

Payment of interest will not be affected by the legislation, such delay measure is intended to eliminate the possibility of loss, or at least, of foreclosures on either farm or city property because of non-payment of principal.

It is understood that the machinery to be set up under the proposed legislation provides for the hearing by a judge of claims for exemption of principal payments from the moratorium. Any such claims are opposed by the mortgagee. The bill, which has already been drafted, is designed to prevent any abuse of the privilege sought to be afforded the mortgagor. It is expressly provided that interest payments must be maintained.

Told Not to Foreclose

While the Ontario agricultural development board, which holds a considerable number of farm mortgages, was instructed some months ago not to foreclose under any circumstances, and while mortgage companies and individuals were not animated by any such policy, and some farmers, were dispossessed, in a few instances, requests have been made to the government in recent months for relief for hard-pressed property owners. Recently officials of mortgage companies conferred with the government as to the best methods to pursue in impending foreclosures.

While the moratorium is for a one-year period, it is understood that if economic conditions at the end of that time have not definitely improved, extension for another year will be provided.

Early Date Likely

The mor.torium bill will be introduced at an early date, as the Government, it is said, is anxious to have it go into effect as soon as possible. This assistance to hard-pressed property-owners is possible only in a session of the Legislature as it is a statutory matter and cannot be dealt with by Order-in-Council. On several occasions Attorney General H. H. Price has intimated to mortgage companies to exercise unusual care in dealing with mortgagors because of the financial strain which existed in many public due to depressed conditions.

It is expected that the effect of the moratorium measure on the agricultural industry will be most pronounced. Under its terms, farm properties will remain with their owners and a breathing spell will thus be afforded the men on the land.

NEW SIGNALS FOR CROSSINGS

Will Be Installed on All Highways in Near Future

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10—Efficacy of a patent level crossing warning signal is to be put to the test on comparatively wide scale through Ontario, it was announced Monday. Provincial Minister of Highways, announced yesterday. The device, the invention of J. Hyatt of London, Ont., is expected to prove beneficial in reducing the number of accidents at level crossings.

The first of the signals has already been installed on highway number 21, near Bridgetown, where it is said to be met with approval of the authorities. Installations on highway number 21, near Brampton will be made shortly, and will probably be followed by others throughout the province.

THE YEAR'S BUSINESS REVIEWED

". . . I think you will agree with me that for a year such as that through which we have just passed the showing is a remarkably fine one.

"New assurances of over $527,000,000, and a total in force exceeding $3,000,000,000, are figures so great as to need no emphasis.

"The distribution of our new business is interesting. Canada contributed $101,000,000, United States $291,000,000, Great Britain $50,000,000 and the rest of the world $85,000,000.

"Our mortality experience has been even more favourable than that of last year, the claims being but 54.3 per cent. of the expected, against 57.6 per cent. in 1930.

"Since business was commenced in 1871 we have paid out in benefits $594,000,000. Last year alone our payments were $93,000,00, an amount exceeding the total assurances written in 1922. We may well rejoice over the magnitude and importance of the social service which the Company is performing.

"During the past year life assurance has been tested as perhaps never before, and it has withstood the trial triumphantly. So far as I am aware not one life company on the continent has had to close its doors, a wonderful record. In Canada we can claim with pride that even since Confederation not one Dominion licensed company has ever failed.

"It will be noticed that in addition to the surplus of $16,000,000 over all liabilities and capital stock, we have a contingency reserve of $4,700,000 to provide for possible shrinkage in mortgages and other real estate investments. Our reserves have been calculated on the same strong basis as last year. Although our investments payable in American currency greatly exceed our liabilities in that currency, we have treated both as on a par, taking no credit for the premium on American funds. Our liabilities under contracts in other currencies also are included at a total greater than required at the prevailing rates of exchange.

"Our holdings of stocks have been valued on the basis laid down by the Dominion Department of Insurance, which is practically the same as that adopted for all companies by the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners of the United States.

"In new investments we have favoured high grade bonds, the yield on which is now very attractive. Our purchases of Canadian Government bonds during the year amounted to $23,000,000.

"The profits paid or allotted to policyholders amounted to over $26,000,000, or over 20 per cent. of the total annual premium income.

"In the light of these figures, the report is indeed an excellent one.

"And what of the future? No one believes that the depression will last for ever. It is impossible to say just when the turn will come, but with the vast natural resources of this continent, and the brains, energy, and actual wealth of its people, business recovery is inevitable. When prosperity does return no company will share in its benefits in greater measure than our own."

USE OF DOGS YEAR ROUND

Hunters' Association To Make This Request to Government

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10—A recommendation advocating legislation of the use of dogs for deer hunting throughout Ontario will be submitted today at its annual convention of the Ontario Hunters' Game Protective Association here, the executive committee of the organization decided last night.

Shortening of the open season on big game in northern districts, shortening of the duck-hunting season, and appointment of a non-political game commission to administer the Ontario Game Department will also be recommended. Sportsmen prominent in the province are expected to attend the meeting.

LAKE PLACID JOTTINGS

Olympic Bob Sled Course, Lake Placid, N.Y., Feb. 10—Reto Capadrutt, youngster of the Olympic bob sled contestants, broke the world's record for the Mt. Van Hoevenberg Olympic Bob Sled run today when he took the four-driver white Swiss sled down the hazardous course in 2.06.8 in the first heat. The previous record was 2.09 held by J. Hubert Stevens of Lake Placid, whose time for his first run today was 2.13.10.

The Swiss number one team of Rene Capadrutt and his brother Gustavr, driving the same type of sled as Capadrutt, scratched their entry because they thought the course too dangerous for the rope-steered bobs.

Hans Killan, took his German sled down the run in 2.15.27 in the first heat. After hearing his time he said the course was becoming slower as each succeeding sled broke through the ice crust on the slide.

The gyrations of graceful woman figure skaters amused the Olympic Winter Games gallery here this afternoon when three Canadian girls among the fifteen skaters performing the school or set figures before a solemn group of judges. Mrs. Constance Wilson Samuels, of Toronto, North American figure skating champion in the women's division, led off the Canadian skaters.

Miss Elizabeth Fisher and Miss Mary Littlejohn, two other Toronto girls, also attracted a great deal of attention. The results of the school figures competition will not be announced till after the three figures tomorrow night, when complete results of each individual performance will be made public. Cecilia Colledge and Megan Taylor, the two 11 year old English girls, remain the favorites of the event. Both performed the set figures this afternoon with easy assurance. Miss Molly Phillips and Miss Joan Dix completed the English team in the figure skating. England's only entry in the third Olympic Winter Games. While Mrs. Samuels, Miss Fisher and Miss Littlejohn continue the school figures here this afternoon, the Winnipeg, Canadian Olympic hockey team, are to face the Polish national team on the outdoor hockey rink at the Olympic stadium nearby.

Just Shrewd Pick-Pockets, Says Cadi

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10— Found guilty of conducting a lottery, Dunbar Cropley was fined $1,000 and costs or six months imprisonment in police court today by Magistrate F. J. Browne. "Just shrewd pick-pockets," the Magistrate commented as he passed sentence.

Cropley, described as general distributor in Canada of tickets for a charity lottery said he'll be operated in St. John's, Nfld. Defence said the lottery was a bona fide charity affair.

Sam Yolelski, convicted of selling lottery tickets, was fined $100 and costs or 60 days.

BOOKS AND THE LIBRARY

Publishers are feeling that too many books are being published, many of them without sufficient warrant, and there is a possibility of the output being reduced. While this is bad news for some who write and while it might happen to keep one good writer from ever reaching the public, yet it ought to be a benefit to the readers who read as much as they can, can ever catch up with the immense body of reading which is turned out from the publishers' presses.

Of course it would be a lean book world were only the really great books published. It is doubtful if the really great would be as numerous if there were severe restrictions upon the output. The great really come to the top. No great writer is alone in his age, lesser satellites swing in orbit about him as the planets swing in their course around the sun; lesser workers have had a part to play in the elevation of the masters to their supreme heights for a writing world is an inspiration to those men and women capable of really great writing.

But that there are too many books issued, is not at all in doubt. In course the modern reader does not need to read or try to read everything which comes across his path.

How to find one's way through the mass of books in any age is the problem. If care is not taken much time is wasted and gradually taste may decline.

On the whole the habit of reading is not to be all deplored. Who wants to read every day in the giants of literature? Who would like a diet of nothing but story or a detective tale now and then, even if it is not in the highest literary style? We do not want all meals for the lighter vein has its service in making men and women happy, in entertainment, and in cultivating a taste for what may lead to higher forms of literature.

Belleville adults according to the annual report of the Corby Public Library are developing into readers. But it is strange to learn that the boys and girls of this city fall behind those of other centres in the percentage of readers.

The public library can serve a function in steering the reader through the maze of book avenues and byways, for the library is a clearing house as to ideas. Readers are stimulated in having their attention drawn to a book which others has recommended as worthy. What attracts general attention must in the final analysis have real merit. So in this regard it is well that children should start early as readers. The world we live in is as romantic as ever but even a book adds to the romantic zest in life, particularly in those for children which contain the most delightful thought and fancy ever put upon paper.

As a guide early in life in directing the reading of youngsters and with the stimulation of mind and imagination by association with other readers, libraries can take the youngster a long way on the road to education. The library instinctively steadies the reader and is naturally one of the features which no town, city or village can do without.

The library and librarian are the chief guide through the land of books.

WOMEN AND SMOKING

Hon. Dr. Robb, Minister of Public Health for the Province of Ontario made reference to the smoking habit among women and girls, making particular reference to the consequence of the habit as indicated by mortality tables in Ontario cadesis statistics. Last year in the gay life, and the growing popularity of smoking are held to blame for increased mortality.

Hamilton Spectator states that the Anti-Smoking League for women of the United States is not a mere "straight-out" fad, but that the movement has strong endorsation among the medical profession. It is pointed out that there are fifteen per cent of the girls and women of the United States is not a mere strait-laced tor does not hold out much hope for weaning the habitues from the habit which it is feared they cannot give up. The League, says the Spectator, is formed for the purpose of warding off from the non-smokers this menace to their health.

Advertisements in magazines striving to inculcate smoking among women and girls are cleverly written and illustrated, but the league replies that smoking mars beauty, ruins complexion of women and dark rings around their eyes and hardens their features.

The Spectator does not believe the statement of one woman writer who says more men do not smoke than women, calling smoking no longer a craze or a fashion but a habit they cannot break. The newspaper sees the only hope in weaning women from smoking is that it is not fashionable and that women would not want to be old-fashioned in puffing a cigarette.

CAN THIS BE LOVE?
By Aline Michaelis

If I but sensed his footfall on the stair,
Or saw the little smile that lit his face,
Or heard him humming some familiar air,
It was enough to brim the day with grace.
No tender word was ever on our lips,
No vows were taken and no pledges made;
Why, then, does Earth whirl through this strange eclipse,
Since from my path so far his feet have strayed?

When I but knew that I would see him soon
Why all the boughs upon my being's tree
Lifted bright leaves like rain-washed elms in June.
And each leaf danced in sudden ecstasy.

We never spoke of love. Now the days move
Like years, since he is gone. Can this be love?

WHY WORRY? There are only two reasons for worry. Either you are successful or you are not successful.

If you are successful there is nothing to worry about. If you are successful there are only two things to worry about.

Your health is either good or you are sick: if your health is good there is nothing to worry about; if you are sick there are only two things to worry about.

You are either going to get well or you are going to die: if you are going to get well there is nothing to worry about; if you are going to die there are only two things to worry about: if you are going to Heaven or you are not going to Heaven; if you are going to Heaven there is nothing to worry about; if you are going to the other place you'll be so busy shaking hands with old friends you won't have time to worry.

SO WHY WORRY?

"BEN HUR", General Lew Wallace's great word picture of the time of Christ of Roman legions and dashing chariot races, of the pomp and splendor of the sensuous days of Roman occupation, made into a screen story with sound accompaniment, cost the producers the amazing sum of seven million dollars, so a story from Hollywood goes. The producers held a meeting, it is said, to figure up cost and possible revenue. Telling what a film play costs is considered good publicity, but the producers felt that to announce that "Ben Hur" cost seven million dollars would be a mistake. The public would never believe it, said they, so it was decided to set the amount for publicity purposes at four million dollars, as a figure which the public would be more likely to believe. George Washington belongs to the order of the hatchet and never was known to tell a lie, well hardly ever, vouches for the truth of this statement.

A Lion Story!

Sitting around the bunkhouse, they were swapping lies.

"When I was logging up in Montana," said one hard-boiled member of the crowd, "I saw a mountain lion come right up to the cookee one day. It was a fierce beast, but I, with great presence of mind, threw a bucket of water in its face and it slunk away."

"Boys," said a man sitting in the corner, "I can vouch for the truth of that story. A few minutes after that happened I was coming down the side of the hill. I met this same lion, and as is my habit, stopped to stroke his whiskers. Boys, them whiskers was wet."

"Had any Leap Year proposals from the fair sex yet?" asked inquiring Egbert.

"Yes, one," replied Bob. "It came from my landlady's daughter."

"Lucky man!" but in Egbert. "What did she say?"

Bob made a grimace.

"Well, it was like this," he commenced. "She keeps the books for her mother. One day last week she came to me and proposed that I paid up my arrears of rent or leave the boarding house."

NEW RUSSIAN FIGURES

Soviet Russia's new Five-Year Plan, as outlined by Premier Molotov, is not the "fantastic" publicized only a few weeks ago, apparently on the highest authority. The burden of the news out of Moscow around the turn of the year was that the second Five-Year Plan would lay chief stress on production of consumers' goods and a development of industrial plant. The reasons for the change were of two kinds. The Communist leaders were sobered by the results of current Five-Year Plan in certain important branches. Iron and steel last year were only 50 per cent of the original quota, and railway transportation was also seriously behind. Such reminders that the "tempo" of the Plan as a whole had been set too high were supplemented by disappointing experiences in the operation of the newly erected plants. It was borne in, on the Communist leaders that time and attention might profitably be taken from the creation of machinery and devoted to learning how to make use of it. But chiefly the swing to commodities was due to the pressure of the human factor. It was felt that the Russian people would not indefinitely continue to do without the necessities of life, and the grandiose plan of industrial installation was being carried out.—New York Times

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning pop came down to breakfast, saying, I feel like a little bird. I look as I feel like a little breakfast food this morning. Its been feeding around the table and swallowing fist foods and theyve got me all perched up. It sure has been a successful shower of brekfist food instead of rain to day, said.

Well now just as it happens Ive got about half a dozzen kinds of fist to choose from, so I asked in what ways have Krunchy Toasties and Krinkled Krusties the honor, as the other companies have been insisting on my sampling their stuff, saying out samples the passed few days, so I have brought a package of Toasted Krakjak Krusty Krinkles and Krinkled Krusties, so all you half to do is to name your choice and take the consequenes, she said.

Well, how about a sprinkle of Krunchy Krinkles, pop said.

O, you mean Toasted Krackles or do you mean Krusty Krinklest ma said.

Neither, pop said. I mean Jumbly Chinkles, just as I said, he said.

But you dident say anything of the kind and furthermore you moreover there are no such things, at least not in this house, ma said. You may be thinking or Krinkled Krusties, she said.

I never think of Krinkled Krusties I make that a special point, pop said. I want Hinky Dinkies and I wont be satisfied with substitutes, he said.

O, now youre just carrying on in an absurd attempt to be redicklous, ma said. Now once and for all, do you want Krackly Toasties, Toasted Krackjys or Krusty Crackjys? she said.

O, I take a soft boil egg, pop said.

Wich he did.

FAIR BOARD HELD MEETING

Nothing Definite as Regards Midway For Fall Fair

Nothing definite was decided in the matter of engaging a mid-way for the Belleville Fair at the regular meeting of the directors of the local board held last night.

The committee, who had been sent to Toronto to attend the annual meeting of the Ontario Fair's Association reported back that they could not and did not want to do business with the Canada Shows, which they were sent to interview. Chairman Jack Clarke and Secretary R. H. Ketcheson reported, that they interviewed Mr. Fleming, of the Conklin Shows, and were under the opinion, that although he had an excellent show, they would not recommend bringing that particular show to Belleville. Upon being asked who or what show they would recommend, they replied that there were but two shows playing through Ontario this coming summer and fall. These two shows are the Sims' Shows and the Gray Shows. Mr. Clarke, the chairman of the mid-ways for the Belleville Fair, says that the Gray Exposition Shows as they had five rides including a ferris wheel, which in his mind is one of the best and most up-to-date rides in America and there are also a few unusual sideshows in Canada.

After considerable controversy, a committee composed of Messrs. J. Harker, W. Fleming, Jack Clarke, Chas. J. Symons, Chas. Hanna, R. E. Colling, President Mitchell and Secretary Ketcheson was appointed and have powers to investigate and interview the Sims' and the Gray Shows as soon as possible.

Among the many attractions in front of the grand stand was thoroughly discussed. Secretary Ketcheson stating, that a letter from Toronto, stating, that it was a fact that there were many attractions just at present. The question of the ordinary admission fee, and the members did not think much of such an idea. Many suggestions were made, but none were fully accepted, Mr. Pinkie suggested, that possibly it would be well to have a Toronto booking firm, as did the Kiwanis Circus, which was held here several last fall. This idea was one of the best brought forward and more will be dealt with it by the directors at their next meeting. In the meantime, the directors will appoint from into the master of grand stand performance. Mr. J. Clarke suggested that the board get out season tickets and sell them before the fair opens at the rate of $1 for $1.00. Nothing was definitely decided upon this question with the result, that it was laid over too until the next meeting.

The committee for the purpose of selecting the chairman and committee for the various directorships were elected and will meet on Saturday March 12th. The committee consists of President, Robt. Mitchell, Secretary R. H. Ketcheson, Treasurer A. Dafoe, Chas. Hanna, H. E. Fair field, F. J. Denyes and D. Thrasher. All committees will be selected at Saturday night's meeting of the directors. The next regular meeting of the Belleville Fair Board will be held on Monday February 22th.

YOUNG MAN IN RAIN

The other day I walked along
The streets of Belleville in rain;
The skies were black, the sun obscured,
The rain was teemnig down.

With head bent down and collar up,
My shoulders bit the weather,
I bumped into a lady fair,
And did not even know her.

Where I sat down upon it.

Said I, "I'm sorry lady dear,
As sorry as I can be;
We're strangers, yes, but please forgive,
But not a word spoke she.

A merchant at whose door we fell,
From out his store came walking,
He saw us fall, he said he heard
Me to this making.

"See here, young man!" said Merchant John,
"You think you're very funny,
That manikin I'll have you know
Cost me a lot of money."

"I brought that model from New York,
You'll pay the shot, don't worry,"
And then across the road we took
I saw this merchant hurry.

He pulled his story to a cop,
My guilt he had attested,
I saw if I should linger long,
It's me for the arrested.

With head bent down and collar up,
I hurried to my dinner.
I often think about that girl,
And how I ran "again" her.

FEARS FLIGHT OF CAPITAL

Runciman Declares Crisis in England is Not Yet Over

London, Feb. 10 (AP)—Movement of capital abroad is creating great anxiety to those in charge of Great Britain's finance, Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, said today as debate began on the government's new tariff measure.

"There is a constant reduction and French balances in London are going down every week," he said. "We can stand the strain, but the crisis is not over. If the pound sterling slumps the value of the French and Italian will walk with confidence. We are in a condition only by reducing our imports and exports to live on our capital."

Mr. Runciman predicted other European countries probably will be obliged to abandon the gold standard.

"BOUNCER'S" BOOST ENTERTAINS CLUB

Kiwanis Hold Real Party at Expense of Popular Member

An interesting illustrated talk on Norman Alley's travelogue of the incandescent light and a booster by the genial "Bouncer" Holway made the luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday a lively affair. It is a question since the club has had such a good boost as the one given "Bouncer" by the genial proprietor of the Mecolli Frontenac Service Station and district agent for the Dominion Tire Company, "Bouncer" has as his partner "Toots" Holway star defense player for the London Tecumsehs in the International League and the boys have proved themselves exceedingly popular since entering the business line, while "Bouncer" has taken an active interest in all civic enterprises, besides being connected with sport. He has been a valued member of the Kiwanis Club for the board of directors will probably induce other members to take a luncheon for the same purpose.

The new Dominion Cord Tire was given at the boost by the Dominion Tire Company and the members had a thrilling ride. Norm Rigg's car was successful in having his ticket drawn from the box. Norm Rigg was the lucky winner and he presented the Club how it feels to ride on Dominion cushions. Three gas trays were also given by the boys to the members, namely Smith, Ross Hunter and J. O. Macilwain and the latter two good possessors. Mecoli-Frontenac donated three tins of their best motor oil and George Forhan, Dave Hall and Cliff Bateman will try the new oil in their motors and who can say but new customers might be developed. Bouncer was loudly applauded for his thoughtfulness and the donors were congratulated on their splendid swarfts. It is too bad more of the members were not out to enjoy the function.

President A. B. Collins was in the chair and conducted the meeting in his usual brilliant style. The speaker of the day was Everett Smith of the local Hydro staff and after an introduction by Charles H. Hanna, Everett unfolded through a series of motion pictures the life of Thomas Alva Edison. Pictures were shown of his early life and his adaptness to enquire as to how everything happened. His life as a newsboy, telegraph operator, experimenter and other phases passed in review and he finally invented, which led him to his greatest discovery. The films were very interesting and much appreciated by the members.

SERVICE IN TIMES OF STRESS

The social significance of life insurance has possibly received insufficient attention in recent years while some of its other features have received unusual emphasis. If this tendency has been in greater evidence in periods of special prosperity, it is, perhaps, natural that the trying conditions of the past two years should cause people to reflect upon the old primary values on which life insurance is based. During a time when all forms of business suffered severely and many succumbed, life insurance has withstood every strain, and has justified every claim. Not a single company on this continent has failed to meet every demand, even though these demands were unusually heavy. Within a decade and a half, life insurance has successfully survived the tests of a world war, of pestilence, and of unexampled depression.

Its steady, unobtrusive, but world-wide Life Business in force.

The stabilizing and constructive factor of the Sun Life and other companies in modern economic life is but lightly appreciated.

The annual report of the Company presented to its new paid-for assurance last year amounted to $527,000,000. Adding how generally the public, during a trying period, turned to life insurance as a sure and tested refuge.

With assets of $634,000,000 and total assurances in force of over $3,000,000,000 the Sun Life Company continues to set new records in the life insurance field.

Ten Timely Advertising Tips

A successful retailer who has spent the best part of his advertising appropriation in good newspaper copy gave ten points which had helped him materially in building business man through advertising. The ten points:

1. I advertise regularly. Every issue of the paper takes my story to its readers.

2. I make every ad. look like mine. Years ago I adopted a distinctive style, and I have stuck to it. A variety of white space; my ads are never hard to read.

3. I put into newspaper advertising a definite proportion of my gross sales which I fix at the beginning of the year. My rule is to make it from 3 per cent to 5 per cent's gross, with more if special conditions justify it.

4. I brighten my ads with frequent illustrations, either humorous or practical. This costs me little, as the up-to-date newspapers supply these.

5. I am careful never to over-promise. Then, when I really have an unusual bargain, people believe me when I "whoop 'er up a little."

6. I think advertising all the time. I buy goods that will advertise well. Sometimes I buy goods just for their advertising value.

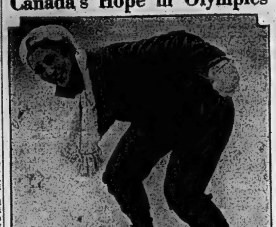
7. I get good display for my ads by seeing that the copy is in the newspaper office in plenty of time. I do this by making sure that I never have to write the copy.

8. Whenever possible, I carry the nationally advertised goods that are advertised in my own home paper. I feature them. Sometimes they give me a smaller margin than fly-by-night concerns, but I find that I sell faster and make more money in the end, besides pleasing more customers.

9. I always plan my window and counter displays to link up with my newspaper advertising. Each helps the other.

10. My salespeople back up my advertising. They often help me with suggestions for it, and see to it that they always read it.

DR. M. A. DAY WINS SPOONS



Broom Wielders Enjoy Splendid Sheet of Ice

"Wonderful curling" is all that one could hear up at the curling rink during the past few days. The recent cold snap has added sufficient ice to make it almost perfect and the members have been out in full force to enjoy the prevailing pastime. Spoon competitions have been in order during the week and some excellent curling has resulted. Last night there were three rinks in operation and the competition was exceedingly keen. At completion of the matches it was found that two rinks were tied after aggregate had been deducted and it was decided to have the rinks out collection two ends to decide the winners of the spoons. Dr. Morley Day, who is back in the fold after a long layoff, heaved the veteran Walter Belair in the played. Walter counted a single on the first end but the Doctor came back with a brace in the second end to win all the glory.

A novel idea is used to choose the rinks and every rink has a chance to win. The names are drawn out of a hat and each player in the rink is known by the name of the rinks are chosen, the handicap is figured and this has to be made before any rink is allowed to play. Spoon competitions will be played again tonight and every member is requested to come out and join the fun. The scores of last night were:

Kitchen Music Reaches Art Stage, Played at Bridge St.

Women's Association of Church Put on Delightful Musical Romance

2-HOUR PROGRAM

What music lies in kitchen and household utensils and appliances, pots, pans, frying pans, washboards, beaters, grinders, spoons, funnels, bottlers, colanders, tongs, and so on, was revealed to over four hundred persons who attended the Women's Missionary and Temperance Women's Association of Bridge Street United Church on Tuesday evening in the church parlors. Dressed in blue tunics with spoons for facings and on the sleeves, wearing white skirts and cook's hats, the large orchestra of the W. A. members demonstrated the powers for music of these articles, mix, stir, beat, mostly in the cooking of meals. Leading them was the dear master of conductress Mrs. Spalding, whose aluminum pan cap kept falling down. She, too, with medals of smaller kitchen articles, were in rich contrast to the blue and white costume of the instrumentalists, and kept them on the right tune in about their instruments. Here assembled all the articles found in the kitchen and what it is, spoons, eggbeaters, washboards, griddles for banjos, a flour sifter for a saxophone, tain pole, and countless cords, an accordion of a hat rack, coal scuttle, boiler, toasters, flutes made of spoons and so on. There were, all, transmogrified into musical instruments.

But if the look of the instruments was decidedly funny, yet a soothing magic flowed from the silver. And the notes were anything but tinny. They were rounded by means of kazoon deftly concealed in the wire instruments and it was those primitive instruments which built up the harmony of the tone and the true notes. Led off by the piano played by Mrs. Stubbs, the orchestra created a fine effect, a humming strumming effect over which hovered the piano notes. At times the members sang.

Mrs. Ralph Galloway was business manager and stage manager and her genius showed in the success of the program which gave universal delight. Mrs. Galloway was the artist bringing back to this day the old familiar songs.

About the romance of Robin and Evelina the music centred. Some instruments were strummed, and sang, accompanied by the piano played by Mrs. Stubbs, started with the songs of "Sweet Evelina," and "Robin Adair", leading into "Seeing Nellie Home", "Love's Old Sweet Song", "Home Sweet Home", Simon; "Let Me Call You Sweetheart", "The Old Oak Tree" and "Mr." sung by Mrs. Ellis; "Ballet of Festival", "Oh! Mr. Mert Adair", "Polly Wolly Doodle", "My Old Kentucky Home", "Beautiful Kate", "Mr. Gay Gordon" and "Let's Get Up Your Troubles", "Yankee Doodle", "Auld Lang Song Time" sung by Mrs. Ellis; "Coming Through the Rye," sung by Mrs. (Dr.) Stobie; "Scalia," sung by Mrs. Ellis; "Where, O Where Is My Little Dog Gone," sung by Mrs. McKinnon and Miss L. Brown; "Solomon Levi", "Old Oaken Bucket", "Long Time Ago" sung by Mrs. Kinnon, Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Morgan; "Swanee River", "Medley," "Aida," and bass viol played by Mrs. Dennis, Mrs. Holton, Mrs. Wooten and Mrs. Roblin; "Old Ontario Strand", "Until Then" sung by Mrs. Brown Church in the Wood"; Wedding March, Elinor Finkle taking the part of the bride; Charlotte Finkle that of the attendant, and Master Gerald Hyde that of the groom, while the orchestra played, "Dixie", "Footlight Parade" and the National Anthem followed.

One of the striking features was the "Where is My Little Dog Gone" while the two vocalists mournfully chanted the words and turned the instruments and dog to find at last weiners aplenty, sign of the sad fate of the little dog.

The wedding march scene was delightfully played by the three youngsters.

His Honor Judge Deroche opened the proceedings with some remarks on humor and fun, telling of hearing Mrs. Grey Owen's address on arts including James Whitcombe Riley and Bill Nye.

During the interim Mr. W. B. Deacon brought a report of the broadcast for a phantom "mike" had been set before the orchestra. He related how the Japanese and Chinese leaders at Shanghai had wired that the reception was good, that Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent, and other famous men were mixing him up so that he could not tell whether it was the Battle of Shanghai he was hearing or the broadcast from Belleville. Messages from President Bennett, from Montreal, from great musicians, and so on, came in. The singing delighted the audience in the interlude.

Miss Helen Bulman took the role of reader and knit together the songs of the romance so that the audience could gather the course of the plot.

Mrs. Ralph Morden gave two readings which pleased the audience, "The Frown at Millville" and an encore.

The center table was pretty with its decorations of tulips and daffodils, and tapers of pink and green. Presiding were Sisters Pool, Ashley, Sr., and Mrs. Miller. Sister Coulby acted as treasurer for the occasion.

WHAT ONE GIRL WORE
By Betty Brownlee

If southern skies lure you, be sure you include a beautiful supply of bright colorful on sports lines which you will need whether or not you be an ardent sports-woman. The spectator at the tennis courts and the golf links must be as correctly attired today as the girl who walks off with the prizes on the links. For afternoons in the South, the shops are displaying some very pretty frocks for sheltered and cordial that it is difficult for even the sun-starved Northerner to resist them. But our day will come—for what is shown for southern wear will be worn in town this spring.

Of course if you're going north on pleasure intent a few garments your vacation won't be a period of enjoyment at all.

The girl who skits and ice-skates must include a number of ensembles that allow her to enjoy these sports comfortably. Considering the fact that the costume pictured on this page today that was modeled last week in one of the more exclusive sports shops The divided skirt of russet velveteen reveals a convenient zipper fastening at the side. It is worn with a short jacket of brown moire which boasts warm knitted sleeves, collar and belt. Beneath the jacket one wears a warm sweater, and the costume is appropriately finished with a knitted beret.

PRE-LENTEN PARTIES HELD

Many Attend Various Functions Before Advent of Season

Deep-toned church bells resounded over the city this morning heralding the advent of Lent—the forty days' fast and abstinence in preparation for the Easter-tide, which will appear with the beginning of the new season of budding trees and plants.

In numerous homes and halls throughout the district pre-Lenten parties were greatly in evidence, and activities lasted well on until the marked hour, at midnight, drew near. Dances claimed a large majority of these, however the pretty cards were bright with early spring flowers. The tea table with its lovely lace cloth was most attractive with a silver basket of pink carnations and pink tapers in silver sticks. Large numbers of guests dropped in at the tea hour and members of the Guild assisted during the afternoon.

OL' TOBY'S

by Charles Sloan Reid

Ol' Toby Larkin walked with a long staff which usually he held in his right hand at an elevation well above his head. His shoulders drooped so that the staff had been reduced by at least six inches from that of his young manhood. A great shock of white hair crowned his head, and his eyes set forth a merry twinkle on all occasions. He had a habit of chuckling to himself as he headed along the mountain trails or roadways, as the thought of some clever yarn he had spun on some occasion came back to him. Toby had tired somewhat more than his allotted three-score-and-ten years, and had had many and varied experiences among the hills of the Blue Ridge. No one could recount an escapade, or the details of a narrow escape with more dramatic effect than could he.

It was late October, but many of the summer boarders down at the Toxiway Inn had lingered to enjoy the wonderful color scheme of the hardwood trees while the autumn leaves presented on every side. The chestnuts were falling and old Toby Larkin had begun to feel the winter need, and was filling his clean round to the notch side of his capacious pockets. "Sweet but nothin' lean's a six-hundred pound sow," he would say. An' shore 'nough, when we comes up wi' that trap—what you reckon?" Why, jes' two fine, fat, young pigs, see, we're all excited?"

Toby had gathered in a circle about the old man, all in rapt attention.

"Well, then, that was the big. Ye b'ar the ever come over the Backs. Jes' a leetle feller, but he's mighty fine pleased and stroked his jaws with his left hand. "And what, Uncle Toby?" "Ah' right thar, to keep him company, now that your mine litters a'most as big as he was. Jes' a feller

LOSSES SHOW DAY'S TREND

Weaker Trend Indicated on Toronto Board Wednesday

Toronto, Feb. 10.—Losses recovered gains during a moderately active session on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Lack of bids was the chief cause of the downward trend.

Page Hersey tubes features trading in the industrial stocks, adding a fraction higher to $1. Canadian Malting added half a point, but lost fractionally. In the Utility list Brazilian was slightly lower at 5.

Imperial Oil was a lone exception to the downward trend in the oils, rising fractionally to 9 3-4. B. A. International Petroleum and Supertest were all lower.

In the distillery group, Distillers Seagrams and Canada Malting lost ground.

Walkers was quite active, but did not close to its previous close. Food issues, along the mining and investment stocks, were practically unchanged.

EASIER TONE ON STANDARD

Teck Gains and Then Eases Off to 4.36

Toronto, Feb. 10.—While the list as a whole held firm in reduced volume at the opening individual movements were downward on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange in the forenoon today.

Teck-Hughes repeated yesterday's performance, opening higher on the strength of accumulative buying orders and vacating later to stand unchanged at $4.36 when taken at midday. Pioneer at $1.70 moved up 15 on reports that a new parallel vein had been found at the property, but Wright-Hargreaves declined 3 cents to dropped a few cents apiece.

Blocks appeared to be trying to advance on the declaration of a 4-cent dividend payable March 15 to holders of record March 31, but at noon was merely steady at 5. Mason regained a couple to 32 while Buffalo and South Kocra recorded small declines. Penn Canada, as a section, were inactive.

Minor Oil group slumped to a new low for the current downward movement of 1 cent and 4 from last night's mark. Closing of the company's Cobalt plants and depressed Base Metal quotations held responsible for current weakness. Hudson Bay helped another 30 to $275 but Nickel and Noranda were firm. Oils were in the discard.

SCORELESS GAME IN PICTON LOOP

PICTON, Jan. 10.—(Special)—A scoreless game was a feature of the hockey games at the local arena Monday night, when Bloomfield and Collegiate played for the sixty minutes without either team being able to score. Both goal tenders, Croft for Collegiate and Carpenter for Bloomfield were partly responsible for this state of affairs as they stopped many shots, but looked like sure goals.

The second game was between Wellington and Milford and was very rough and penalties were handed out every few minutes. The Wellington team netted two goals for their opponents one, to take the game. Both games were handled by Jack Hinds, referee, and Ted Lewis, umpire.

Joseph Power Dead

Word has been received here from Langdon, North Dakota, of the death of Joseph Power, a native of this county. His passing was sudden and unexpected. On December 31 last, Mr. Power's brother, Richard Power of Picton, Mrs. Thos. Bowerman and another brother, Archie Power died in Humboldt, Sask., eight days apart of influenza.

Mr. Power leaves two sisters, Mrs. Patrick Riordan of Minto and Mary Jane Power both of Picton. He was eighty-three years of age. Interment will be in the United States for many years.

Presentation

Woodville town hall, five miles from Bancroft, was the scene of an interesting gathering this week when a number of friends of Arthur Hamilton gathered to present him with a farewell gift. The presentation was made of a club bag, following a short talk by Mr. Laverne Minaker, who presided over the event. Miss Mary Jane Power both of Picton. He was born a member of the Bank of Commerce staff at Picton, where he had taken an active part in the activities of the young people of the town. He has been transferred to the Bank's branch in the Bannockburn district.

A social time was enjoyed by music, cards and dancing enjoyed. Before departing, three cheers were given for the bride and with the guest of honor in the centre, sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Cold Weather Welcome

The cold weather that began on Monday and continued yesterday was made use to the fullest by everyone. Six inches thick and it is hoped that it will continue until the ice is of sufficient thickness for harvesting. Those who harvested ice had begun to worry, fearing that the ice would not be fit to cut at all as the high winds have continually breaking it up.

Fall Into Bay

While crossing to Adolphustown from Glenora, Mr. Robert McLoon, the foreman, went through the ice and received an icy ducking in the bay. He managed to reach the edge of the ice and held on until help arrived. Fish in the bay are now coming as the mishap had been witnessed by Mrs. John Allen, Mr. McLeod and others on the shore.

The roads in the County are quite bare in places with icy spots in some places. This is very unusual for February.

VOLLEY BALL

In the regular scheduled league game the Y.M.C.A. "B" volley ball team defeated the Y.M.C.A. "A" in two games to one. The "Flyers" staged a come-back in the second game after losing the first by a margin of the Y boys in the final game. Jack Belgrade and Mem's Gibson won two straight games from the Flyers' Bert Hall and Ken's Gibson 15-8, 15-8. As the Kiwanis failed to put in an appearance the Y boys won two straight games from their defaulted it to the Y seniors.

The line-ups for the first two games were:

Flyers—Burdes, Pringle, Reeves Wood, Hannon, Roth.

Senior "B"—Marshall, Barber, Perry, Carman, White, D. Ridley, Brainard, Bowen, Pate, Munnings, McKeown, Thompson, Black.

Referee — Bernstein, Graham, Short, Clarke, Wickerson, Bone.

Letters to the Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:—We, in Belleville hold our municipal election early in December, the newly-elected Mayor and Aldermen assume office in early January. It is customary to have the financial reports on all the city activities placed before the council and before the ratepayers in February to give the citizens the information of the receipts and expenditures of the various departments of our city government, and how our finances have been handled for the year.

Of late this does not seem to be necessary by the ratepayers contributing our municipal affairs. Last year the city was compelled to defend a statement from the Hydro Electric Commission of which he was a member, but we failed to receive in the spring a statement of our Water Works department, a utility, the city has nearly three-quarters of a million dollars ($750,000) invested.

Do you not think, Mr. Editor, the citizens should have at once a detailed statement of our Water Works, but also a statement of the gas department up to the time it was disposed of to the Shore Gas Co., and what became of the money received for this utility.

Then we have our other spending departments of police and fire, Belleville Cemetery, namely Police and Fire Departments, Board of Health, Library, Hospital and Parks Commission. These departments are all working for the benefit of the community, with money supplied by the citizens. It is the duty of the responsible of how their affairs are managed that we may be intelligently electorate and citizenship.

The city of Belleville, I am informed, sold the past month some three hundred thousand ($300,000) debentures. What did they sold at, to whom, and how much did the city lose? The short information the ratepayers should know.

Evidently some of our would-be financiers at the city hall have something to explain. Why was it finished in the summer of 1930 and now selling the debentures in 1932 at a discount of 15 and 20 per cent. less than they could have been sold at in 1930 and 1931?

Mayor Tice, I would suggest you have a statement of your financial condition in all its departments placed before the ratepayers of the city and allay the feelings and misgivings of many of our citizens.

Yours truly,

ANXIOUS RATEPAYER.

LOAN MONEY FOR PLANTS

Farmers Will Be Assisted in Erection of Cold Storage Plants

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10.—Loaning of money to farmers for the erection of cold storage plants is the purpose of a bill which, it is understood, will be introduced at the forthcoming session of the legislature by the Ontario Government. The bill, to be known as the grading and cold storage bill, is said to be intended to give impetus to the movements to place the agriculture of Ontario on a more and more profitable basis for the farmer.

Grading of all farm products on an enlarged scale forms another section of the proposed bill, it understood. It is reported Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, has obtained approval for lending of government money to farmers for their cold storage plants in their districts.

MOSLEMS LOYAL TO BRITAIN

Regard Britain as an Agency For Good

Winnipeg, Feb. 10.—The Moslem people of India are loyal to the British Empire and regards it as an agency for good, said Abdullah Yusaf-Ali, for many years revenue minister of Hyderabad, and one of the leading Moslems in India, on his arrival here yesterday en route to deliver a series of lectures under the auspices of the National Council of Education.

Maternal solicitude is designed by nature to be strong enough to preserve ten children at once from accident.—Bertrand Russell.

Secure Relief By False Pretences

Kingston, Ont., Feb. 10.—Pleading guilty to the charge of obtaining relief by false pretences, Stanley Donaldson and Thelma Donaldson yesterday were given suspended sentence by Magistrate J. Parrell. Mayor W. Lilian Braund, both of the employment bureau, said records showed Tuesday that relief was still progressing as his dead brother-in-law, Hogan, has been securing relief in his mother's help, although his mother was in Buffalo, the court was told.

Girls to Show Ability Before Big Game

As a preliminary to the Queen's vs. T. V. Men's Basketball fixture being played at the Y. Gym. tomorrow evening the St. Michael's and Bridge Street girls will meet in a game which decides the title to the first half of their schedule. After conclusion of the initial half these teams were idle and the game tomorrow evening is being played to break the deadlock.

PIONEER DAYS IN HASTINGS DESCRIBED

Thurlow, Sidney, Tyendinaga Townships Settled First

HARDSHIPS ENDURED

Interesting Paper Delivered By Mrs. L. O'Hara to Madoc W. I.

Madoc—The following paper on "Pioneer Days in Hastings County" was written by Mrs. Lesser O'Hara of Bannockburn, for the Bannockburn Institute, and was read before the Madoc Institute on Saturday, Sept. 26th, 1932 at the home of Mrs. Wallace Ross. A very hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. O'Hara for her very instructive and interesting paper, to be conveyed to her by the Secretary. This was given by a unanimous standing vote.

We hear of many classes of Pioneers. There are pioneers in Science, Medical discovery, Chemical research, Mineralogy and in many other lines, but the pioneers we are going to hear about today are the men who came into this country with an ax in the hand, a rifle and a flint-lock thunder over their shoulders; men who had the true determination lighting their eyes; men with the determination to conquer the wilderness and build homes for themselves where the mighty forest trees covered the ground, mile upon mile; men, strong of body and clear of eye, and hearts of heart; men who were not looking for a white collar job, as so many are today, but were only too thankful to obtain, through hitter cold and scorching heat a chance to clear the land and a livelihood for their families.

Many of these men came from comfortable homes in France, England, Scotland and Ireland; lured here by the fair land they would be had for the asking in this part of the New World, as it was then called. Many of the great grandfathers of those here present, belonged to these hardy adventurers, and their names are known to many who are present at this meeting of the Women's Institute.

First Settlement

The Townships of Thurlow, Sidney and Tyendinaga were the first settled in Hastings County. Usually the lands bordering on the Great Lakes and Rivers were first to be settled on account of being more easily reached by boat and canoe, and the settlers could secure supplies much more than those in the land. The afore-mentioned Townships were settled by the United Empire Loyalists after the war of Independence. After the war of 1812-14, these settlements were just becoming established, when there was an influx of settlers from the old countries to the more northerly townships that had been until then unsurveyed and were open for settlement. These men came bringing their wives with them, and fearlessly faced the forest trails to these new lands just opened up.

There were no roads, no villages where they could purchase supplies, no mills and no post-offices. There were only trails here and there through the forest, but the settlers, nothing daunted, came in one came on foot, back, some on foot, with packs on their backs, but most came by ox-cart with their few possessions stowed away in the cart. There were no clearings, but the pioneers cut down some trees and cleared out a space and the logs thus obtained were erected into what was termed a "shanty". This shanty was roofed over with spruce, that is trees, (mostly basswood) split in half lengthwise and hollowed out, laid closely side by side hollow side up, chinked with moss or clay, and where the side sections joined, on the scoop hollow side down and over the joining, thus making it rainproof. A fire-place was made in one of the shanty ends and a stone chimney put up, and

THE UNVEILING OF THE DOMINION MEMORIAL IN THE HALL OF FAME

When this photograph was taken the Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada, was acknowledging the gift of the Dominion Memorial from Canadians resident in the United States to commemorate the British Anniversary of Confederation. Sitting next to the Premier in the Hall of Fame are Their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Countess of Bessborough, while next the Countess is T. W. W. the house was ready for occupation. The door was, at first, quite often a deer skin hung over the opening until boards be sawn and pegged together.

Called "Myer's Creek"

Where the City of Belleville now stands, was a fine village consisting of one store, one blacksmiths shop, a saw mill and a Post Office. This was called Myer's Creek. This was the place the settlers all went to supplies.

Now, if you will pardon me for speaking personally, I will mention some things my grandmother used to tell her grandchildren. She said a Mr. Zerm was the second settler in the Township of Madoc, and Barney O'Hara was the first, who was the first settler, but my grandfather came shortly after and in those days when they made the journey to Myer's Creek it took them fifty days to make the trip and return. They camped under the ox-cart as night. The first bridge that was built at what is now known as Stenson's Rapids. The only thing the settlers had for sale was barrels of potash which they hauled to Myers Creek and sold. With the proceeds of the potash they bought only stern necessities. If you needed a paper of needles or pins, these had to be purchased at Myer's Creek. I've heard my mother say that the gift of a sewing needle was quite an event in a young girl's life, when she was old enough to learn to sew, and it was carefully taken care of, for its loss usually meant punishment for carelessness.

Thread From Flax

The thread that was used for sewing was manufactured by the settler's wife from the flax grown on the land, and satchelled, and carded, and then on a wheel called a "spinning jenny". The household linen was woven on handlooms. The cloth for shirts and the men's wearing apparel was all made from the wool. The wool was shorn, picked, greased, carded and spun into yarn, then colored and woven into full-cloth and flannel. The full-cloth was used for pure wool and was made into pants, vests and coats for the men and their sweethearts. The men's caps were constructed out of the fur of the beaver, and only half wool, the warp being cotton. The women's and the children's dresses were made of linsey and the underwear were all made of the home-manufactured cloth. Boots and shoes were kept as the wool meant clothing and was carefully saved by the settler's wife and knitted into stockings. Mitts and gloves were also knitted from these yarns, and fulled and fashioned by the settler's wife and daughters.

Please let me call your attention to a Pioneer's home. Imagine a log house, on one side of which is a large fireplace built of stone. The stones on one side of the hearth a goodly pile of pine-knots. A woman and her husband and children sit by the fireplace, each with a pair of wool cards in their hands and there is also a very large basket of picked wool around which the women sit, and each is carding portions of the wool into rolls for next day's spinning. Every once in a while the fire grows dim and the husband places a pine-knot or two on the embers, and in a few minutes the fire flames up again, and the carding goes on again, there is no candle or lamp to give light, (for candles were scarce and lamps were unknown in those days), but the carding goes on, for the basket of wool must be finished before bedtime.

Gorgeous Arn

Now, just a word to the young ladies in the audience. In pioneer days no young woman was considered fit to have given herself the responsibilities of a home-maker, unless she could take the wool from the sheep's back and place it as a shirt on her prospective husband's back. Now, I will ask you, young ladies, how many present could shear, wash, card, spin, and color and weave the cloth necessary to do that? (show of hands please.) Yes, it is only one of the nearly forgotten arts of the Pioneers.

In those days, you did not go to the Baker's for your bread, or to the corner store for your yeast. In the Pioneer home, there was no stove to bake your bread in. The good old fire place was used in the winter and an outside oven made of flat stones and clay in the summer time. The housewife had bake kettles for the fireplace These were quite large, flat, and shallow iron pots with iron lids, and when the dough was ready, it was placed in these kettles. Before this a good fire had been made in the fireplace, and a goodly quantity of hot ashes and coals secured. When the dough was light enough, the kettle were placed on the hot hearth stones and a layer of hot ashes was drawn over the kettles and then a layer of coals and the good lady of the house retired to Providence and her own previous experience to have good well-cooked bread.

Out-Door Stoves Used

In our own weather, the outdoor oven was used A good fire was built in the oven, and it was heated very hot. When some time of the fire and coals were drawn out and the bread was put in, sheet-iron pans and the opening was closed by a piece of iron or a flat stone doing duty for a door. The heat of the oven was tested by the woman putting her hand in the oven for an instant to assure herself that the temperature was just right, it is a long way from the stone oven and the fire-place of pioneer days to our present day of family ranges with thermometers on the oven doors.

The yeast was all made at home by the pioneer housewife, and long before hops were introduced among the settlers a growth that was called "Lungwort" was found on the maple trees was used for making yeast. This was found in abundance during winter and dried. After hops were introduced, the hops were picked and dried and stored in sacks for future use. The sugar supply was made from the maple trees as it is today, only in a much more primitive way. In those days it was wooden spiles instead of metal ones, wooden troughs instead of pails, buckets, and a potash kettle to boil the sap in, instead of a sap-pan or evaporating outfit.

Shoemaker Popular

In Pioneer days the shoemaker was a man much in demand especially in autumn. So pretend with your imagination could picture the shoemaking business. First the leather (cow-hide) was procured from the shoemaker and he took the measure of each person's foot, and began work. Now this shoemaker (for he was shoemaker, tailor, garments and was carried to make the shoes large enough so that growing boys and girls would not be troubled with corns. A child was given one pair per year.

In those good old days that are so much talked about, there were no canning of fruit and vegetables, as we do today. We just never dreamed of. So every one picked their fruit in the fall and dried it, and let tell you it took some picking as it takes about five quarts of fresh fruit to make one of the dried. Corn was dried, also apples and pumpkins, and wild plums were pitted and dried

The milk was not sent to the cheese factory or the cream to the creamery; the butter was all made in the home and a dash churn was used in place of a Rotary Dairy Churn. There were no cream separators either in those early days. The milk was strained into wooden keelers or very small flat wooden tubs to let cream rise, these keelers held about a gallon and they had to be well scrubbed and washed and scalded to keep them in good condition, or the butter would be of poor flavor. All pails were tinned, and called patten pails. Following the keelers came heavy earthen pans for setting the milk. These pans were quite heavy to handle and great care had to be taken lest they be broken.

In those days every scrap of beef an mutten fat was carefully saved and rendered The tallow obtained was used for making candles as coal oil lamps were unknown. A young married woman was careful to take to the new home as many candles as her mother could spare her. Sometimes the supply was limited. I heard a woman say her mother only gave her two candles and they had to last her a fortnight.

Dowry in Livestock

A young woman going to her new home took her dowry in sheep and cattle. If her father was only moderately well-to-do, he gave his daughter two sheep and one cow, or perhaps a calf. If real well-to-do she received four sheep and two cows. Her furniture consisted of a half-dozen home-made chairs, then with the home-made bed she received one bed-stead, one table, one bedding, and a few dishes, and perhaps a home-made cupboard, this was called her "setting-out" and after that she and her husband had to shift for themselves. Imagine a young girl of today not having a shower or kitchen shower, and no sinks and hand sewing and a sewing machine considered an extravagance 1800, and much for the better. The log shanty and log house of those days were soon replaced by modern dwellings of stone, brick or frame equipped with many improvements. The ox-cart and lumber wagon have been replaced by the auto, the railroad train and the airplane as means of travel. The old dash churn has given way to the creameries and the cheese factories, thus lightening the housewife's work. The sewing machine has replaced the hand sewing and a man can accomplish in an afternoon on his sewing machine what even time to take part in the Women's Institute where we learn new things and engage in many discussions for the public good which among other things to vote, something the pioneer wife and mother never dreamed of.

Preaching and Teaching

Now just a word or two about the religious, educational and social gatherings of those early days past. The preacher, as he was called, came on horseback and preached to the scattered settlements, sometimes in the house, oft-times there was a school house, the meeting was announced. He usually came about once a month and the whole countryside gathered to solemnized it-en. Now these ministers were very welcome guests, and men, and they preached the gospel of faith with earnestness and fervency and in those little settlements there grew up a little society that is the forerunner of many a large church of today. Schools were far apart, but children by the score trudged on foot three and even four miles to school to get even the rudiments of an education. The teacher in those days boarded around. He received about eight or ten dollars per month, and a man about fourteen. The subjects taught were few, consisting of reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling. As for amusements, there were few. Sometimes the young girls would have a quilting bee and the boys came in the evening and games were played. Then there were husking bees, when the corn was all gathered in, and all hands took turn in helping their neighbor husk his corn. If a young girl was fortunate enough to find a red ear in the husking she was unmercifully chaffed as she was to have a handsome husband within the year. The men had barn raisings, stone bees, and chopping bees. There is one thing lacking, largely, today, that counted for much in those days. That is the ready good-will of one neighbor to help another. The people were more dependant on each other than now, and the spirit of good-will and helpfulness was expressed toward each other in greater measures.

No Medical Doctors

There were no medical doctors or trained nurses in those days, and the practical nurse was all there was to depend upon. Sometimes there was a man who was called "handy" at setting a bone or treating a severe cut, and these gave their services free. Most people had a large knowledge of herbs and simple treatments, and if you ascertained by the use of these, well and good, if not there was no doctor to prescribe for you, and you passed on, when a little medical help would have saved many a valuable life.

We, descendants of these Pioneers have great reason to be proud of our ancestry We have much to be thankful for in that we have sprung from a race of heroes and heroines, men and women who braved the dangers and privations of a new land; men who were not afraid of hard work, and women who stood nobly shoulder to shoulder with their husbands and who were noted for their purity of life and purity of thought and action. These are the principles they have bequeathed to their descendants. In those days divorce an dits attendant evils were not thought of. It was let us build homes where God was honored and in this the missionaries of all churches are beyond praise, for they kept the lamp of God shining in this new land as Samuel did in the tabernacle.

Friends, let us rise and emulate their study virtues, that our children and children's children may arise and call us "blessed", even as we do our grandfathers and grandmothers, for in so doing we will perpetuate in this vast Dominion a people innocent of heart, loyal to God, to country, and integrity to Christian ideals.

ALLPORT-ROGERS

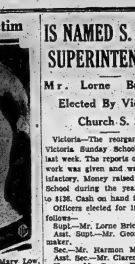
At St. John's Church, Madoc, on Tuesday morning of last week Miss Rodgers, was united in marriage to Stanley Allport, both of Madoc, by Rev. P. Gatley Reynolds, Rector.

The "Busy Bees" of the Junior Institute held their January meeting at the home of Miss Helen Whytock with a large attendance. Miss Helen Whytock presided owing to the unavoidable absence of the President. After the usual business, Miss Jean Nickle gave a pleasing reading. Roll call responded to by "Good Food Habits" was given by Miss Helen Whytock, after which an interesting paper on "Early Pioneer Days" was read by Mrs. O'Hara, was read and much enjoyed Arrangements were made for the forthcoming meeting, after which a delicious treat of apples and candy was served by the committee in charge. Several new members were received.

The members of Oakdale Rebekah Lodge, Madoc, entertained their many friends at a social evening of Euchre and Bridge in their new rooms on Friday evening. About one hundred and twenty-five persons were present and all enjoyed a very pleasant and sociable evening. The Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. G. S. Whytock and Mr. Art Mcraw, and the Euchre prizes by Mrs. D. Golden and Mr. Ambrose Smith. The chair prizes went to Miss May Connor and Mr. Vaughan Jack after dainty refreshments were served by the ladies, a short time was spent in dancing to the music of the excellent new hardwood floor just finished in the new Lodge Rooms. The Oddfellows and Rebekahs are to be congratulated on the splendid entertainment which was prepared, and the roomy and spacious banquet room, modern-ette-ness and kitchen attached. Here entertainments should be held more frequently and look forward to the many entertainments to prospect.

The Guild of St. John's Church entertained a nice crowd at Progressive Euchre at the home of Mrs. Frank Smith on Saturday evening. The game was commenced early to finish early. Prizes were won by Mrs. D. Golen and Mr. J. Bailey.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Haun have returned after spending a pleasant holiday in Toronto.



Rev. P. Gatley Reynolds has returned from spending a few days in Kingston, attending the meeting of the Synod.

All Records of Traffic Broken

Brockville, Ont., Feb. 9— All known records for international traffic at the Canada port were broken today when the ferry Elmer W. Jones experienced little difficulty in carrying out its normal schedule of trips between Brockville and Morristown, N.Y., in spite of a thin coating of ice which formed over night on each side of the St. Lawrence Within the memory of the oldest residents here, conditions like it never existed at this point at so late a date.

The nearest approach was in the winter of 1917-18 when the ice ferry steamer Bigelow closed its season on February 8th.

Injection Victim

This is eleven-year-old Mary Low, who, with her mother and father, was found dead in the secluded house up the outskirts of Highbridge, N.J. Her brother, Frederick, the only survivor of the family, told a Macabre tale of how Dr. Frederick Low, his father, respondent over financial reverses, administered an injection to each member of the family, saying it was an anti-typhoid serum. He then injected the child into his own veins. Only a miracle saved the boy from the fate that befell his parents and sister.
